This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world’s books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that’s often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book’s long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google’s system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google “watermark” you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can’t offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book’s appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google’s mission is to organize the world’s information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world’s books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/
Letters

Pliny (the Younger.), Winifred ...
THE LOEB CLASSICAL LIBRARY
EDITED BY
E. CAPPS, Ph.D., LL.D.    T. E. PAGE, LITT.D.    W. H. D. ROUSE, LITT.D.

PLINY
LETTERS
II
THE LETTERS OF PLINY
BOOK VII
C. PLINII CAECILII SECUNDI
EPISTULARUM

LIBER SEPTIMUS

I

C. PLINIUS GEMINO SUO S.

Terret me haec tua tam pertinax valetudo et quamquam te temperantissimum noverim, vereor tamen, ne quid illi etiam in mores tuos liceat. Proinde moneo, patienter resistas; hoc laudabile, hoc salutare. Admittit humana natura, quod suadeo. Ipse certe sic agere sanus cum meis soleo: 'Spero quidem, si forte in adversam valetudinem incidero, nihil me desideraturum vel pudore vel paenitentia dignum; si tamen superaverit morbus, denuntio, ne quid mihi detur, nisi permittentibus medicis, sciatisque, si dederitis, ita vindicat(urum, ut solent alii, quae negantur.'

Quin etiam, cum perustus ardentissima febre tandem remissus unctusque acciperem a medico
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

BOOK VII

I

To Restitutus

This obstinate distemper, which hangs upon you, greatly alarms me; and though I know how extremely temperate you are, yet I am afraid your disease should get the better of your habits. Let me counsel you then to offer a steady resistance; this is the praiseworthy, this is the salutary course. There is nothing beyond the power of human nature in what I recommend. I myself, at least, while in ordinary health, make a practice of giving my household the following directions. "I hope, that should I be attacked with any disorder, I shall desire nothing of which I either ought to be ashamed, or have reason to repent; however, if my distemper should get the upper hand, give me nothing, I charge you, but by the consent of my physicians; be assured that if you do, I shall punish your compliance, as much as another man would your refusal."

I had once, in fact, a most violent fever; when the fit was a little abated, and I had been anointed, potionem, porrexi manum, utque tangeret, dixi admotumque iam labris poculum reddidi. Postea cum vicesimo valetudinis die balineo praepararer mussantesque medicos repente vidissem, causam requisivi. Responderunt posse me tuto lavari, non tamen omnino sine aliqua suspicione. 'Quid' inquam 'necesse est?' atque ita spe balinei, cui iam videbar inferri, placide leniterque dimissa ad abstinentiam rursus non secus ac modo ad balineum animum vultumque compositi. Quae tibi scripsi, primum ut te non sine exemplo monerem, deinde ut in posterum ipse ad eandem temperantiam adstringerer, cum me hac epistula quasi pignore obligassem. Vale.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

II

C. PLINIUS IUSTO SUO S.

Quem ad modum congruit, ut simul et adfirmes te adsiduis occupationibus impediri et scripta nostra desideres, quae vix ab otiosis impetrare aliquid perituri temporis possunt? Patiar ergo aestatem inquietam vobis exercitamque transcurrere et hieme demum, cum credibile erit noctibus saltem vacare te posse, quaeram, quid potissimum ex nugis meis tibi exhibeam. Interim abunde est, si epistulae non sunt molestae; sunt autem et ideo breviores erunt. Vale.

4
my physician offered me something to drink; I put out my hand, bade him feel my pulse, and returned the cup, though it was just at my lips. Afterwards, when I was preparing to go into the bath, twenty days from the first attack of my illness, perceiving on a sudden the physicians whispering together, I inquired what they were saying. They replied, I might possibly bathe with safety, however, they were not without some suspicion of hazard. “What need,” said I, “of doing it at all?” And thus, with great complacency, I gave up the expected pleasure of bathing, and abstained from the bath with the same inward and outward composure I was going to enter it. I mention this, not only in order to enforce my advice by example, but also that this letter may be a sort of pledge binding me to persevere in the same abstinence for the future. Farewell.

II

To Justus

Are you not inconsistent with yourself, when you assure me you have no intermission from business, and yet at the same time express an earnest desire to see my works; upon which even the idle will scarce bestow some of their useless hours? I will not then break in upon your affairs during this busy summer season; but when the return of winter shall make it reasonable to suppose that your evenings, at least, may be disengaged, I will look over my trifles for something worth showing you. In the meanwhile, I shall be well satisfied, if my letters are not troublesome, as I suspect they are, and therefore shorten them. Farewell.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

III

C. PLINIUS PRAESENTI SUO S.

Tempus est te revisere molestias nostras vel ob hoc solum, ne voluptates istae satietate languescant. Saluta paulisper, quo sit tibi iucundius salutari, terere in hac turba, ut te solitudo delectet. Sed quid imprudens; quem evocare\(^1\) conor, retardò? Fortasse enim his ipsis admoneris, ut te magis ac magis otio involvas; quod ego non abrumpi, sed intermitti volo. Ut enim si cenam tibi facerem, dulcisbus cibus acres acutosque miscerem, ut obtusus illis et obitus stoma-

\(^1\) evocare Bipons, Müller, revocare K.
BOOK VII. iii

III

To Praesens

Are you determined then to pass your whole time between Lucania and Campania? Your answer, I suppose, will be, that the former is your native country; and the latter that of your wife. This, I admit, may justify a long absence, but I cannot allow it as a reason for a perpetual one. Why not then at last return to Rome, that theatre of dignities, preferment, and friendships alike of the superior and lower sort? Are you obstinately bent to live despotically, and sleep and rise when you think proper? Will you for ever go unshod, wear full dress only on holy days, and spend your whole day as you please?

It is time, however, you should revisit our troubled scene, were it only that your rural pleasures may not grow languid from a surfeit. Make your bow at one or two levees of the great, that you may enjoy the return of the compliment with more satisfaction; and mix in our crowd, that you may have a stronger relish for the charms of solitude. But am I not inadvertently retarding the friend I would rouse? It is these very circumstances, perhaps, that counsel you every day more and more to wrap yourself up in retirement. All however I mean to persuade you to, is only to intermit, not renounce your repose. As, if I were giving you a dinner, I would blend dishes of a sharper taste with those of a luscious kind, in order to raise the edge of your palate by the one, which had been chus his excitaretur, ita nunc hortor, ut iucundissimum genus vitae non nullis interdum quasi acrioribus condias. Vale.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

IV

C. Plinius Pontio Allifano⁵ Suo S.

Ais legisse te hendecasyllabos meos; requiris etiam, quem ad modum coeperim scribere, homo, ut tibi videor, severus, ut ipse fateor, non ineptus. Numquam a poëtice (altius enim repetam) alienus fui; quin etiam quattuordecim natus annos Graecam tragoediam scripsi. 'Qualem?' inquis. Nescio; tragoedia vocabatur. Mox, cum e militia rediens in Icaria insula ventis detinerer, Latinos elegos in illud ipsum mare ipsamque insulam feci. Expertus sum me aliquando et heroo, hendecasyllabis nunc primum, quorum hic natalis, haec causa est.

Legebantur in Laurentino mihi libri Asini Galli de comparatione patris et Ciceronis. Incidit epigramma Ciceronis in Tironem suum. Dein, cum meridie (erat enim aestas) dormitaturus me recepissem, nec obreperet somnus, coepi reputare, maximos oratores hoc studii

¹ Allifano add. Müller.

---

₅ See iv. 14, note.

² Not Pliny's correspondent (ii. 17, iv. 17, viii. 20), but the son of the famous orator Pollio, and possibly the child whose birth Virgil celebrated in his Fourth Eclogue.

³ Cicero's well-known character makes it certain that this epigram is spurious. Tiro was his freedman and trusted friend.
flattened and overloaded by the other; so I now advise you to season your agreeable mode of living from time to time with some condiments of a sharper relish. Farewell.

IV

To Pontius Allifanus

You have read, you tell me, my hendecasyllabic poems, and are desirous to know how it happened that a man of my gravity (as you are pleased to call me, as I will say for myself, not a trifler) could fall into this way of composition. To take the account then a good way backwards, I must acquaint you that I had always an inclination to poetry, insomuch that, when I was fourteen years of age, I composed a Tragedy in Greek. If you should ask me what sort of one, I protest I don't know; all I can say is, that it was called a Tragedy. Some time afterwards, on my return from the army, being detained in the Island of Icaria by contrary winds, I composed some Latin elegiac verses upon that island and its sea. I have sometimes tried my hand at Epic poetry; but these are the first hendecasyllabic poems I ever composed; to which the following accident gave birth.

The treatise of Asinius Gallus was read to me one day at my Laurentine villa, wherein he draws a comparison between his father and Cicero; and there I met with an epigram of Tully's on his favourite Tiro. Upon retiring to take my afternoon's nap (for it was summer time), and not being visited by sleep, I began to reflect that the greatest orators have been fond of this kind of composition, and genus et in oblectationibus habuisse et in laude posuisse. Intendi animum contraque opinionem meam post longam desuetudinem perquam exiguus temporis momento id ipsum, quod me ad scribendum sollicitaverat, his versibus exaravi:
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Cum libris Galli legerem, quibus ille parenti ausus de Cicerone dare est palmamque decusque, lascivum inveni lusum Ciceronis et illo spectandum ingenio, quo seria conedit et quo humanis salibus multo varioque lepore magnorum ostendit mentes gaudere virorum. Nam queritur, quod fraude mala frustratus amantem paucula cenato sibi debita savia Tiro tempore nocturno subtraxerit. His ego lectis 'cur post haec,' inquam, 'nostros celamus amores nullumque in medium timidi damus atque fatemur Tironisque dolos, Tironis nosse fugaces blanditias et furta novas addentia flammass?'

Transii ad elegos; hos quoque non minus celeriter explicui; addidi alios facilitate corruptus. Deinde in urbem reversus sodalibus legi. Probaverunt. Deinde plura metra, si quid oti, maxime in itinere temptavi. Postremo placuit exemplo multorum unum separatim hendecasyllaborum volumen absolvere, nec paenitet. Legitur, descriptur, cantatur etiam et a valued themselves upon it. I tried therefore what I could do in this way; and though I had long disused myself to things of this nature, I jotted down in almost no time the following lines upon the subject which had prompted me to compose:

“When Gallus I read, who pretends that his sire
   Had far more than Tully poetical fire,
The wisest of men, I perceived, held it fit
   To temper his wisdom with love and with wit;
For Tully, grave Tully, in amorous strains,
  Of the frauds of his paramour Tiro complains,
That faithless to love, and to pleasure untrue,
  From his promis’d embrace the arch wanton withdrew.

Then said I to my heart, Why shouldst thou conceal
   The sweetest of passions, the love which you feel?
Yes, fly wanton Muse, and proclaim it around,
  Thy Pliny has lov’d, and his Tiro has found;
The coy one so artful, who sweetly denies,
   And from the soft flame, but to heighten it, flies.”

From this I turned to an elegiac poem, which I finished as rapidly; and yielding to the temptation of facility, I added other verses. At my return to Rome I read my performances to some of my friends, who were pleased to approve of them. Afterwards whenever I had leisure, and particularly when I travelled, I made attempts in several metres. At length I determined, after the example of many others, to complete for publication a separate volume of erotic poems; and I have no reason to repent of my resolution. They are much the mode, copies are in everybody’s hands; they are even sung to harp or lyre
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Graecis quoque, quos Latine huius libelli amor docuit, nunc cithara, nunc lyra personatur.

Sed quid ego tam gloriose? Quamquam poëtis furere concessum est; et tamen non de meo, sed de aliorum iudicio loquor; qui sive iudicant sive errant, me delectat. Unum precor, ut posteri quoque aut errent similiter aut iudicent. Vale

V

C. Plinius Calpurniae Suæ S.

Incredibile est, quanto desiderio tui tenear. In causa amor primum, deinde quod non consuevimus abesse. Inde est, quod magnam partem noctium in imagine tua vigil exigo, inde, quod interdiu, quibus horis te visere solebam, ad diaetam tuam ipsi me, ut verissime dicitur, pedes ducunt; quod denique aeger et maestus ac similis excluso, vacuo limine recedo. Unum tempus his tormentis caret, quo in foro et amicorum litibus conteror. Aestima tu, quae vita mea sit, cui requies in labore, in miseria curisque solacium. Vale.

VI

C. Plinius Macrino Suo S.

Rara et notabilis res Vareno contigit, sit licet adhuc dubia. Bithyni accusationem eius ut temere inchoa-

1 delectat M, Müller, delectant rell.
BOOK VII. iv.–vi

accompaniments, and by the Greeks, too, who have been learning Latin out of fondness for my little book.

But what will you think of this boasting? Remember, however, poets have the privilege of raving. Still, I am not giving you my own judgement, but that of others, which, be it just or mistaken I am much pleased with. My one prayer is, that posterity may endorse their judgement, or their mistake, whichever it be. Farewell.

V

TO CALPURNIA

It is incredible how I miss you; such is the tenderness of my affection for you, and so unaccustomed are we to a separation! I lie awake the greatest part of the night in conjuring up your image, and by day (to use a very common, but very true expression) my feet carry me of their own accord to your apartment, at those hours I used to visit you; but not finding you there, I return with as much sorrow and disappointment as an excluded lover. The only intermission my torment knows, is when I am engaged at the bar, and in the causes of my friends. Judge how wretched must his life be, who finds no repose but in toil, no consolation but in dealing with distress and anxieties. Farewell.

VI

TO MACRINUS

A very singular and remarkable accident has happened to Varenus, the consequence of which is yet in suspense. The Bithynians, it is reported,

\(^a\) v. 20.

Adsistebam Vareno iam tantum ut amicus et tacere decreveram. Nihil enim tam contrarium, quam si advocatus a senatu datus defenderem ut reum, cui opus esset, ne reus videretur. Cum tamen finita postulatione Nigrini consules ad me oculos retulissent, 'Scietis,' inquam, 'constare nobis silentii nostri rationem, cum veros legatos provinciae audieritis.' Contra Nigrinus: 'Ad quem missi sunt?' Ego: 'Ad me quoque; habeo decretum provinciae.' Rursus ille: 'Potest tibi liquere.' Ad hoc ego: 'Si tibi ex diverso liquet, potest et mihi, quod est melius, liquere.'

1 Tum legatus Polyaenus causas abolitae accusationis exposuit postulavitque, ne cognitioni

1 quod est melius liquere Bipons, K (ex Ma), q. e. mel. causa liqueret (loquetur) legatus Dpr, q. e. mel. †causa liquere Müller, (q. e. mei iuris) causa liquere Kukula.
have dropped their prosecution of him, as an ill-advised proceeding. Reported, I said; but 'tis no matter of hearsay. A delegate from that province is arrived, who has brought with him a decree of their assembly; copies of which he has delivered to Caesar, to several of the principal persons in Rome, and to us the advocates for Varenus. Magnus, however, whom I mentioned in my last letter to you, persists in his prosecution; and, moreover, is incessantly teasing the worthy Nigrinus. This excellent person, acting as his counsel, was making application to the consuls, that Varenus might be compelled to produce his accounts.

As at this stage I attended Varenus merely as a friend, I had determined to be silent. I thought it highly prejudicial for me, who was appointed his counsel by the senate, to attempt to defend him as a person accused, when it was his business to make it appear that there was actually no charge subsisting against him. However, when Nigrinus had finished his application, the consuls turning their eyes upon me, I rose up, and, when they should hear, I said, what the real delegates from the province had to say, they would be sensible that my silence was not without just reason. Upon this Nigrinus asked me to whom these deputies were sent? I replied, "To me, amongst others; the decree of the province is in my hands." "You may be clear on that point," says he. To which I retorted, "If it is clear to you who are our opponent, it may well be clear to me, and so much the better." Then Polyaenetus, the delegate from the province, stated their grounds for abandoning the prosecution, and desired it might be without prejudice to Caesar's holding an inquiry Caesaris praediiciunm fieret. Respondit Magnus iterumque Polyaenus. Ipse raro et breviter interlocutus multum me intra silentium tenui. Accepi enim non minus interdum oratorium esse tacere quam dicere atque adeo repeto quibusdam me capitis reis vel magis silentio quam oratione accuratissima profuisse.

Mater amisso filio (quid enim prohibet, quamquam alia ratio scribendae epistulae fuerit, de studiis dispu-tare?) libertos eius eosdemque coheredes suos falsi et veneficii reos detulerat ad principem iudicemque impetraverat Iulium Servianum. Defenderam reos ingenti quidem coetu. Erat enim causa notissima; praeterea utrimque ingenia clarissima. Finem cognitioni quaestio imposuit; quae secundum reos dedit.
Postea mater adiit principem, adfirmavit se novas probationes invenisse. Praeceptum est Suburano, ut vacaret finitam causam retractanti, si quid novi adferret. Aderat matri Iulius Africanus, nepos illius oratoris, quo audito Passienus Crispus dixit: 'Bene mehercule, bene; sed quo tam bene?' Huius nepos, iuvenis ingeniousus, sed parum callidus, cum multa dixisset adsignatumque tempus implesset, 'Rogo,' inquit, 'Suburane, permittas mihi unum versum' on the case. Magnus answered him; Polyaenus replied; as for myself, I only now and then threw in a word, observing in general a profound silence. For I have learned, that upon some occasions there is as much eloquence in taciturnity, as in speech; nay, I remember, in some criminal cases, to have done even more service to my clients by holding my tongue, than I could have by the most artful pleading.

To enter into the subject of eloquence is indeed very foreign to the intent of my letter, yet allow me to give you one instance. A certain lady having lost her son, suspected that his freedmen, whom he had appointed coheirs with her, were guilty of forging the will and poisoning him. Accordingly she charged them with the fact before the Emperor, who directed Julius Servianus to try the cause. I was counsel for the defendants, and the case being notorious, and the advocates concerned on both sides of high reputation, it drew together a very numerous audience. The event was, the slaves being examined under torture, my clients were acquitted. But the mother applied a second time to the Emperor, asserting she had discovered some new evidence. Suburanus was directed to hear her application for a new trial, and see if she could produce any fresh proofs. Her counsel was Julius Africanus, grandson to the famous orator of that name, of whom it is reported that Passienus Crispus hearing him one day plead, archly said, "Very fine, upon my word, very fine; but what is the point of it?" This Africanus, who is a young man of good parts but not much experience, having harangued a great deal and exhausted the time allotted to him, entreated Suburanus to allow adicere.' Tum ego, cum omnes me ut diu responsurum intuerentur, 'Respondissem,' inquam, 'si unum illud versum Africanus adiecisset, in quo non dubito omnia nova fuisse.' Non facile me repeto tantum consecutum adsensum agendo quantum tune non agendo.

Similiter nunc et probatum et exceptum est, quod pro Vareno hactenus <tantum> non tacui. Consules, ut Polyaenus postulabat, omnia integra principi servaverunt; cuius cognitionem suspensus exspecto. Nam dies ille nobis pro Vareno aut securitatem et otium dabit aut intermissum laborem renovata sollicitudine iniunget. Vale.

VII

C. P l i n i u s S a t u r n i n o S u o S.

Et proxime Prisco nostro et rursus, quia ita iussisti, gratias egii, libentissime quidem. Est enim mihi periuendum, quod viri optimi mihi amiciissimi adeo cohaesistis, ut invicem vos obligari putetis. Nam ille quoque praecipuum se voluptatem ex amicitia tua capere profitetur certatque tecum honestissimo certaine mutuae caritatis, quam ipsum tempus augebit.

1 versum Dpa, Müller, verbum Mr, Bipons, K.
2 tantum non Stangl, hactenus tacui Sichardus, h. non tacui codd. et edd. (cum cruce Müller).
him to add one line more. [Suburanus refused.] Then, seeing the eyes of the whole assembly fixed upon me in expectation of a lengthy reply, “I should have answered Africanus,” said I, “if he had added that one line he begged leave to do, which I doubt not would have contained all the new proofs we were to hear.” I do not remember to have gained so much applause by any speech that I ever made, as I did here upon making none.

On the present occasion the little that I said for Varenus was received with the same general approbation. The consuls, agreeably to the request of Polyaeus, reserved the case for the judgement of the Emperor, whose inquiry I anxiously await; for the day it is held will decide whether I may sit down in full security with respect to Varenus, or must again renew all my toil and solicitude upon his account. Farewell.

VII

To Saturninus

Though I had very lately made my acknowledgments to our friend Priscus, yet, since it was your desire, I willingly repeated them again. It is with great pleasure I see so much harmony subsist between two such worthy men, whom I tenderly esteem, that you consider your obligations as mutual. For he professes also on his part to receive much happiness from your friendship, and, with a very generous contention, endeavours to rival you in that reciprocal affection, which time, I am persuaded, will augment.

a Negavit ille, or the like, has fallen out after adicere. (Mommsen.)
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Te negotiis distineri ob hoc moleste fero, quod deservire studiis non potes; si tamen alteram litem per iudicem, alteram, ut ais, ipse finieris, incipies primum istic otio frui, deinde satiatus ad nos reverti. Vale.

VIII
C. Plinius Prisco Suo S.

Exprimere non possum, quam iucundum sit mihi, quod Saturninus noster summas tibi apud me gratias aliis super alias epistululis agit. Perge, ut coepisti, virumque optimum quam familiarissime dilige magnam voluptatem ex amicitia eius percepturus nec ad breve tempus. Nam cum omnibus virtutibus abundat tum hac praecipue, quod habet maximam in amore constantiam. Vale.

IX
C. Plinius Fusco Suo S.

Quaeris, quem ad modum in secessu, quo iamdiu frueris, putem te studere oportere. Utile in primis, et multi praecipiunt, vel ex Graeco in Latinum, vel ex Latino vertere in Graecum; quo genere exercitacionis proprietas splendorque verborum, copia figurarum, vis explicandi, praeterea imitazione optimorum similia inveniendi facultas paratur; simul, praecipiunt Ma, Bipons, praeceperunt D, Müller.

BOOK VII. vii.–ix

I regret your immersion in business, as it prevents your devoting yourself to letters; however, when you have settled one of your two law-suits by arbitration, and the other out of court (as you say you expect to do), you will begin to enjoy the sweets of leisure down yonder; and when you are satiated with that, we may hope for your return hither. Farewell.

VIII
To Priscus

The warm acknowledgements of your favours which our friend Saturninus repeatedly makes in his letters to me, afford me inexpressible satisfaction. Do you go on as you began, and cherish intimacy with so worthy a man, from whose friendship you will receive a strong and lasting pleasure. For as he is rich in every virtue, so particularly, in that of constancy towards those he loves. Farewell.

IX
To Fuscus

You desire my sentiments concerning the method of study you should pursue, in that retirement which you have long enjoyed. It is a very advantageous practice (and what many recommend) to translate either from Greek into Latin, or from Latin into Greek. By this sort of exercise one acquires noble and proper expressions, variety of figures, and a forcible turn of exposition. Besides, to imitate the most approved authors, gives one aptitude to invent quae legentem fefellissent, transferentem fugere non possunt. Intellegentia ex hoc et iudicum adquiritur.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Nihil offuerit, quae legeris hactenus, ut rem argumentumque teneas, quasi aemulum scribere lectisque conferre ac sedulo pensitare, quid tu, quid ille commodius. Magna gratulatio, si non nulla tu, magnus pudor, si cuncta ille melius.

Licebit interdum et notissima eligere et certare cum electis. Audax haec, non tamen improba, quia secreta contentio; quamquam multos videmus eius modi certamina sibi cum multa laude sumpsisse, quosque subsequi satis habebant, dum non desperant, antecessisse.

Poteris, et quae dixeris, post oblivionem retractare, multa retinere, plura transire, alia interscribere, alia rescribere. Laboriosum istud et taedio plenum, sed difficultate ipsa fructuosum, recalescere ex integro et resumere impetum fractum omissumque, postremo nova velut membra peracto corpori intexere nec tamen priora turbare.

22
BOOK VII. ix

after their manner, and at the same time, things which you might have overlooked in reading cannot escape you in translating: and this method will open your understanding and improve your judgement.

It may not be amiss when you have read only so much of an author at once, as to carry in your head his subject and argument, to turn, as it were, his rival, and write something on the same topic; then compare your performance and his, and minutely examine in what points either you or he most happily succeeded. It will be a matter of very pleasing congratulation to yourself, if you shall find that in some things you have the advantage of him, as it will be a great mortification if he should rise above you in all.

You may sometimes venture to pick out and try to emulate the most shining passages of an author. Such a contest is, indeed, something bold; but as it passes in secret, it cannot be taxed with presumption. Not but that we see many persons enter this sort of lists with great applause, and because they do not despair of themselves, advance before those whom they thought it sufficient honour to follow.

Again, after laying aside a composition until it is no longer fresh in your memory, you may revise it; retaining several things but rejecting still more; inserting a passage here, and re-writing one there. It is a laborious and tedious task, I own, thus to re-enflame the mind after the first heat is over, to recover an impulse when its force has been checked and spent, in a word, to interweave new parts into the texture of a composition without disturbing or confounding the original plan; but the very difficulty of this method renders it a profitable one.
Scio nunc tibi esse praecipuum studium orandi; sed non ideo semper pugnacem hunc et quasi bellatorium stilum suaserim. Ut enim terrae variis mutatisque seminibus ita ingenia nostra nunc hae, nunc illa meditatione recoluntur. Volo interdum aliquem ex historia locum adprehendas, volo epistulam diligentius scribas. Nam saepe in orationes\(^1\) quoque non historica modo, sed prope poëtica descriptionum necessitas incidit, et pressus sermo purusque ex epistulis petitur. Fas est et carmine remitti, non dico continuo et longo (id enim perfici nisi in otio non potest) sed hoc arguto et brevi, quod apte quantas libet occupationes curasque distinguat. Lusus vocantur; sed hi lusus non minorem interdum gloriam quam seria consecuntur; atque adeo (cur enim te ad versus non versibus adhorter?)

Ut laus est cerae, mollis cedensque sequatur si doctos digitos iussaque fiat opus et nunc informet Martem castamque Minervam, nunc Venerem effingat, nunc Veneris puerum, utque sacri fontes non sola incendia sistunt, saepe etiam flores vernaque prata iuavant,\(^2\)
sic hominum ingenium flecti ducique per artes non rigidas docta mobilitate decet.

Itaque summi oratores, summi etiam viri sic se aut exercebant aut delectabant, immo delectabant exer-

\(^1\) orationes \textit{MDa}, \textit{Bipons}, \textit{KI.}, oratione \textit{r}, \textit{KII}.\(^2\) iuavant \textit{Mr}, \textit{Bipons}, \textit{K}, lavant \textit{Dpa}, \textit{Müller}.
I know your main bent at present is towards forensic oratory; but I would not for that reason advise you always to wield the controversial and, so to say, militant pen. As land is improved by sowing it with various crops in rotation so is the mind by exercising it with different studies. I would have you, therefore, sometimes single out a fine passage of history, and practise epistolary composition. For in pleading one has frequently occasion to use not only the historical, but an almost poetical style for descriptions; while a succinct and chaste style is cultivated by letter-writing. It is well also to unbend your mind with poetry; I do not mean of the long and sustained order (for that can only be achieved by men of leisure), but those little witty pieces which serve as proper reliefs to every degree of care and occupation. They commonly go under the title of amusements; but these amusements have sometimes gained as much fame as works of a more serious nature; and indeed (for while I am exhorting you to poetry, why should I not be poetical myself?)

"As wax by pliancy our praise commands, Submissive shap'd beneath the Artist's hands;
Now Mars' or chaste Minerva's form puts on,
Now moulds the charms of Venus, or her son;
As not alone to quench the raging flame
The sacred fountain pours her friendly stream;
But sweetly gliding through the flow'ry green,
Spreads glad refreshment o'er the smiling scene:
So, wisely ductile, should man's reasoning part Receive the impress of each various art."

In this manner the greatest orators, and the greatest men as well, used either to exercise or amuse them-cebantque. Nam mirum est, ut his opusculis animus intendatur remittaturque. Recipiunt enim amores, odia, iras, misericordiam, urbanitatem, omnia denique, quae in vita atque etiam in foro causisque versantur. Inest his quoque eadem quae aliiis carminibus utilitas, quod metri necessitate devinceti\(^1\) soluta oratione laetamur et, quod facilius esse comparatio ostendit, libentiis scribimus.

Habes plura etiam fortasse, quam requirebas, unum tamen omisi. Non enim dixi, quae legenda arbitrarer; quamquam dixi, cum dicerem, quae scribenda. Tu memineris sui cuiusque generis auctores diligenter eligere. Aiunt enim multum legendum esse, non multa. Qui sint hi, adeo notum probatumque\(^2\) est, ut demonstratione non egeat; et aliqui tam immodice epistulam extendi, ut, dum tibi, quem ad modum studere debeas, suadeo, studendi tempus abstulerim. Quin ergo pugillares resumis et aliquid ex his vel istud ipsum, quod coeperas, scribis?

Vale.

\(^1\) devincti D\(pra\), Bipons, Müller, devinctis M, defuncti K II. (auct. Barth., Gesner).
\(^2\) probatumque M, Bipons, K, pervagatumque Otto, Müller, provocatumque D\(pra\), pervulgatumque Schaefer.
selves, or rather did both. The mind is surprisingly entertained and enlivened by these little compositions, for they turn upon subjects of gallantry, antipathies, quarrels, pity, politeness, and everything, in short, that concerns daily life and even the forensic sphere. Besides, the same advantage attends these as every other sort of poems; that we delight in prose after being fettered by numbers, and more willingly employ what comparison shows to be the easier form of composition.

And now, perhaps, I have more than satisfied your demands; however, there is one thing which I have omitted: I have not told you what books I think you should read, though indeed, that was implied by my telling you what you should write. Pray remember to select with care the standard authors on each subject; for, as the saying is, "though we should read much, we should not read many books." Who those authors are is so clearly settled, and so generally known, that I need not point them out to you; besides, I have already extended this letter to such an immoderate length, that I have curtailed the time, by recommending the course, of your studies. Back, then, to your writing-tablets, and either write something from the hints I have now given you, or continue the composition on which you were already engaged. Farewell.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

X

C. PLINIUS MACRINO SUO S.

Quia ipse, cum prima cognovi, iungere extrema quasi avulsa cupio, te quoque existimo velle de Vareno et Bithynis reliqua cognoscere. Acta causa hinc a Polyaeno, inde a Magno. Finitis actionibus Caesar 'Neutra' inquit, 'pars de mora queretur; erit mihi curae explorare provinciae voluntatem.' Multum interim Varenus tulit. Etenim quam dubium est, an merito accusetur, qui an omnino accusetur, incertum est! Superest, ne rursus provinciae, quod damnasse dicitur, placeat, agatque paenitentiam paenitentiae suae. Vale.

XI

C. PLINIUS FABATO PROSOCERO SUO S.

Miraris, quod Hermes libertus meus, hereditarios agros, quos ego iusseram proscribi, non exspectata auctione pro meo quincunce ex septingentis milibus Corelliae addixerit. Adicis posse eos nongentis milibus venire ac tanto magis quaeris, an, quod gessit, ratum servem. Ego vero servo; quibus ex causis

\[^a\] See vii. 6.
Since, for my part, when I have learned the beginning of a story I long to join on the sequel, as if it were a severed fragment, I think you will likewise wish to know the event of the cause between the Bithynians and Varenus. Polyaenus pleaded on one side, and Magnus on the other. When Caesar had heard both, “Neither party,” said he, “shall have reason to complain of delay; I will undertake to sound the sentiments of the province.” In the meanwhile, Varenus has gained a very considerable point; for how doubtful is the justness of an accusation against a person while it remains uncertain whether he is accused at all? We have only to wish that the province may not again approve of what it is said she has condemned, and repent of her repentance. Farewell.

To Fabatus, His Wife’s Grandfather

You are surprised, I find, that my recent legacy of five-twelfths of an estate, which I had directed to be sold to the best bidder, should have been disposed of, by my freedman Hermes, to Corellia (without putting it up to auction) at the rate of seven hundred thousand sesterces. And as you think it might have produced nine hundred thousand, you are so much the more desirous to know whether I am inclined to ratify what he has done. I am; and will now accipe. Cupio enim et tibi probatum et coheredibus meis excusatum esse, quod me ab illis maiore officio iubente seeerno.

Corelliam cum summa reverentia diligo primum ut sororem Corelli Ruti, cuius mihi memoria sacrosancta est, deinde ut matri meae familiarissimani. Sunt mihi et cum marito eius, Minicio Iusto, optimo viro, vetera iura: fuerunt et cum filio maxima, adeo quidem, ut praetore me ludis meis praesederit. Haece, cum proxime istic fui, indicavit mihi cupere se aliquid circa Larium nostrum possidere. Ego illi ex praediiis meis, quod vellet et quanti vellet, obtuli exceptis paternis maternisque; his enim cedere ne Corelliae quidem possum. Igitur cum obvenisset mihi hereditas, in qua praedia ista, scripsi ei venalia futura. Has epistulas Hermes tuit exigentique, ut statim portionem meam sibi addiceret, paruit.

state upon what grounds. For I wish not only that you may approve, but that my fellow coheirs may excuse me, for having in obedience to a higher duty, separated my interest from theirs.

I have the highest esteem for Corellia, both as the sister of Corellius Rufus, whose memory is most sacred to me, and as she was an intimate friend of my mother's. Besides, I am bound by a long-standing friendship to her husband, the excellent Minicius Iustus; as I was by a very close one to her son; so much so, that I fixed upon him to preside at the games which I exhibited as Praetor. This lady, when I was last in your vicinity, expressed a wish to possess something upon our lake of Comum; I made her an offer, at her own price, of any part of my estate there, except what came to me from my father and mother; for that I could not resign, even to Corellia. So, when the inheritance which comprised farms in that district fell to me, I wrote to acquaint her it was to be sold. This letter I sent by Hermes, who upon her requesting him that he would immediately let her have my proportion of the estate, consented to do so.

You see how fully I ought to confirm what my freedman has done agreeably to my inclinations. It only remains to wish my fellow-coheirs may not take it amiss, that I sold what I was at liberty not to sell at all. They are under no necessity of following my example, since they have not the same connexions with Corellia that I have. They are free, therefore, to be guided by self-interest, a motive in my own case supplanted by friendship. Farewell.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XII

C. Plinius Minicio Suo S.

Libellum formatum a me, sicut exegeras, quo amicus tuus, immo noster (quid enim non commune nobis?), si res posceret, uteretur, misi tibi ideo tardius, ne tempus emendandi eum, id est, dispersendi, haberess. Habebis tamen, an emendandi, nescio, utique dispersendi. Ὑμεῖς γὰρ οἱ εὐζηλοὶ optima quaeque detrahitis. Quod si feceris, boni consulam. Postea enim illis ex aliqua occasione ut meis utar et beneficio fastidii tui ipse laudabor, ut in eo, quod adnotatum invenies et superscripto aliter explicitum. Nam cum suspicerer futurum ut tibi tumidius videretur, quod est sonantius et elatius, non alienum existimavi, ne te torqueres, addere statim pressius quoddam et exilius vel potius humilius et peius, vestro tamen iudicio rectius. Cur enim non usquequaque tenuitatem vestram insequar et exagitem? Haec, ut inter istas occupationes aliquid aliquando rident; illud serio; vide, ut mihi viaticum reddas, quod impendi data opera cursore dimisso. Ne tu, cum hoc legeris, non partes libelli, sed totum libellum improbabis negabisque ullius pretii esse, cuius pretium reposceris. Vale.

1 superscripto aliter Kukula, suprascr. aliter codd., K I., superscr. alio K II.
To Minicius

I have been so much the longer in sending you the petition which I have drawn up at your request for your, or rather I should say our, friend (for what is there that we do not possess in common?) to use if necessary, in order that you might have no time to correct, that is, to spoil it. You will have time, all the same, perhaps not to correct, but at any rate to spoil it; for you hypercritical people throw out the most shining parts of every composition. But you are welcome to do so; for I shall upon some future occasion use these fine passages myself, and win applause from what you fastidiously reject; as for instance in the passage you will find interlined with a differently expressed version. For I suspected you would call everything bombast which is elevated and sounding; I thought proper therefore for your ease, to subjoin a more concise and dry, or rather, a flatter and inferior, rendering; though you, I know (for why should I not rally your refined taste?) will esteem it an improvement. Thus far in order to make you smile in the midst of your serious occupations I have been jocose; but without doubt, I am wondrous serious in what I am going to add: I expect to be reimbursed the charges I have been at in sending a messenger express with this. Now are you not disposed to condemn this petition, not only in part, but in the whole, and insist upon it that you ought not to pay for a thing which is absolutely of no value? Farewell.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XIII

C. PLINIUS FEROCI SUO S.

Eadem epistula et non studere te et studere significat. Aenigmata loquor? Ita plane, donec distinctius, quod sentio, enuntiem. Negat enim te studere, sed est tam polita, quam nisi a studente non potest scribi; aut es tu super omnes beatus, si talia per desidiam et otium perficis. Vale.

XIV

C. PLINIUS CORELLIAE SUAE S.

Tu quidem honestissime, quod tam impense et rogas et exigis, ut accipi iubeam a te pretium agrorum non ex septingentis milibus, quanti illos a liberto meo, sed ex nongentis, quanti a publicanis partem vicesimam emisti. Invicem ego et rogo et exigo, ut, non solum quid te, verum etiam quid me deceit, aspicias patiarisque me in hoc uno tibi eodem animo repugnare, quo in omnibus obsequi soleo. Vale.

a Letter 11 of this book.
b Augustus imposed a tax of a twentieth on all legacies and inheritances. It seems that Corellia, on acquiring this BOOK VII. xiii.–xiv

XIII
To Ferox

You inform me in the same letter, that you do and do not study. I speak in riddles? Yes, to be sure, till I express my meaning more clearly. Well, then, you say that you have bid adieu to study; but such an air of elegance runs through your letter, that it is impossible it should have been written by anyone but a student; or else you are blest beyond the rest of mankind, since you can compose such a finished work in your hours of idleness. Farewell.

XIV
To Corellia

'Tis extremely noble in you to desire and insist so vehemently that I should fix the price you are to pay for my estate, not at seven hundred thousand sesterces (for which sum you bought it of my freedman), but at nine hundred thousand, being the rateable value on which you paid the farmers of the revenues for their twentieth part. But I must desire and insist in my turn, that you will consider not only what besits your character, but also what besits mine; and will suffer me to oppose your inclination in this single instance, with the same warmth that I obey it in all others. Farewell.

property, had to pay the legacy-duty; the literal expression is, “you bought the twentieth part from the tax-farmers.”
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XV

C. PLINIUS SATURNINO SUO S.

Requiris, quid agam. Quae nosti; distingor officio, amicis deservio, studeo interdum, quod non interdum, sed solum semperque facere non audeo dicere rectius, certe beatius erat. Te alia omnia, quam quae velis, agere moleste ferrem, nisi ea, quae agis, essent honestissima. Nam et reipublicae suae negotia curare et disceptare inter amicos laude dignissimum est.

Prisci nostri contubernium iucundum tibi futurum sciebam. Noveram simplicitatem eius, noveram comitatem; eundem esse, quod minus noram, gratissimum experior, cum tam iucunde officiorum nostrorum meminisse eum scribas. Vale.

XVI

C. PLINIUS FABATO PROSOCERO SUO S.

Calestrium Tironem familiarissime diligo et privatis mihi et publicis necessitudinibus implicitum. Simul militavimus, simul quaestores Caesaris fuimus. Ille me in tribunatu liberorum iure praecessit, ego illum

---

\(^a\) The charge of the public treasury. \(^b\) See vii. 8.

36
BOOK VII. xv.—xvi

XV

To Saturninus

You ask me, what I am doing? Just the things you are familiar with. I am immersed in the business of my post;\(^a\) I devote myself to the service of my friends; now and then I study; if the latter were not my occasional, but my sole and constant occupation, I should certainly be more happily (I do not venture to say, more virtuously) employed. It would distress me that your own activities are the reverse of agreeable to you, were it not that they are extremely noble. For nothing can be more worthy of applause, than to be at the same time administering public business and settling disputes between one's private friends.

I was well persuaded you would find our friend Priscus\(^b\) a congenial companion, for I knew the simplicity and politeness of his manners; but I had yet to learn (what I had the pleasure to be informed of by your letter) that he so obligingly remembers the services I had done him. Farewell.

XVI

To Fabatus

Calestrius Tiro, to whom I am bound alike by private and public ties, is one of my most cherished intimates. We served together in the army, and were both Quaestors at the same time to Caesar. He got the start of me, indeed, in the Tribunate, by the privilege which the law gives to those who in praetura sum consecutus, cum mihi Caesar annum remisisset. Ego in villas eius saepe secessi, ille in domo mea saepe convaluit.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Hic nunc pro consule provinciam Baeticam per Ticinum est petiturus. Spero, imo confido facile me impetraturum, ut ex itinere deflectat ad te, si voles vindicta liberare, quos proxime inter amicos manumisisti. Nihil est, quod verearis, ne sit hoc illi molestum, cui orbem terrarum circumire non erit longum mea causa. Proinde nimiam istam verecundiam pone teque, quid velis, consule. Illi tam iucundum, quod ego, quam mihi, quod tu iubes. Vale.

XVII

C. Plinius Celeri Suo S.

Sua cuique ratio recitandi; mihi, quod saepe iam dixi, ut, si quid me fugit, ut certe fugit, admonear.

By a law at first proposed by Augustus, but which on passing with several alterations in 9 A.D. was known as the Lex Julia et Papia Poppaea, it was enacted, amongst other things, "that any person might stand sooner than ordinary for an office, if he had as many children as he wanted years to be capable of bearing such a dignity." (Melm.) See ii. 13, x. 2.
BOOK VII. xvi.–xvii have children; but I overtook him in the Praetorship by the indulgence of the Emperor, who dispensed with my wanting a year of the legal age for that office. I have frequently gone for a holiday to his country villas; he has often recruited his health under my roof.

Tiro is now setting out for Baetica, having been appointed proconsul of that province, and will pass through Ticinum on his way. I hope, nay, I am confident, I can easily prevail with him to turn out of his road to your house, if you should wish to emancipate formally those slaves to whom you have already given their liberty in the presence of your friends. You need be under no apprehension that he will look upon this as a trouble, who would make nothing of travelling round the world for my sake. I beg therefore you would lay aside your excessive delicacy in such matters, and only consider your own convenience. For my commands are as welcome to Tiro, as yours are to me. Farewell.

XVII

To Celer

Every author has his particular reasons for reciting his works; mine, I have often said, is, that if I have overlooked any errors (which I am certain to do), they may be brought to my notice. I am the more

Lit. “by the staff” (vindicta). The ceremony of touching a slave with a staff in presence of a magistrate was necessary to admit the freedman to full citizenship. Cf. vii. 32. To pronounce a slave free in the presence of five friends was one of the informal methods of manumission which only admitted him to the “Latin” franchise. See x. 104, n.

39
Quo magis miror, quod scribis fuisse quosdam, qui reprehenderent, quod orationes omnino recitarem; nisi vero has solas non putant emendandas. A quibus libenter requisierim, cur concedant, si concedant tamen, historiam debere recitari, quae non ostentationi, sed fidei veritatique componitur, cur tragoediam, quae non auditorium, sed scaenam et actores, cur lyrica, quae non lectorem, sed chorum et lyram poscunt.

At horum recitatio usu iam recepta est. Num ergo culpandus est ille, qui coepit? Quamquam orationes quoque et nostri quidam et Graeci lectitaverunt. Supervacuum tamen est recitare, quae dixeris. Etiam, si eadem omnia, si iisdem omnibus, si statim recites; si vero multa inseras, multa commutes, si quosdam novos, quosdam eosdem, sed post tempus adsumas, cur minus probabilis sit causa recitandi, quae dixeris, quam edendi? Sed difficile est, ut oratio, dum recitatur, satisfaciat. Iam hoc ad laborem recitantis pertinet, non ad rationem non recitandi.

Nec vero ego, dum recito, laudari, sed dum legor, cupio. Itaque nullum emendandi genus omitto. Ac primum, quae scripsi, mecum ipse pertracto;
surprised to find from your letter that there are some who disapprove of my reciting speeches at all; I cannot guess why, unless, indeed, they think a speech the one form of composition that ought not to be corrected. I would willingly ask them why they allow (if indeed they do allow) that History may be recited, since it is written in the interests of truth and honesty, not for display? Or why Tragedy, when it requires a stage and actors, not an audience-hall? Or Lyric Poetry, which requires not a reader, but a chorus and a harp-accompaniment?

They will rejoin that in the instances mentioned, recitation has become established by custom. Well, we are not therefore, I suppose, to condemn the person who first introduced the practice? However, I need not labour this point, for certain of our own orators, and the Greeks generally, have been in the habit of reciting their speeches. "But it is superfluous," says someone, "to recite a speech which has already been delivered." Yes, if you recite it exactly as delivered, to the very same audience, and immediately; but if you make several additions and alterations; if you collect an audience composed partly of the same, and partly of different persons, and after an interval, why is it less plausible to recite your speech than to publish it? As to the difficulty they may allege of giving satisfaction by the mere recital of a speech, that is simply a question of how much trouble the reciter takes, and no argument against reciting in general.

For my part, it is not whilst I am reciting but whilst I am read, that I would be applauded; accordingly I omit no method of correction. In the first place, I revise my composition in private, next I deinde duobus aut tribus lego; mox aliis trado adnotanda notasque eorum, si dubito, cum uno rursus aut altero pensito; novissime pluribus recito ac, si quid mihi credis, tunc acerrime emendo. Nam tanto diligentius quanto sollicitius intendo. Optime autem reverentia, pudor, metus iudicant; idque adeo sic habe: nonne, si locuturus es cum aliquo quamlibet docto, uno tamen, minus commoveris, quam si cum multis vel indoctis? Nonne, cum surgis ad agendum, tunc maxime tibi ipse diffidis, tunc commutata, non dico plurima, sed omnia cupis? Utique si latior scaena et corona diffusior; nam illos quoque sordidos pullatosque reveremur. Nonne, si prima quaeque improbari putas, debilitaris et concidis? Opinor, quia in numero ipso est quoddam magnum collatumque consilium, quibusque singulis iudicii parum, omnibus plurimum.

Itaque Pomponius Secundus, hic scriptor tragoe- diarum, si quid forte familiarior amicus tollendum, ipse retinendum arbitraretur, dicere solebat: 'Ad populum provoco' atque ita ex populi vel silentio vel adsensu aut suam aut amici sententiam sequebatur.

a There is a kind of witticism in this expression, which will be lost to the mere English reader, unless he be informed that the Romans had a privilege confirmed to them by several laws which passed in the earlier ages of the republic, of appealing from the decisions of the magistrates to the general assembly of the people: and they did so in the form of words which Pomponius here applies to a different purpose. (Melm.)
read it to two or three friends, and then give it to others to annotate; if I doubt the justness of their corrections, I carefully weigh them again with a friend or two. Last of all, I recite the piece to a numerous assembly, and this is the time, if you can believe me, when I exercise the most rigid criticism; for my attention rises in proportion to my solicitude. Again nothing so much awakens the judgement as that reverence, and modest timidity, which one feels upon those occasions. For do but reflect and tell me whether you would not be infinitely less affected if you were to speak before a single person only, though ever so learned, than before a numerous assembly, even though it were composed of none but illiterate people? Is it not when you rise up to plead, that you are most diffident of yourself, and wish you could alter not merely a great deal, but the whole of your plea? especially if you are to speak in a good-sized court and before a largish attendance of the public; for even the most low and ragamuffin audience inspires one with awe. And if you fancy your exordium meets with disapproval, do you not feel your powers weakened and your resolution sink under you? The reason I imagine to be, that a certain large collective wisdom resides in a crowd, as such; and men whose individual judgement is defective are excellent judges when grouped together.

Agreeably to this notion, Pomponius Secundus (the tragic poet), whenever some particular friend and he differed about retaining or rejecting anything in his plays, used to say, "I appeal to the people"; and followed either his own or his friend's judgement in accordance with that expressed by their silence or applause in the theatre. So highly did he Tantum ille populo dabat. Recte an secus, nihil ad me. Ego enim non populum advocare, sed certos electosque soleo, quos intuear, quibus credam, quos denique et tamquam singulos observem et tamquam non singulos timeam. Nam, quod M. Cicero de stilo, ego de metu sentio. 'Timor est, timor emendator asperrimus.' ¹ Hoc ipsum, quod nos recitaturos cogitamus, emendat, quod auditorium ingredimur, emendat, quod pallemus, horrescimus, circumspicimus, emendat.

Proinde non paenitet me consuetudinis meae, quam utilissimam experior, adeoque non deterreor sermunculis istorum, ut ultro te rogem, monstres aliquid, quod his addam. Nihil enim curae meae satis est. Cogito, quam sit magnum dare aliquid in manus hominum, nec persuadere mihi possum non et cum multis et saepe tractandum, quod placere et semper et omnibus cupias. Vale.

XVIII

C. Plinius Caninio Suo S.

Deliberas mecum, quem ad modum pecunia, quam municipibus nostris in epulum obtulisti, post

¹ Cie. de Orat. i. 33, 150.
rate public opinion! Whether rightly or not, it does not concern me to determine; I do not invite the public to my recitals but only a limited and select audience consisting of persons whom I respect and trust, in fine, to whom I pay the attention due to each as an individual, while I stand in awe of them as a collective body. What Cicero says of composing, in my opinion, applies to this awe: “Fear is the most rigid critic imaginable.” The mere thought of reciting, the entering an assembly, the fact that we turn pale, shudder, and look about us there—all these are so many aids to emendation.

I cannot, therefore, repent of a practice which I have found exceedingly beneficial; and am so far from being discouraged by the tittle-tattle of yonder criticasters, that I beg you would point out some method of correction, which I may add to those I have described. For nothing can satisfy my zeal for perfection. I reflect what a serious thing it is to place a work in the hands of the public; and I cannot but be persuaded that you should revise repeatedly, and in consultation with numerous advisers, a piece that you wish to be universally and for ever admired. Farewell.

XVIII

To Caninius

You ask my advice in what manner you shall settle the sum of money, which you have presented to our fellow townsmen for an annual feast, so as to secure the just application of it after your death.

Nec ignoro me plus aliquanto, quam donasse videor, erogavisse, cum pulcherrimi agri pretium necessitas vectigalis infregerit. Sed oportet privatís utilitatis publicas, mortalibus aeternas anteferre multoque diligentius muneri suo consulere quam facultatibus. Vale.

XIX

C. Plinius Prisco Suo S.

Angit me Fanniae valetudo. Contraxit hanc, dum adsidet Iuniae virgini, sponte primum (est enim

46
Your question proceeds from a truly generous principle, but the answer to it is not very easy. Should you pay down the money to the community, there is a risk that it will be squandered away. Should you settle lands for that purpose, they will probably be neglected, as those of the public usually are. For my part, I can think of no better plan than what I adopted myself. Having undertaken to give five hundred thousand sesterces for the maintenance of well-born boys and girls, I sold at that price to the public agent some land of mine which was worth considerably more; he reconveyed it back to me, charged with a yearly rent of 30,000 sesterces. By this means the principal was secured to the community, at the same time the interest was certain, and the estate itself (as it was of much greater value than the rent charged upon it) was always sure of finding a tenant.

I am well aware that I have disbursed considerably more than the nominal amount of my gift, since the value of this fine estate has been diminished by the encumbrance with which it is charged. But a man must rate public and permanent, above private and fleeting advantages and study how to render his benefaction most useful, rather than how he may bestow it with least expense. Farewell.

XIX

To Priscus

I am deeply afflicted at the ill state of health of my friend Fannia, which she contracted during her attendance on Junia, one of the Vestal virgins. She Quae castitas illi, quae sanctitas, quanta gravitas, quanta constantia! Bis maritum secuta in exsilium est, tertio ipsa propter maritum relegata. Nam, cum Senecio reus esset, quod de vita Helvidi libros composuisset, rogatumque se a Fannia in defensione dixisset, quaerente minaciter Mettio Caro, an rogasset, respondit, 'Rogavi'; an commentarios scripturo dedit: 'Dedi'; an sciente matre: 'Nesciente'; postremo nullam vocem cedentem periculo emisit. Quin etiam illos ipsos libros, quamquam ex necessi-a The house adjoining her temple, where they resided.

engaged in this good office at first voluntarily, Junia being her relation; afterwards also by order of the Pontiffs; for these virgins, when severe illness obliges them to remove from the hall of Vesta, are delivered to the care and custody of some matron. It was Fannia's assiduity in the execution of this charge that occasioned her present disorder, which is a continual fever, attended with a cough that increases daily. She is extremely emaciated, and seems in a total decay of everything but spirits: those indeed she preserves in their full vigour; and in a manner worthy the wife of Helvidius and the daughter of Thrasea. In all the rest she is so greatly impaired, that I am more than apprehensive upon her account; I am deeply afflicted. I grieve, my friend, that so excellent a woman is going to be removed from the eyes of the world, which will never, perhaps, again behold her equal.

How consummate is her virtue, her sanctity, her sobriety, her courage! She twice followed her husband into exile, and once was banished herself upon his account. For Senecio, when he was tried for writing the life of Helvidius, having said in his defence that he composed that work at the request of Fannia, Mettius Carus, with a stern and threatening air, asked her whether it was true? She acknowledged it was; and when he further questioned her whether she supplied him likewise with private memoirs for that purpose, and whether her mother was privy to this transaction? she admitted the former, but absolutely denied the latter. In short, she uttered not a single word calculated to lessen her peril. She even had the courage when her effects were confiscated, to preserve a copy of those tate et metu temporum abolitos senatus consulto, publicatis bonis servavit, habuit t ulitque in exsilium exsilii causam.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Eadem quam iucunda, quam comis, quam denique, quod paucis datum est, non minus amabilis quam veneranda! Erit sane, quam postea uxoribus ostentare possimus; erit, a qua viri quoque fortitudinis exempla sumamus, quam sic cernentes audientesque miramur ut illas, quae leguntur. Ac mihi domus ipsa nutare convulsaque sedibus suis ruitura supra videtur, licet adhuc posteros habeat. Quantis enim virtutibus quantisque factis adsequentur, ut haec non novissima occiderit?

Me quidem illud etiam adfligit et torquet, quod matrem eius, illam (nihil possum illustrius dicere) tantae feminae matrem, rursus videor amittere, quam haec, ut reddit ac refert nobis, sic auferet secum meque et novo pariter et rescisso vulnere adficiet. Utramque colui, utramque dilexi; utram magis, nescio, nec discerni volebant. Habuerunt officia mea in secundis, habuerunt in adversis. Ego solacium relegatarum, ego ultor reversarum. Non feci tamen paria atque eo magis hanc cupio servari, ut mihi

---

"Pliny's hyperbolical way of saying "We shall not look upon her like again." Cf. Tennyson on the death of the Duke of Wellington—"The last great Englishman is low."" very memoirs, which the Senate, over-awed by the tyranny of the times, had ordered to be suppressed; and took with her as the companion of her exile, what had been the cause of it.

How pleasing is her conversation, how polite her address, and (which seldom unites in the same character) how venerable is she as well as amiable! She is indeed a woman whom, when she is gone, we may hold up as a model to our wives; from whose fortitude even our own sex may take example; and whom, while yet we have the pleasure of seeing and conversing with her, we may contemplate with the same admiration as those heroines who are celebrated in ancient story. To me, this illustrious house seems shaken to its very foundations, and ready to fall into ruins with her: for though she leaves descendants behind her, yet what must be their virtues and their exploits, if they are to ensure against this excellent woman dying the last of her race!a

It aggravates my affliction that by her death I seem to lose a second time her mother, that worthy mother (and what can I say higher in her praise?) of so amiable a person! who, as she is restored to us in her daughter, so she will now again be taken from us, and the loss of Fannia will thus pierce my heart at once with a fresh stab, and at the same time tear open a former wound. I loved and honoured them both, and know not which I loved and honoured most; nor did they wish this point decided. Alike in their prosperity and their adversity, my services were at their command; I was their comforter in exile, and their avenger on their return. But I have done less for them, than they for me; and am all the more solicitous for the preservation of this lady, solvendi tempora supersint. In his eram curis, cum scriberem ad te; quas si deus aliquid in gaudium verterit, de metu non querar. Vale.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XX

C. PLINIUS TACITO SUO S.

Librum tuum legi et, quam diligentissime potui, adnotavi, quae commutanda, quae eximenda arbitrarer. Nam et ego verum dicere adsuevi et tu libenter audire. Neque enim ulli patientius reprehenduntur, quam qui maxime laudari merentur.

Nunc a te librum meum cum adnotationibus tuis exspecto. O iucundas, o pulchras vices! quam me delectat, quod, si qua posteris cura nostri, usquequaque narrabitur, qua concordia, simplicitate, fide vixerimus! Erit rarum et insigne duos homines aetate, dignitate propemodum aequales, non nullius in litteris nominis (cogor enim de te quoque parcius dicere, quia de me simul dico), alterum alterius studia fovisse. Equidem adulescentulus, cum iam tu fama gloriaque floreres, te sequi, tibi ‘longo sed proximus intervallo’ et esse et haberi concupisebam.

Et erant multa clarissima ingenia; sed tu mihi (ita similitudo naturae ferebat) maxime imitabilis,

1 Aeneid v. 320.
as it will give me time to repay my obligations. Such is the anxiety under which I write this letter; should some deity transmute it into joy, I shall not complain of the alarms I now suffer. Farewell.

XX

To Tacitus

I have perused your oration, and with all the attention I was master of have marked the passages where I think alteration or excision advisable. For 'tis my habit to speak truth, and yours to hear it gladly—very naturally, since none are more patient of censure than those who have the best claim to applause.

I now expect in return, your observations upon the speech of mine which I sent you. How agreeable, how noble is such a commerce! and how am I pleased with the thought, that posterity, if it shall at all concern itself with us, will not cease to recount in what harmony, what openness, what mutual confidence we lived together! It will be an instance as remarkable as it is uncommon, that two persons nearly of the same age and official rank, and of some literary reputation (for since I join myself with you, I am obliged to speak of your merit with reserve) should thus foster each other's studies. When I was a very young man, and you already in the prime of your glory and renown, I longed to follow your steps, and to be both really and reputedly "next, but with many a length between," to yourself.

There were at that time many celebrated geniuses in Rome; but you of all others (owing to a similarity in maxime imitandus videbaris. Quo magis gaudeo, quod, si quis de studiis sermo, una nominamur, quod de te loquentibus statim occurro. Nec desunt, qui utrique nostrum praegerantur. Sed nos, nihil interest mea quo loco, iungimur; nam mihi primus, qui a te proximus. Quin etiam in testamen-tis debes adnotasse; nisi quis forte alterutri nostrum amicissimus, eadem legata et quidem pariter accipim-mus. Quae omnia hoc spectant, ut invicem ardentius diligamus, cum tot vinculis nos studia, mores, fama, suprema denique hominum iudicia constringant. Vale.

XXI

C. PLINIUS CORNUTO SUO S.

PAREO, collega carissime, et infirmitati oculorum, ut iubes, consulo. Nam et hoc tecto vehiculo undique inclusus quasi in cubiculo perveni et hic non stilo modo, verum etiam lectionibus difficulter, sed abstineo solisque auribus studeo. Cubicula obductis velis opaca nec tamen obscura facio. Cryptoporticus quoque adopertis inferioribus fenestris our dispositions) appeared to me the easiest and the most worthy object of my imitation. I am the more rejoiced to find that whenever oratory is the topic of conversation, we are always mentioned together, and that my name comes up as soon as anyone talks of you. There are some who prefer you to me, as others, on the contrary, give me the advantage; but I care not in what order we are placed, so that we are united; for in my estimation, whoever is next to you stands before everybody else. You cannot but have remarked that in wills (unless in the case of particular friendship to either of us), we are named side by side, and the legacies bequeathed to us are the same in value. Since therefore we are thus closely linked together by our pursuits, manners, reputation, and even by those last instances of human judgment,¹ should all this not tend to enflame us mutually with the most ardent affection? Farewell.
BOOK VII. xx.-xxi

XXI

To Cornutus.

I obey, my dear Colleague, your obliging commands to favour the weakness of my eyes, and accordingly I came hither in a covered litter, in which I was as much sheltered as if I had been in my chamber. I forbear too (with difficulty indeed, however, I do forbear) not only writing but reading, and study only with my ears. By drawing the curtains of my chamber, I make it gloomy, yet not dark, and when in my covered portico, I close the shutters of the lower windows, and by that means enjoy as much

¹ See vii. 31, n. c.

Gallinam ut a te missam libenter accepi; quam satis acribus oculis, quamquam adhuc lippus, pinguis-simam vidi. Vale.

XXII

C. Plinius Falconi Suo S.

56
shade as light. Thus I endeavour to accustom myself to the light by degrees. The bath being of service in this case, I allow myself the use of it, as I do of wine, because it is not judged prejudicial; but I take it with great moderation. I do so, you know, at all times, but particularly now that I have one who narrowly observes me.\(^a\)

I received the pullet with great pleasure, as coming from you; weak as my eyes still are, they are strong enough, however, to discern that it is extremely fat. Farewell.

XXII

To Falco

You will not wonder I so strongly pressed you to confer the Tribunate upon my friend, when you shall be informed who and what he is; and as you have complied with my request, I may now acquaint you with his name and character. It is Cornelius Minicianus, who both in rank and character is the ornament of that province to which I owe my birth. His family and fortune are noble, and yet he pursues his profession with all the ardour of a poor man. He is a most upright juror, a most strenuous advocate, a most faithful friend. You will look upon the favour as conferred on yourself, when you shall have taken a nearer view of this excellent person, who (not to speak in too lofty terms of so modest a man) is equal to all honours and titles that can be conferred upon him. Farewell.

\(^a\) Meaning his wife, perhaps, or his physician. (Melm.)
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XXIII

C. PLINIUS FABATO PROSOCERO SUO S.

Gaudeo quidem esse te tam fortem, ut Mediolani occurrere Tironi possis, sed ut perseveres esse tam fortis, rogo, ne tibi contra rationem aetatis tantum laboris iniungas. Quin immo denuntio, ut illum et domi et intra domum atque etiam intra cubiculi limen exspectes. Etenim, cum a me ut frater diligatur, non debet ab eo, quem ego parentis loco observo, exigere officium, quod parenti suo remisisset. Vale.

XXIV

C. PLINIUS GEMINO SUO S.

UMMIDIA QUADRATILLA paulo minus octogesimo aetatis anno decessit usque ad novissimam valetudinem viridis atque etiam ultra matronalem modum compacto corpore et robusto. Decessit honestissimo testamento; reliquit heredes ex besse nepotem, ex tertia parte neptem.

Neptem parum novi; nepotem familiarissime diligo, adulescentem singularem nec iis tantum, quos sanguine attingit, inter propinquos amandum. Ac primum conspicuus forma omnes sermones malignorum et
BOOK VII. xxiii.–xxiv

XXIII

To Fabatus, His Wife's Grandfather

I greatly rejoice that your strength permits of your journeying to meet Tiro at Milan; but that you may continue to enjoy that vigour, I beg you will spare yourself a fatigue so improper for a man of your years. Nay, I must insist that you wait for him at home, and that you do not stir out of your own house, nor even out of your chamber to receive him. As I love him like a brother, it would be unreasonable he should exact from one whom I honour as my parent, an attention which he would not require from his own. Farewell.

XXIV

To Geminius

Ummidia Quadratilla is dead, having lived almost to her eightieth year. She enjoyed till her last sickness an uninterrupted state of health, with a strength and firmness of body unusual even to matrons in their prime. She has left a will that does her great credit, having disposed of two-thirds of her estate to her grandson, and the rest to her granddaughter.

The young lady I know little of, but the grandson is one of my most intimate friends. He is a young man of singular worth, for whom others than his own kin may well feel the affection due to a kinsman. Though he is extremely beautiful, he escaped every malicious imputation both whilst a puer et iuvenis evasit intra quartum et vicesimum annum maritus et, si deus adnuisset, pater.

Vixit in contubernio aviae delicatae severissime et tamen obsequentissime. Habebat illa pantomimos fovebatque effusius, quam principi feminae convenit.¹ Hos Quadratus non in theatro, non domi spectabat; nec illa exigebat. Audivi ipsam, cum mihi commendaret nepotis sui studia, solere se ut feminam in illo otio sexus laxare animum lusu calculorum, solere spectare pantomimos suos; sed, cum factura esset alterutrum, semper se nepoti suo praecepsisse, abiret studeretque; quod mihi non amore eius magis facere quam reverentia videbatur.

Miraberis, et ego miratus sum. Proximis sacerdotalibus ludis productis in commissione pantomimis, cum simul theatro ego et Quadratus egrederemur, ait mihi: 'Scis me hodie primum vidisse saltantem aviae meae libertum?' Hoc nepos. At hercule alienissimi homines in honorem Quadratillae (pudet me dixisse honorem) per adulationis officium in theatrum boy, and when a youth; he was a husband at four and twenty, and would have been a father if providence had not disappointed his hopes.

¹ convenit M, Bipons, K, conveniret Dpra, Otto, Müller.

See vi. 11.

The ludi (a term which included horse-races, theatricals, and athletic games) exhibited at certain religious festivals were severally organised by the various priestly colleges. What especial ludi Pliny here refers to, is unknown.

He lived in the family of his grandmother, who was exceedingly devoted to the pleasures of the town, with great severity of conduct, yet at the same time with the utmost compliance. She retained a sett of pantomimes, whom she encouraged more than becomes a lady of quality. But Quadratus never witnessed their performances, either when she exhibited them in the theatre, or in her own house; nor did she exact his attendance. I once heard her say, when she was commending her grandson's oratorical studies to my care, that it was her habit, being a woman and as such debarred from active life, to amuse herself with playing at chess or backgammon, and to look on at the mimicry of her pantomimes; but that before engaging in either diversion, she constantly sent away her grandson to his studies: a custom, I imagine, which she observed as much out of a certain reverence, as affection, to the youth.

I was a good deal surprised, as I am persuaded you will be, at what he told me the last time the Sacerdotal Games were exhibited. As we were coming out of the theatre together, where we had been entertained with a contest of these pantomimes, "Do you know," said he, "this is the first time I ever saw one of my grandmother's freedmen dance?" Such was the conduct of the grandson; while a set of men of a far different stamp, in order to do honour to Quadratilla (I am ashamed to employ that word to what, in truth, was but the lowest and grossest flattery) used to flock to the
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

cursitabant, exsultabant, plaudabant, mirabantur ac deinde singulos gestus dominae cum canticis reddebant; qui nunc exiguissima legata, theatralis operae corollarium, accipient ab herede, qui non spectabat.

Haec, quia soles, si quid incidit novi, non invitus audire, deinde quia iucundum est mihi, quod ceperam, gaudium scribendo retractare. Gaudeo enim pietate defunctae, honore optimi iuvenis; laetor etiam, quod domus aliquando C. Cassi, huius qui Cassianae scholae princeps et parens fuit, serviet domino non minori.
Implibit enim illam Quadratus meus et decebit rursusque ei pristinam dignitatem, celebritatem, gloriam reddet, cum tantus orator inde procedet, quantus iuris ille consultus. Vale.

XXV

C. PLINIUS RUFO SUO S.

O quantum eruditorum aut modestia ipsorum aut quies operit ac subtrahit famae! At nos eos tantum

"This great lawyer, descended from the Cassius who theatre, where they would rise up and clap in an excess of admiration at the performances of those pantomimes, slavishly copying all the while, with shrieks of applause, every sign of approbation given by the lady patroness of this Company. But now all that these claqueurs have got in pay is only a few trifling legacies, which they have the mortification to receive from an heir who was never so much as present at Quadratilla’s shows.

I send you this account, as knowing it is not disagreeable to you to hear the news of the town, and because I love to renew a pleasure by relating it. And indeed this instance of family affection in Quadratilla, and the honour done therein to that excellent youth her grandson, has afforded me a very sensible satisfaction; I rejoice also that the house which once belonged to Cassius, the founder and chief of the Cassian school of jurists, is to have a master no wise inferior to him. For be assured, my friend, Quadratus will fill and adorn it with his presence, and revive its pristine dignity, fame, and glory, by making it the home of as eminent an advocate as Cassius was a jurisconsult. Farewell.

XXV

To Rufus

What numbers of learned men does their own modesty or love of repose conceal and withdraw from the notice of the world! And yet when we murdered Julius Caesar, lived under Nero and Vespasian. He was an ancestor of Quadratus.
dicturi aliquid aut lecturi timemus, qui studia sua proferunt; cum illi, qui tacent, hoc amplius praestent, quod maximum opus silentio reverentur. Expertus scribo, quod scribo.

Terentius Iunior equestribus militiis atque etiam procreatione Narbonensis provinciae integerrime functus recepit se in agros suos paratisque honoribus tranquillissimum otium praetulit. Hunc ego invitatibus hospitio ut bonum patrem familiae, ut diligentem agricolam intuebar de his locuturus, in quibus illum versari putabam; et coeperam, cum ille me doctissimo sermone revocavit ad studia. Quam tersa omnia, quam Latina, quam Graeca! Nam tantum utraque lingua valet, ut ea magis videatur excellere, qua cum maxime loquitur. Quantum ille legit, quantum tenet! Athenis vivere hominem, non in villa putes.

1 diligentius Dpia, Bipons, Otto, Müller, diligenter Mr, K.

— On joining the army, members of the Equestrian order entered, without passing through the rank of centurion, on what was called the equestres militiae, of which the successive grades were (1) praefectura cohortis, (2) praefectura alae, tribunatus legiones. (Hardy.)
are going to speak or recite in public, it is only the men who parade their studies that we are afraid of; whereas in truth, those who say nothing about them have so much a higher claim to regard, as they pay the homage of silence to the noblest of employments. These observations I give you upon experience.

Terentius Junior, having blamelessly passed through the military posts belonging to the Equestrian order and held that of Procurator in Narbonensian Gaul, retired to his estates, preferring an uninterrupted leisure to the offices that awaited him. He invited me lately to his house; looking upon him only as a worthy father of a family and an industrious farmer, I meditated such topics as I imagined him versed in; but I no sooner began, than he led me back to professional subjects by his cultured conversation. How pithy his every remark! How pure his Latin and his Greek! For he is so perfectly master of both languages that whichever he uses at the moment seems to be the one wherein he particularly excels. How extensive is his reading! how tenacious his memory! You would think the man lived in Athens, instead of at a farm-house.

To be short with you, Terentius has augmented my solicitude and taught me to fear these retired and so to speak rustic gentry, no less than the most cultivated men I know. I advise you to do the same, for, believe me, upon a careful observation, you will often find in the literary as well as military world, most formidable abilities concealed under a very rusticical appearance. Farewell.
XXVI

C. Plinius Maximo Suo S.

Nuper me cuiusdam amici languor admonuit optimos esse nos, dum infirmi sumus. Quem enim infirmum aut avaritia aut libido sollicitat? Non amoribus servit, non adpetit honores, opes negligit et quantulumcunque ut relicturus satis habet. Tunc deos, tunc hominem esse se meminit, invidet nemini, neminem miratur, neminem despicit ac ne sermonibus quidem malignis aut attendit aut alitur; balinea imaginatur et fontes. Haec summa curarum, summa votorum, mollemque in posterum et pinguem, si contingat evadere, hoc est innoxiam beatamque, destinat vitam.

Possum ergo, quod plurimis verbis, plurimis etiam voluminibus philosophi docere conantur, ipse breviter tibi mihique praecipere, ut tales esse sani perseveremus, quales nos futuros profitemur infirmi. Vale.

XXVII

C. Plinius Surae Suo S.

Et mihi discendi et tibi docendi facultatem otium praebet. Igitur perquam velim scire, esse phantas-
XXVI

To Maximus

The lingering disorder of a friend lately reminded me that we are never so virtuous as when we are in sickness. For where is the invalid who is troubled by the promptings of avarice or of lust? Such an one is neither a slave of love, nor covetous of office; he disregards wealth, and is contented with ever so small a portion of it, as being upon the point of leaving even that little. It is then he recollects there are Gods, and that he himself is but a man; no mortal is then the object of his envy, his admiration, or his contempt; and the slanderous reports neither raise his attention nor feed his curiosity; his imagination dwells upon baths and medicinal springs. These form the sum of his cares and prayers; and he resolves that if he has the luck to recover, his life shall be passed in luxurious ease, that is, in harmless happiness.

I may therefore briefly lay down to you and myself a maxim which philosophers endeavour to inculcate at the expense of many words, and even many volumes; namely, that we should be as virtuous in health as we resolve to be in sickness. Farewell.

XXVII

To Sura

The present recess from business affords you leisure to give, and me to receive, instruction. I am extremely desirous therefore to know your senti-mata et habere propria figum numenque aliquod putes an inania et vana ex metu nostro imaginem accipere.

Ego ut esse credam, in primis eo ducor, quod audio accidisse Curtio Rufo. Tenuis adhuc et obscurus obtinenti Africam comes haeserat. Inclinato die spatiabatur in porticu; offertur ei mulieris figura humana grandior pulchriorque: perterrito Africam se futurorum praenuntiam dixit; iturum enim Romam honoresque gesturum atque etiam cum summo imperio in eandem provinciam reversurum ibique moriturum. Facta sunt omnia. Praeterea accedenti Carthaginem egredientique nave eadem figura in litore occurrisses narratur. Ipse certe implicitus morbo futura praeteritis, adversa secundis auguratus spem salutis nullo suorum desperante proiecit.

Iam illud nonire et magis terrible et non minus mirum est, quod exponam, ut accipi? Erat Athenis

---

a This story is likewise related by Tacitus Ann. xi. 21. (Melm.)

b Lucian (Philopseud. 29) ridicules a story pretty much resembling this, but lays the scene of it in Corinth. (Melm.)
ments concerning spectres, whether you believe they actually exist and have their own proper shapes and a measure of divinity, or are only the false impressions of a terrified imagination?

What particularly inclines me to give credit to their existence, is a story which I heard of Curtius Rufus. When he was in low circumstances and unknown in the world, he attended the newly-made governor of Africa into that province. One afternoon as he was walking in the public portico he was extremely daunted with the figure of a woman which appeared to him, of a size and beauty more than human. She told him she was the tutelar Genius that presided over Africa, and was come to inform him of the future events of his life:—that he should go back to Rome, where he should hold office, and return to that province invested with the proconsular dignity, and there should die. Every circumstance of this prophecy was actually accomplished. It is said farther, that upon his arrival at Carthage, as he was coming out of the ship, the same figure accosted him upon the shore. It is certain, at least, that being seized with a fit of illness, though there were no symptoms in his case that led his attendants to despair, he instantly gave up all hope of recovery; judging, it should seem, of the truth of the future part of the prediction, by that which had already been fulfilled; and of the misfortune which threatened him, by the success which he had experienced.

To this story, let me add another as remarkable as the former, but attended with circumstances of greater horror; which I will give you exactly as it was related to me. There was at Athens a large spatiosa et capax domus, sed infamis et pestilens. Per silentium noctis sonus ferri et, si attenderes acrius, strepitus vinculorum longius primo, deinde e proximo reddebatur. Mox apparebat idolon, senex macie et squalore confectus, promissa barba, horrenti capillo; cruribus compedes, manibus catenas gerebat quatiebatque. Inde inhabitantibus tristes diraeque noctes per metum vigilabantur; vigiliam morbus et crescente formidine mors sequebatur. Nam interdiu quoque, quamquam abscesserat imago, memoria imaginis oculis inerrabat, longiorque causis timoris timor erat. Deserta inde et damnata solitudine domus totaque illi monstro relictæ; proscriebatur tamen, seu quis emere seu quis conducere ignarus tanti mali vellet.

Venit Athenas philosophus Athenodorus, legit titulum auditoque pretio quia suspecta vilitas, per-cunctatus omnia docetur ac nihilo minus, immo tanto magis conducit. 'Ubi coepit advesperascere, iubet

There were two Stoic philosophers of this name, both natives of Tarsus or its vicinity. One was long domiciled with Cato, the other taught Augustus. Which of the two is meant here remains unknown.
and spacious, but ill-reputed and pestilential house. In the dead of the night a noise, resembling the clashing of iron, was frequently heard, which, if you listened more attentively, sounded like the rattling of fetters; at first it seemed at a distance, but approached nearer by degrees; immediately afterward a phantom appeared in the form of an old man, extremely meagre and squalid, with a long beard and bristling hair, rattling the gyves on his feet and hands. The poor inhabitants consequently passed sleepless nights under the most dismal terrors imaginable. This, as it broke their rest, threw them into distempers, which, as their horrors of mind increased, proved in the end fatal to their lives. For even in the day time, though the spectre did not appear, yet the remembrance of it made such a strong impression upon their imaginations that it still seemed before their eyes, and their terror remained when the cause of it was gone. By this means the house was at last deserted, as being judged by everybody to be absolutely uninhabitable; so that it was now entirely abandoned to the ghost. However, in hopes that some tenant might be found who was ignorant of this great calamity which attended it, a bill was put up, giving notice that it was either to be let or sold.

It happened that Athenodorus the philosopher came to Athens at this time, and reading the bill ascertained the price. The extraordinary cheapness raised his suspicion; nevertheless, when he heard the whole story, he was so far from being discouraged, that he was more strongly inclined to hire it, and, in short, actually did so. When it grew towards evening, he ordered a couch to be prepared for him in the fore-part of the house, and after calling for a light, together with his pen and tablets, he directed all his people to retire within. But that his mind might not, for want of employment, be open to the vain terrors of imaginary noises and apparitions, he applied himself to writing with all his faculties. The first part of the night passed with usual silence, then began the clanking of iron fetters; however, he neither lifted up his eyes, nor laid down his pen, but closed his ears by concentrating his attention. The noise increased and advanced nearer, till it seemed at the door, and at last in the chamber. He looked round and saw the apparition exactly as it had been described to him: it stood before him, beckoning with the finger. Athenodorus made a sign with his hand that it should wait a little, and bent again to his writing, but the ghost rattling its chains over his head as he wrote, he looked round and saw it beckoning as before. Upon this he immediately took up his lamp and followed it. The ghost slowly stalked along, as if encumbered with its chains; and having turned into the courtyard of the house, suddenly vanished. Athenodorus being thus deserted, marked the spot with a handful of grass and leaves. The next day he went to the magistrates, and advised them to order that spot to be dug up. There they found bones commingled and intertwined with chains; for the body had mouldered away by long lying in the ground, leaving them bare, and corroded by the fetters. The bones were collected, and buried at the public expense; and after the ghost was thus duly laid the house was haunted no more.

1 in K, om. M, Bipons, K1.
2 deinde pra, Bipons, dein K.
Et haec quidem adfirmantibus credo; illud adfirmare aliis possum. Est libertus mihi Marcus¹ non illiteratus. Cum hoc minor frater eodem lecto quiescebat. Is visus est sibi cernere quendam in toro residentem admoventemque capiti suo cultros atque etiam ex ipso vertice amputantem capillos. Ubi illuxit, ipse circa verticem tonsus, capilli iacentes reperiuntur. Exiguum temporis medium, et rursus simile aliud priori fidem fecit. Puer in paedagogio mixtus pluribus dormiebat; venerunt per fenestras (ita narrat) in tunicis albis duo cubantemque detonderunt et, qua venerant, recesserunt. Hunc quoque tonsum sparsosque circa capillos dies ostendit. Nihil notabile secutum, nisi forte quod non fui reus; futurus, si Domitianus, sub quo haec acciderunt, diutius vixisset. Nam in scrinio eius datus a Caro de me libellus inventus est; ex quo coniectari potest, quia reis moris est submittere capillum, recisos meorum capillos depulsi, quod imminebat, periculi signum fuisse.

74
This story I believe upon the affirmation of others; I can myself affirm to others what I now relate. I have a freed-man named Marcus, who has some tincture of letters. One night, his younger brother, who was sleeping in the same bed with him, saw, as he thought, somebody sitting on the couch, who put a pair of shears to his head, and actually cut off the hair from the very crown of it. When morning came, they found the boy's crown was shorn, and the hair lay scattered about on the floor. After a short interval, a similar occurrence gave credit to the former. A slave-boy of mine was sleeping amidst several others in their quarters, when two persons clad in white came in (as he tells the story) through the windows, cut off his hair as he lay, and withdrew the same way they entered. Daylight revealed that this boy too had been shorn, and that his hair was likewise spread about the room. Nothing remarkable followed, unless it were that I escaped prosecution; prosecuted I should have been, if Domitian (in whose reign these things happened) had lived longer. For an information lodged by Carus against me was found in his scrutore. Hence it may be conjectured, since it is customary for accused persons to let their hair grow, that this cutting of my servants' hair was a sign I should defeat the peril that hung over me.

I beg, then, you will apply learning to this question. It merits your prolonged and profound consideration; and I am not myself an unworthy recipient of your abounding knowledge. And though you should, after your manner, argue on both sides;

a See i. 5.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

ex altera tamen fortius, ne me suspensum incertumque dimittas, cum mihi consulendi causa fuerit, ut dubitare desinerem. Vale.

XXVIII

C. PLINIUS SEPTICIO SUO S.

Ais, quosdam apud te reprehendisse, tamquam amicos meos ex omni occasione ultra modum laudem. Agnosco crimen, amplerctor etiam. Quid enim honestius culpa benignitatis? Qui sunt tamen isti, qui amicos meos me\(^1\) melius norint? Sed, ut norint, quid invident mihi felicissimo errore? Ut enim non sint tales, quales a me praedicantur, ego tamen beatus, quod mihi videntur. Igitur ad alios hanc sinistram diligentiam conferant; nec sunt parum multi, qui carpere amicos suos iudicium vocant; mihi numquam persuadebunt, ut meos amari a me nimium putem.\(^2\) Vale.

XXIX

C. PLINIUS MONTANO SUO S.

Ridebis, deinde indignaberis, deinde ridebis, si legeris, quod nisi legeris, non potes credere. Est via Tiburtina intra primum lapidem (proxime adnotavi)

\(^1\) me add. Bipons, Mommsen, Müller.

\(^2\) nimium putem a, Bipons, K, nimium autem M, nimis unquam Dp, Müller.

76
BOOK VII. xxvii.–xxix

yet I hope you will throw your weightiest reasons into one scale, lest you should dismiss me in suspense and uncertainty, whereas I consult you on purpose to determine my doubts. Farewell.

XXVIII
To Septicius

There are, you say, who have condemned me to you, as being upon all occasions too lavish in commendation of my friends. I own, nay, welcome the impeachment; for can there be a nobler error than an excess of benevolence? Yet, who are these that know my friends better than I do myself? However, grant there are any such, why will they grudge me the happiest of mistakes? For supposing my friends are not what I proclaim them, nevertheless I am happy in believing they are. Then let these critics transfer their inauspicious attentions to others; there lack not people who call it sound judgement to disparage their friends; but never will they persuade me into thinking I love mine too well. Farewell.

XXIX
To Montanus

It will raise your laughter first, and then your indignation, and then your laughter again, when you read a fact you could not credit without reading. In the Tiburtine road, before you come to the first mile-stone, stands (as I lately observed) the monu-
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

monumentum Pallantis ita inscriptum: 'Huic senatus ob fidem pietatemque erga patronos ornamenta praetoria decrevit et sestertium centies quinquagies, cuius honore contentus fuit.'

Equidem numquam sum miratus, quae saepius a fortuna quam a iudicio proficiscerentur; maxime tamen hic me titulus admonuit, quam essent mimica et inepta, quae interdum in hoc caenum, in\textsuperscript{1} has sordes abicerentur, quae denique ille furcifer et recipere ausus est et recusare atque etiam ut moderationis exemplum posteris prodere. Sed quid indignor? Ridere satius, ne se magnum aliquid adeptos putent, qui huc felicitate perveniunt, ut rideantur. Vale.

XXX

C. PLINIUS GENITORI SUO S.

Torqueor, quod discipulum, ut scribis, optimae spei amisisti, cuius et valetudine et morte impedita studia tua quidni sciam, cum sis omnium officiorum observantissimus, cumque omnes, quos probas, effusissime diligas!

Me huc quoque urbana negotia persecuntur. Non \textsuperscript{1} in add. Dpræ, Bipons, Müller, om. M, K.

\textsuperscript{a} Freedman and favourite of the Emperor Claudius. The special insignia worn by triumphing generals, consuls, ment of Pallas, with the following inscription: "The Senate decreed to him, as a reward for his fidelity and affection to his patrons, the insignia of a praetor, together with the sum of fifteen million sesterces; but he was contented with accepting only the honour."

I am not indeed apt to wonder at distinctions of this sort, which oftener proceed from Fortune than judgement; but I was forcibly reminded by this inscription, how farcical and ridiculous are those honours, which are thus sometimes thrown away upon dirt and infamy; which such a rascal in short, had the assurance both to accept and to refuse, and then set himself forth to posterity as an example of moderation! Yet why should it raise my indignation? rather let me laugh at it, that those persons may not flatter themselves they have obtained any thing very considerable, whose success procures them nothing more than ridicule. Farewell.

XXX

To GENITOR

I am extremely concerned that, as your letter informs me, you have lost a most promising pupil. Can I want to be informed that his sickness and death must have interrupted your studies, knowing as I do, with what exactness you fill up every duty of life, and how unlimited your affection is to all those whom you esteem?

As for myself, the busy cares of town-life follow me even hither; for I am not out of the reach of and praetors were freely bestowed honoris causa under the Empire.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

desunt enim, qui me iudicem aut arbitrum faciant. Accedunt querellae rusticorum, qui auribus meis post longum tempus suo iure abutuntur. Instat et necessitas agrorum locandorum perquam molesta; adeo rarum est invenire idoneos conductores.

Quibus ex causis precario studeo, studeo tamen; nam et scribo aliquid et lego; sed, cum lego, ex comparatione sentio, quam male scribam, licet tu mihi bonum animum facias, qui libellos meos de ultione Helvidi orationi Demosthenis, κατὰ Μειδίου confers; quam sane, cum componerem illos, habui in manibus, non ut aemularer (improbum enim ac paene furiosum), sed tamen imitarer et sequerer, quantum aut diversitas ingeniorum, maximi et minimi, aut causae dissimilitudo pateretur. Vale.

XXXI

C. PLINIUS CORNUTO SUO S.

Claudius Pollio amari a te cupit dignus hoc ipso, quod cupit, deinde, quod ipse te diligit. Neque enim fere quisquam exigit istud, nisi qui facit. Vir alioqui rectus, integer, quietus ac paene ultra modum, si quis tamen ultra modum, verecundus.

80 people who oblige me to act either as their judge, or their arbitrator. To this I must add; not only the complaints of the rustics, who claim to weary my ears in virtue of my having been so long absent, but the necessity of letting out my farms; an affair which gives me much trouble, as it is exceedingly difficult to find proper tenants.

For these reasons I can only study by snatches; still, however, I study. For I both read and compose; but my reading teaches me, by comparison, with what ill success I attempt to be an author myself. Though indeed you give me great encouragement, when you compare the piece I wrote on the avenging of Helvidius, to the oration of Demosthenes against Midias. I confess I had that speech in my hands when I composed mine; not that I pretend to rival it (that would be an excessive and mad attempt indeed), but I endeavoured, I own, to imitate it, as far as the difference of our subjects would admit, and as nearly as a genius of the lowest rank can copy one of the highest. Farewell.

XXXI

To Cornutus

Claudius Pollio is desirous of your affection, and he deserves it not only for that reason, but because he gives you his! (few, you know, ever demand that boon without bestowing it). Apart from this, he is an upright, honest, good-natured man, and modest almost beyond measure; if indeed it is possible to be so.

a See ix. 13.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Hunc, cum simul militaremus, non solum ut commilito inspexi. Praeerat alae militari; ego iussus a legato consulari rationes alarum et cohortium excutere ut magnam quorundam foedamque avaritiam et neglegentiam paremita huius summam integritatem, sollicitam diligentiam inveni. Postea promotus ad amplissimas procurationes nulla occasione corruptus ab insito abstinentiae amore deflexit; numquam secundis rebus intumuit, numquam officiorum varietate continuam laudem humanitatis infregit eademque firmitate animi laboribus suffecit, qua nunc otium patitur. Quod quidem paulisper cum magna sua laude intermisit et posuit a Corellio nostro ex liberalitate imperatoris Nervae emendis dividendisque agris adiutor adsumptus. Etenim qua gloria dignum est summo viro in tanta eligendi faculitate praecipue placuisse!

Idem quam reverenter, quam fideliter amicos colat, multorum supremis iudiciis, in his Anni Bassi, gravissimi civis, credere potes, cuius memoriam tam grata praedicatione prorogat et extendit, ut librum de vita eius (nam studia quoque sicut alias artes bonas veneratur) ediderit. Pulchrum istud et raritate ipsa probandum, cum plerique hactenus defunctorum meminerint, ut querantur.

\[ ^a \] Alae, the cavalry divisions (lit. wings) of a Roman army; cohortes, the auxiliary troops, both horse and foot.

\[ ^b \] Nerva restored to the Romans all that Domitian had plundered them of, and gave a very large sum to be laid out in the purchase of lands for the support of decayed families. (Melm.)

\[ ^c \] i.e. from their leaving him legacies. Such complimentary bequests are several times cited by Cicero as a testimonial to the recipient's character; cf. vii. 20.
We served in the army together, and I had a nearer view of his character, than merely what his being my comrade gave me. He commanded a division of horse, when I was appointed by the consular Legate to examine the accounts of the cavalry and the cohorts; and as I found disgusting rapacity and corresponding neglect in some officers, so I found the highest integrity and exactest care in him. He was afterwards promoted to high administrative offices; yet no temptations could turn aside the innate bias of his soul from honesty, no prosperity swell his breast; he preserved in all the variety of posts through which he passed, an unbroken reputation of humanity; and discharged his toilsome duties in the same resolved spirit as he now supports his want of occupation. He once indeed quitted his retirement for a short interval, with great applause, being chosen by our friend Corellius as his coadjutor in purchasing and allotting lands under the benefaction of the Emperor Nerva.

And could there be a greater honour than to be selected by so eminent a man, who had, moreover, such an extensive range of choice?

You may believe how faithfully he reveres the ties of friendship, from the dying testimony of many persons, including that most respectable citizen, Annius Bassus. Pollio (who venerates letters as well as every other valuable art) keeps alive, and spreads, the memory of Bassus by the most grateful eulogy, insomuch that he has published a memoir of him. A fine action, and the more commendable from its very uncommonness, since men in general confine their recollection of the dead to what they can complain about.
Hunc hominem adpetentissimum tui, mihi crede, complectere, adprehende, immo et invita ac sic ama, tamquam gratiam referas. Neque enim obligandus, sed remunerandus est in amoris officio, qui prior coepit. Vale.

XXXII

C. Plinius Fabato Prosocero Suo S.

Delector iucundum tibi fuisses Tironis mei adventum; quod vero scribis oblata occasione proconsulis plurimos manumissos, unice laetor. Cupio enim patriam nostram omnibus quidem rebus augeri, maxime tamen civium numero; id enim oppidis firmissimum ornamentum. Illud etiam me non ut ambitiosum, sed tamen iuvat, quod adicis te meque et gratiarum actione et laude celebratos. Est enim, ut Xenophon ait, ἤδιστον ἥκονσμα ἐπαινος, utique si te mereri putes. Vale.

XXXIII

C. Plinius Tacito Suo S.

Aurator nec me fallit augurium historias tuas immortales futuras; quo magis illis (ingenue fatebor)

BOOK VII. xxxi.–xxxiii

Receive then this worthy man, greatly desirous (believe me) of your friendship, with the embraces of the warmest affection; nay, court and love him as though you were returning a favour; for he who makes the first amicable advances, is not to be obliged, but repaid. Farewell.

XXXII

TO FABATUS

I am charmed that the advent of my friend Tiro was agreeable to you. But I especially rejoice that (as your letter informs me) you took the opportunity of a proconsul's presence to manumit a large number of slaves. For as I wish to see our country improved by every possible method, so particularly by an increase of citizens, as that is the strongest ornament her townships can receive. I am pleased too (not out of a spirit of vanity, however, I confess I am pleased) with what you add, that you and I were extolled both in the speech of thanks and in the encomiums which were delivered upon this occasion; for as Xenophon observes "praise is the sweetest hearing," especially when we think we deserve it. Farewell.

XXXIII

TO TACITUS

I strongly presage (and I am persuaded not falsely) that your histories will be immortal. I ingenuously own therefore, I so much the more covet

a See vii. 16.
inseri cupio. Nam si esse nobis curae solet, ut facies nostra ab optimo quoque artifice exprimatur, nonne debemus optare, ut operibus nostris similis tui scriptor praedicatorque contingat? Demonstrò ergo, quamquam diligentiam tuam fugere non possit, cum sit in publicis actis, demonstrò tamen, quo magis credas, iucundum mihi futurum, si factum meum, cuius gratia periculo crevit, tuo ingenio, tuo testimonio ornaveris.

Dederat me senatus cum Herennio Senecione advocatum provinciae Baeticae contra Baebium Massam damnatoque Massa censuerat, ut bona eius publice custodirentur. Senecio, cum explorasset consules postulationibus vacaturos, convenit me et ‘Qua concordia’ inquit ‘iniunctam nobis accusationem exsecuti sumus, hac adeamus consules petamusque, ne bona dissipari sinant, quorum esse in custodia debent.’ Respondi: ‘Cum simus advocati a senatu dati, dispice, num peractas putes partes nostras senatus cognitione finita.’ Et ille: ‘Tu, quem voles, tibi terminum statues, cui nulla cum provincia necessitudo nisi ex beneficio tuo et hoc recenti; ipse et natus ibi et quaestor in ea fui.’ Tum ego: ‘Si fixum tibi istud ac deliberatum, a Pending restitution to the provincials of the moneys extorted by Massa in his governorship.

a place in them. If we are generally careful to have our faces taken by the best artists, ought we not to desire that our actions may be celebrated by an author like yourself? In view to this, I acquaint you with the following affair, which though it cannot have escaped your attention, as it is mentioned in the journals of the public, still I acquaint you with it, that you may be the more sensible how agreeable it will be to me, that my action, greatly heightened by the hazard which attended it, should receive an additional lustre from the testimony of so bright a genius.

The Senate had appointed Herennius Senecio and myself as counsel for the province of Baetica, in their prosecution of Baebius Massa. He was convicted; and the House ordered his effects to be placed under official custody. Senecio, having learnt that the consuls were about to sit to hear complaints, came to me, and proposed that with the same unanimity with which we had conducted the prosecution enjoined us, we should lodge an application with the consuls, that they would not suffer Massa's effects to be dissipated by those whose duty it was to guard them. I answered, "As we were appointed counsel in this cause by the Senate, you had better consider whether we have not done our part, now the Senate's inquiry is over." "You are at liberty," said he, "to prescribe what bounds you please to yourself, who have no particular connections with the province, except what arise from your late services to them; but it is not so with me, who was born there, and enjoyed the post of Quaestor among them." If such, I told him, was his determined resolution, I was ready to attend him, that whatever resentment sequar te, ut, si qua ex hoc invidia, non tua tantum sit.'

Venimus ad consules; dicit Senecio, quae res ferebat, aliqua subiungo. Vixdum conticueramus, et Massa questus Senecionem non advocati fidem, sed inimici amaritudinem implesse impietatis reum postulat. Horror omnium; ego autem 'Vereor' inquam 'clarissimi consules, ne mihi Massa silentio suo praevirationem obiecerit, quod non et me reum postulavit.' Quae vox et statim excepta et postea multo sermone celebrata est. Divus quidem Nerva (nam privatus quoque attendebat his, quae recte in publico fierent) missis ad me gravissimis litteris non mihi solum, verum etiam saeculo est gratulatus, cui exemplum (sic enim scripsit) simile antiquis contigisset.

Haec, utcunque se habent, notiora, clariora, maior tu facies; quamquam non exigo, ut excedas actae rei modum. Nam nec historia debet egredi veritatem, et honeste factis veritas sufficit. Vale.
should be the consequence of this affair, it might not fall singly upon himself.

We went to the consuls; Senecio spoke what was proper to the occasion, to which I subjoined some remarks. We had scarce ended, when Massa, complaining that Senecio had not acted from loyalty to his clients but bitter animosity against himself, desired leave to prosecute him for high treason. The whole assembly was struck with consternation. I immediately rose up; “Most noble consuls,” said I, “I am afraid that Massa has tacitly charged me with betrayal of my client’s interests, since he has not asked leave to prosecute me likewise.” This speech was instantly caught up, and soon afterwards was the talk of the town. The late Emperor Nerva (who while still a subject remarked every worthy action which passed in public) wrote a most impressive letter to me, congratulating not only me, but the age, which had been vouchsafed an example so much in the spirit (as he was pleased to call it) of the ancients.

But be my action what it may, ’tis yours to heighten and spread the lustre of it; not that I require you to exceed the bounds of reality. For History ought not to depart from the truth, and the truth is all the praise that virtuous actions need. Farewell.

* Under Domitian’s reign of terror, such a charge was often brought on the most frivolous pretexts.
BOOK VIII
LIBER OCTAVUS

I

C. Plinius Septicio Suo S.

II

C. Plinius Calvisio Suo S.

Alii in praedia sua profisciscuntur, ut locupletiores revertantur, ego, ut pauperior. Vendideram vinde-
BOOK VIII

I

To Septicius

I had a good journey hither, excepting only that some of my servants were disordered by the violent heats. Poor Encolpius, my reader, who is the soul of my studies and amusements, had his throat so much irritated by the dust as to spit blood; an accident that will prove as grievous to me, as to himself, should he be thereby rendered unfit for those literary services which are his prime recommendation. Where, in that event, shall I find one to read, and love, my works as he does; or whose voice will be so grateful to my ears? But the gods seem to favour our better hopes, as his bleeding is stopped and his pain abated. Moreover, he is a temperate man; no solicitude is wanting on my part; no care on that of his physicians. This, with a wholesome air, change to the country, and complete quiet, promises to contribute as much to his health as to his repose. Farewell.

II

To Calvisius

Other people visit their estates in order to recruit their purses; whilst I go to mine only to return so much the poorer. I had sold my vintage to the Itaque omnibus quidem, ne quis 'Mihi non donatus abiret,' 1 partem octavam pretii, quo quis emerat, concessi; deinde his, qui amplissimas summas emptionibus occupaverant, separatim consuli. Nam et me magis iuverant et maius ipsi fecerant damnum. Igitur his, qui pluris quam decem milibus emerant, ad illam communem et quasi publicam octavam addidi decumam eius summae, qua decem milia exessrerant. Vereor, ne parum expresserim; apertius calculos ostendam. Si qui forte quindecim milibus emerant, hi et quindecim milium octavam et quinque milium decumam tulerunt.

Praeterea, cum reputarem quosdam ex debito aliquantum, quosdam aliquid, quosdam nihil reposuisse; nequaquam verum arbitrabar, quos non aequasset fides solutionis, hos benignitate remissionis acquare. Rursus ergo iis, qui solverant, eius, quod

1 Aeneid v. 305.

a A doctrine maintained by the Stoics.
merchants, who were eager to purchase it, encouraged by the price it then bore, and what it was probable it would rise to; however they were disappointed in their expectations. To have made the same abatement to them all, would have been the easy, but not the equitable, course. Now the noblest part, according to my estimate, is to pursue justice in one’s domestic as well as public conduct; in minute as in great affairs; and in our own, as well as in other men’s concerns. For if “all sins are equal,” a so are all meritorious actions.

Accordingly, I remitted to all in general one-eighth part of the price they had agreed to give me, that none “without my largesse might depart”; next, I made separate provision for those who had invested large sums in their purchase; since they had not only contributed more to my profit, but lost more heavily. To those, therefore, who had bought to the value of more than ten thousand sesterces, I remitted (over and beside the general and, so to speak, public eighth) a tenth part of what they had paid above that sum. I don’t know whether I express myself clearly enough; so I will set out my reckoning more plainly. Suppose a man had purchased to the value of fifteen thousand sesterces, he got back one-eighth part of that amount, plus one-tenth of five thousand sesterces.

Besides, considering that some had paid over either large or small instalments of the purchase-money, whilst others had paid nothing; I thought it would be not at all fair to favour with the same remission those who had discharged their debt in varying proportions. To those therefore who had made any payments, I further returned a tenth part solverant, decumam remisi. Per hoc enim aptissime et in praeteritum singulis pro cuiusque merito gratia referri, et in futurum omnes cum ad emendum tum etiam ad solvendum allici videbantur.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Magno mihi seu ratio haec seu facilitas stetit; sed fuit tanti. Nam regione tota et novitas remissionis et forma laudatur. Ex ipsis etiam, quos non una, ut dicitur, pertica, sed distincte gradatimque tractavi, quanto quis melior et probior, tanto mihi obligator abiiit expertus non esse apud me, ἐν δὲ ἰὴ τιμὴ ἡμὲν κακὸν ἢδὲ καὶ ἐσθλὸν.¹ Vale.

III

C. PLINIIUS SPARSO SUO S.

LIBRUM, quem novissime tibi misi, ex omnibus meis vel maxime placere significas. Est eadem opinio cuiusdam eruditissimi. Quo magis adducor, ut neutrum falli putem, quia non est credibile utrumque falli, et quia tam blandior mihi. Volo enim proxima quaeque absolutissima videri et ideo iam nunc contra istum librum faveo orationi, quam nuper in publicum upon each of the sums so paid. This was a neat way of my returning thanks to each of them for their past conduct, according to his respective deserts; and at the same time tempting them as a body, not only to deal with me for the future, but to be forward in their payments.

¹ Iliad ix. 319.

This instance of my good nature or my judgement (call it which you please) was a very considerable expense to me. However, I found my account in it; for all the country-side extols both this novel rebate, and the method in which I conducted it. Even those whom I did not measure (as they say) by the same ell, but distinguished according to their several degrees, thought themselves obliged to me, in proportion to the integrity of their dispositions; and went away pleased with having experienced, that not with me

"The brave and mean like honour find."

Farewell.

III

To SPARSUS

You tell me that of all my works, the last I sent you has your decided preference. The same opinion has been expressed by a certain most learned friend; and I am the more persuaded to think you are both in the right, not only as 'tis incredible you should both be in the wrong, but because I am much given to flatter myself. For I always wish my latest performance to be thought the most finished; and so a speech I have just published is already more my dedi communicaturus tecum, ut primum diligentem tabellarium invenero. Erexi exspectationem tuam, quam vereor ne destituat oratio in manus sumpta. Interim tamen tamquam placitum (et fortasse placebit) exspecta. Vale.

IV

C. PLINIUS CANINIO SUO S.

Optime facis, quod bellum Dacicum scribere paras. Nam quae tam recens, tam copiosa, tam lata, quae denique tam poētica et quamquam in verissimis rebus tam fabulosa materia? Dices immissa terris nova flumina, novos pontes fluminibus iniectos, insessa castris montium abrupta, pulsum regia, pulsum etiam vita regem nihil desperantem; super haec, actos bis triumphos, quorum alter ex invicta gente primus, alter novissimus fuit.

Una, sed maxima difficultas, quod haec aequare dicendo arduum, immensum etiam tuo ingenio, quamquam altissime adsurgat et amplissimis operibus increscat. Non nullus et in illo labor, ut barbara et \footnote{a} Trajan fought two campaigns in Dacia, which he annexed 105 A.D.

\footnote{b} Trajan diverted from its course the river Sargetia, on a report that the treasures of Decebalus, the Dacian king, were concealed under its bed; and he built a great bridge across the Danube.
favourite than the one you have. I will send it you as soon as I can meet with a trustworthy post-carrier. And now I have raised your expectations of this piece I fear you will be disappointed when it comes to your hands. In the meanwhile, however, pray expect it as something that will please you; and who knows but it may? Farewell.

IV

To Caninius

I greatly approve your design of writing a poem upon the Dacian war, for where could you have chosen a subject so new, so full of events, so extensive, and so poetical? a subject which while it has all the marvellous of fiction, has all the solidity of truth. You will sing of rivers turned into new channels, and rivers bridged for the first time, of camps pitched upon craggy mountains, and of a king superior to adversity, though forced to abandon his capital city and even his life. You will describe, too, the victor’s double triumph, one of which was the first that was ever gained over that nation, ’till then unsubdued, as the other was the final.

I foresee only one difficulty, but that one is serious; to make the style equal to the grandeur of the subject is a vast and arduous undertaking even for your genius, though that is capable of the loftiest flights and grows in proportion to the magnitude of its theme. Something, too, there will be of labour in reconciling those barbarous and uncouth names, c Decebalus killed himself to escape falling into the hands of the conqueror.

d Domitian celebrated one, 91 A.D., but see iv. 11, note.
fera nomina, in prjmis regis ipsius, Graecis versibus non resultent. Sed nihil est, quod non arte curaque, si non potest Vinci, mitigetur. Praeterea, si datur Homero et mollia vocabula et Graeca ad lenitatem versus contrahere, extendere, inflectere, cur tibi similis audentia, praesertim non delicata, sed necessaria, negetur? Proinde iure vatun, invocatis dis et inter deos ipso, cuius res, opera, consilia dicturus es, immitte rudentes, pande vela ac, si quando alias, toto ingenio vehere. Cur enim non ego quoque poëtice curn poeta?

Illud iam nunc paciscor; prima quaeque, ut absolveris, mittito, immo etiam ante quam absolvas, sic ut erunt recentia et rudia et adhuc similia nascentibus. Respondebis non posse perinde carptim ut contexta, perinde inchoata placere ut effecta. Scio. Itaque et a me aestimabuntur ut coepa, spectabuntur ut membra extremamque limam tuam opperientur in scrinio nostro. Patere hoc me super cetera habere amoris tui pignus, ut ea quoque norim, quae nosse neminem velles. In summa potero fortasse scripta tua magis probare, laudare, quanto illa tardius cautiusque sed ipsum te magis amabo magisque laudabo, quanto celerius et incautius miseris. Vale.

1 carptim contexta Kukula, carptim <texta> ut contexta Ernestius, carptim <coniecta> ut contexta Leithäuser.
especially that of the king himself, to the harmony of Grecian number. There is nothing, however, so hard that art and industry cannot at least mitigate, if not absolutely subdue. Besides, if Homer is allowed to contract or lengthen, or change even Grecian names, and those, too, nothing harsh to the ear, in order to make them run more smoothly in his verse; why should the same licence be forbidden to you, especially since it springs from necessity and not affectation? Come on then, my friend, and after having, in right of your hardship, invoked the gods, and among the rest that divine hero whose deeds, works, and counsels you are going to celebrate, loosen all your cordage, spread every sail, and now, if ever, give free course to your genius—for you must allow me to be poetical too, when I am talking to a poet!

And now I insist that you send me every part, as soon as it has received your last finishing touches; nay before, while it is in its first rough and embryonic state. You will tell me, that excerpts cannot please like one entire piece, nor a sketch like a completed design. I am very sensible of that and therefore shall judge your work as an essay only, and survey it, as so many disjoined members; and shall faithfully lay it up in my scrutoire, to wait your last hand. Indulge me then with this additional pledge of your affection, that you let me into a secret you would wish kept from everybody. In fine I may possibly admire and applaud your poems the more highly, the more tardy and cautious you are in communicating them; but the more quickly and heedlessly you do so, the more I shall love and applaud the poet himself. Farewell.

IOI
C. Plinius Gemino Suo S.

Grave vulner Macrinus noster accepit. Amisit uxorem singularis exempli, etiamsi olim fuisset. Vixit cum hac triginta novem annis sine iurgio, sine offensa. Quam illa reverentiam marito suo praestitit, cum ipsa summam meretur! quot quantasque virtutes ex diversis aetatibus sumptas collegit et miscuit!

Habet quidem Macrinus grande solacium, quod tantum bonum tam diu tenuit; sed hoc magis exacerbatur, quod amisit. Nam fruendis voluptatibus crescit carendi dolor. Ero ergo suspensus pro homine amicissimo, dum admittere avocamenta et cicatricem pati possit, quam nihil aequae ac necessitas ipsa et dies longa et satietas doloris inducit. Vale.

VI

C. Plinius Montano Suo S.

Cognovisse iam ex epistula mea debes adnotasse me nuper monumentum Pallantis sub hac inscriptione: 'Huic senatus ob fidem pietatemque erga patronos ornamenta praetoria decrevit et sestertium
BOOK VIII. v.–vi

V

To Geminius

Our friend Macrinus is pierced with the severest affliction. He has lost his wife; a lady whose virtues would have made her a pattern even to ancient times. He lived with her thirty-nine years in the most uninterrupted harmony. How respectful was her behaviour to him! and how did she herself deserve the highest respect! How she blended and united in her character all those amiable virtues that distinguish the different periods of female life!

It should, methinks, afford great consolation to Macrinus, that he has thus long enjoyed so exquisite a blessing. Yet that reflection the more embitters his loss; for the pain of parting with our happiness, still rises in proportion to the length of its continuance. I shall be in suspense, therefore, for so valuable a friend, until he can bring himself to submit to soothing treatment, and endure having his wound closed—a process best effected by the sheer force of necessity, by lapse of time, and by satiety of grief. Farewell.

VI

To Montanus

My last letter a should by this time have informed you, that I remarked lately a monument to Pallas, with this inscription: "The Senate decreed to him for his fidelity and affection to his patrons, the praetorian insignia, together with fifteen million a vii. 29.

centies quinquagies cuius honore contentus fuit."
Postea mihi visum est pretium operae ipsum senatus consultum quaerere. Inveni tam copiosum et effusum, ut ille superbissimus titulus modicus atque etiam demissus videretur. Conferant se non dico illi veteres Africani, Achaici, Numantini, sed hi proximi, Marii, Sullae, Pompeii, nolo progresdi longius; infra Pallantis laudes iacebunt.

Urbanos, qui illa censuerunt, putem an miseros? Dicerem urbanos, si senatum deceret urbanitas, miseros sed nemo tam miser est, ut illa cogatur. Ambitio ergo et procedendi libido? Sed quis adeo demens, ut per suum, per publicum dedecus procedere velit in ea civitate, in qua hic esset usus florentissimae dignitatis, ut primus in senatu laudare Pallantem posset?

Omitto, quod Pallanti servo praetoria ornamenta offeruntur (quippe offeruntur a servis), mitto, quod censent non exhortandum modo, verum etiam compellendum ad usum aureorum anulorum (erat enim contra maiestatem senatus, si ferreis praetorius uteretur) ; levia haec et transeunda, illa memoranda, quod 'nomine Pallantis senatus' (nec expiata postea curia est), 'Pallantis nomine senatus gratias agit Caesari, quod et ipse cum summo honore mentionem eius prosecutus esset et senatui facultatem fecisset

---

a The badge of equestrian rank, as an iron one was of servitude. (Melm.)

104
sesterces; but he was contented with accepting only the honour.” I afterwards thought it worth while to search for this decree, and found it so copious and effusive that this arrogant inscription seems moderate and actually humble in comparison. Our national heroes all put together—I do not speak of such ancient worthies as the Scipios and the Mummii; but take the more modern ones, the Marii, the Syllas, and the Pompeys, to name no more—all these could not come up to the character it gives of Pallas.

Was it the wit, shall I suppose, or the misery, of its authors that inspired this decree? I should say the former, were not raillery unbecoming the dignity to the Senate; the latter, but that no wretchedness could enforce such baseness. Perhaps then, it was ambition and greed of promotion? But who would be madman enough to dishonour himself and the State for the sake of rising in a commonwealth where the highest office carried with it one function only—to lead the Senate in eulogising Pallas?

I pass by their offering to a slave the Praetorian ornaments (they were slaves themselves who did so). I pass by their voting that Pallas should be not only entreated, but compelled, to wear the golden ring a (no doubt it was not consistent with the dignity of the Senate, that a person of Praetorian rank should wear an iron one). These are trifles not worth dwelling upon; but here is a truly memorable clause: “The Senate, on behalf of Pallas” (and the senate-house was not purified after so vile a pollution). “The Senate returns thanks to Caesar on behalf of Pallas, not only for the high honour he was pleased to bestow on him at their recommendation, but for testandi erga eum benevolentiam suam.' Quid enim senatui pulchrior, quam ut erga Pallantem satis gratus videretur? Additur: 'Ut Pallas, cui se omnes pro virili parte obligatos fatentur, singularis fidei, singularis industriae fructum meritissimo ferat.' Prolatos imperii fines, redditos exercitus rei publicae credas.

Adstruitur his: 'Cum senatui populoque Romano liberalitatis gratior repraesentari nulla materia possit, quam si abstinentissimi fidelissimique custodis principalium opum facultates adiuvare contigisset.' Hoc tunc votum senatus, hoc praecipuum gaudium populi, haec liberalitatis materia gratissima, si Pallantis facultates adiuvare publicarum opum egestione contingeret. Iam quae sequuntur, 'voluisse quidem senatum censere dandum ex aerario sestertium centies quinquagies, et quanto ab eiusmodi cupiditatisibus remotior eius animus esset, tanto impensius petere a publico parente, ut eum compelleret ad cedendum senatui.' Id vero deerat, ut cum Pallante auctoritate publica ageretur, Pallas rogaretur, ut senatui cederet, ut illi superbissimae abstinentiae Caesar ipse advocatus esset, ne sestertium centies quinquagies sperneret. Sprevit, quod solum potuit tantis opibus publice oblatis adrogantius facere, quam si accepisset.

Senatus tamen id quoque similis querenti laudibus tulit his quidem verbis: 'sed cum princeps optimus
the opportunity afforded the House of testifying their good will towards him.” Nothing you see could more ennoble the Senate, than to appear duly grateful to Pallas! It goes on: “That Pallas to whom we all, as far as in us lies, acknowledge our several obligations, may reap the just reward of his singlar fidelity and diligence.” One would think he had extended the bounds of the empire, and then resigned to the State the command of the legions he had led!

The next clause is: “Since the Senate and the Roman People could not have a more agreeable occasion for their liberality, than the opportunity of enriching so thrifty and honest a guardian of the Imperial funds.” Such at that time was the aspiration of the Senate; such the highest pleasures of the people; such the most agreeable occasion of exercising their liberality—an opportunity to enrich Pallas by depleting the public funds! Now mark the conclusion: “the Senate would have wished to vote him fifteen million sesterces out of the treasury; and as he has a soul far above desires of this kind they the more urgently request the Father of the State to oblige him to comply with their wish.” 'Twas indeed the one thing wanting, that public influence should be brought to bear on Pallas that he should be pressed to yield to the Senate; and Caesar himself be called in to oppose this insolent piece of self denial—all to prevent Pallas from rejecting the gift of fifteen million sesterces! He did reject it—the only way in which he could treat the State’s offer of so vast a sum more arrogantly than by accepting it.

Yet even this the Senate endured, and while adopting an injured tone, applauded as follows: “But whereas parensque publicus rogatus a Pallante eam partem sententiae, quae pertinebat ad dandum ei ex aerario centies quinquagies sestertium, remitti voluisset; testari senatum, etsi¹ libenter ac merito hanc summam inter reliquos honores ob fidem diligentiamque Pallanti decernere coepisset,² voluntati tamen principis sui, cui in nulla re fas putaret repugnare, in hac quoque re obsequi.'

Imaginare Pallantem velut intercedentem senatus consulto moderantemque honores suos et sestertium centies quinquagies ut nimium recusantem, cum praetoria ornamenta tamquam minus recepisset, imaginare Caesarem liberti precibus vel potius imperio coram senatu obtempertem (imperat enim libertus patrono, quem in senatu rogat), imaginare senatum usquequaque testantem merito libenterque se hanc summam inter reliquos honores Pallanti coepisse decernere et perseveraturum fuisse, nisi obsequeretur principis voluntati, cui non esset fas in ulla re repugnare. Ita, ne sestertium centies quinquagies Pallas ex aerario ferret, verecundia ipsius, obsequio senatus opus fuit in hoc praecipue non obsecuturi, si in ulla re putasset fas esse non obsequi.

Finem existimas? Mane dum et maiora accipe: 'Utique, cum sit utile principis benignitatem promptissimam ad laudem praemiaque merentium

¹ etsi r, Kii., et se M,a.
² coepisset Catan., coepisse M,a.

---

¹ i.e. assuming the prerogative of a Tribune of the Plebs.
² Because the fiction of the Senate's supreme authority was still kept up.
our excellent prince and father of his country has desired, at the instance of Pallas, to have that clause of the decree rescinded which assigns him fifteen million sesterces out of the treasury; the Senate declares that although they had gladly and justly set about decreeing that sum to Pallas, amongst other honours, on account of his fidelity and diligence; yet even in this matter they obey the will of their sovereign, which they think can never be combated without impiety.”

Figure to yourself Pallas putting his veto, a as it were, on a decree of the Senate; setting limits to his own honours, and refusing fifteen million sesterces as above his deserts, after accepting the Praetorian insignia as below them. Imagine Caesar obeying the treaties, or rather the commands, of his freedman in the face of the Senate (for a freedman’s request to his patron becomes a command when he delivers it from a seat in that House b). Imagine the Senate declaring all the time that it had willingly and justly designed, among other honours, to vote Pallas this sum: and that it would have persevered but for its obedience to the will of the Emperor, which it was impious to oppose on any point. Did it need then the obsequiousness of the Senate and his own modesty to prevent Pallas from carrying off fifteen millions out of the treasury? And was it in this case, of all others, that the Senate would have been disobedient, if they had thought it lawful to be so in any?

And now, perhaps, you think you are got to the end? But wait a bit; here is something still grander for you: “And whereas it is expedient, that the gracious promptitude of the Emperor to commend
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Nec puduit rationem turpitudini obtendere, egre-giam quidem pulchramque rationem, 'ut exemplo Pallantis praemiorum ad studium aemulationis ceteri provocarentur.' Ea honorum vilitas erat, illorum etiam, quos Pallas non dedignabatur. Inveniebantur

\[ loricata, \text{ "wearing a cuirass," seems to have been the regular designation of this statue, which stood in the Forum.} \]

110
and reward merit should be everywhere made public, especially in those places where his departmental officers may be excited to an imitation and the approved fidelity and integrity of Pallas may call forth efforts at so laudable an emulation, it is therefore resolved, that the memorial which the Emperor read to the honourable House on the 28th of January last, together with their decree upon this question, shall be engraved on a brazen tablet, and the said tablet affixed to the mail-clad statue of the divine Julius Caesar.” It was not deemed sufficient that the senate-house should be witness to this complicated disgrace; the most frequented spot in all Rome was chosen to display the inscription to that and future ages. It was thought proper that all the honours of a most insolent slave, both those which he refused and those which, as much as in the authors of the decree lay, he had borne, should be inscribed in bronze. The granting of the Praetorian insignia to Pallas was deeply engraven, like ancient treaties or sacred laws, upon public and everlasting monuments. The Emperor, the Senate, and Pallas himself behaved—I lack a name for such behaviour—as if Caesar meant to put up a notice of his weakness, the Senate of its servility, and Pallas of his insolence, in the face of all the world!

The Senate was not ashamed to palliate this turpitude with the show of reason, and a vastly noble one it was, even “that others might be stimulated by the rewards conferred upon Pallas, to try to emulate his example!” Thus cheap were all honours rendered, even those which Pallas did not disdain! And yet there were found men of good tamen honesto loco nati, qui peterent cuperentque, quod dari liberto, promitti servis videbant.

Quam iuvat, quod in tempora illa non incidi, quorum sic me, tamquam illis vixerim, pudet! Non dubito, similiter adfici te. Scio, quam sit tibi vivus et ingenuus animus; ideoque facilius est, ut me, quamquam indignatione quibusdam in locis fortasse ultra epistulae modum extulerim, parum doluisse quam nimis credas. Vale.

VII

C. PLINIUS TACITO SUO S.

Neque ut magistro magister neque ut discipulo discipulus (sic enim scribis), sed ut discipulo magister (nam tu magister, ego contra; atque adeo tu in scholam revocas, ego adhuc Saturnalia extendo) librum misisti. Num potui longius hyperbaton facere atque hoc ipso probare eum esse me, qui non modo magister tuus, sed ne discipulus quidem debeam dici? Sumam tamen personam magistri exseramque in librum tuum ius, quod dedisti, eo liberius, quo nihil ex meis interim missurus sum tibi, in quo te ulciscaris. Vale.

*Hyperbaton, (lit. "transgression") was the grammarians' birth, who were humble enough to desire and solicit those very honours, which they thus saw conferred upon a freedman, and promised to slaves.

Happy for me that my lot was not cast in those times, which I blush for as though I actually lived in them! And I doubt not, they raise the same sentiments in you. I know the honest warmth of your temper, which, though I may in some passages have been transported into a higher style than the epistolatory, will easily persuade you that I have expressed too little rather than too much indignation. Farewell.

VII

To Tacitus

Not as one master to another, nor as one scholar to another (as you are pleased to say), but as a master to his scholar—for you are the master, I the other party, witness your summoning me back to school, whilst I am prolonging my New Year's holiday—have you sent me your oration. Tell me, now, could I have stretched out an hyperbaton further than in this sentence, or given a stronger proof, that far from being called your master, I am not even worthy to be called your pupil? However, I will assume the rôle of master and exert the authority you have given me over your piece; the more freely as I have nothing of my own to send you at present, upon which you may take your revenge. Farewell.

term for "a considerable clause interpolated between two connected parts of a sentence."
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

VIII

C. PlINIUS Romano Suo S.

Vidistine aliquando Clitumnum fontem? Si nondum (et puto nondum; alioqui narrasses mihi), vide, quem ego (paenitet tarditatis) proxime vidi.

Modicus collis adsurgit antiqua cupressu nemorosus et opacus. Hunc subter fons exit et exprimitur pluribus venis, sed imparibus, eluctatusque, quem facit, gurgitem lato gremio patescit purus et vitreus, ut numerare iactas stipes et relucentis calculos possis. Inde non loci devexitate, sed ipsa sui copia et quasi pondere, impellitur fons\textsuperscript{1} adhuc et iam amplissimum flumen atque etiam navium patiens, quas obvias quoque et contrario nisu in diversa tendentes transmittit et perfert, adeo validus, ut illa, qua properat ipse, quamquam per solum planum, remis non adiuvetur, idem aegerrime remis contisque superetur adversus. Iucundum utrumque per iocum ludumque fluitantibus, ut flexerint cursum, laborem otio, otium labore variare.

\textsuperscript{1} impellitur fons Müller, impellitur. Fons edd.

\textsuperscript{a} It was customary to throw coins as votive offerings into those fountains, lakes, etc., which were accounted sacred. Suetonius mentions this practice, in the annual vows which he says the Roman people made for the health of Augustus. (Melm.)

114
VIII

To Romanus

Have you at last seen the source of the river Clitumnus? As I never heard you mention it, I imagine not; let me therefore advise you to do so immediately. It is but lately indeed I had that pleasure, and I condemn myself for not having seen it sooner.

At the foot of a little hill, covered with venerable and shady cypress trees, the river head is sent up out from the ground in several and unequal rills, and bursting forth forms a broad pool so clear and glassy that you may count the shining pebbles, and the little pieces of money which are thrown into it. From thence it is carried off not so much by the declivity of the ground, as by its own volume and, as it were, density. As soon as it has quitted its source, it becomes a mighty river, navigable for large vessels, even when they are making up stream and have to contend against the current. This runs so strong, though the ground is level, that boats going with it have no occasion for rowing oars; while it is difficult to advance against it, even with the help of oars and poles. This vicissitude and labour and ease is exceedingly amusing when one sails up and down merely for pleasure.

The banks are thickly clad with ash and poplar trees, whose verdant reflections are as distinctly seen in the translucent stream, as if they were actually sunk in it. The water is cold as snow, and as white too. Near it is a primitive and holy temple, wherein stands the river-god Clitumnus clothed in a purple-
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

In summa nihil erit, ex quo non capias voluptatem. Nam studebis quoque; et leges multa multorum omnibus columnis, omnibus parietibus inscripta, quibus fons ille deusque celebratur. Plura laudabis, non nulla ridebis; quamquam tu vero, quae tua humanitas, nulla ridebis. Vale.

IX

C. PLINIUS URSO SUO S.

OLIM non librum in manus, non stilum sumpsii, olim nescio, quid sit otium, quid quies, quid denique bordered robe. The lots kept here for divining sufficiently testify to the presence and oracular power of the deity. Several little chapels are scattered round, each containing the statue of a different god. Each of these has his peculiar worship and title; and some of them, too, their own springs. For, beside the principal one, which is, as it were, the parent of all the rest, there are several other lesser streams, which, taking their rise from distinct sources, lose themselves in the river; over which a bridge is built, that separates the sacred part from that which lies open to common use. Vessels are allowed to come above this bridge, but no person is permitted to swim, except below it. The Hispellates, to whom Augustus gave this place, maintain a bath, and an inn for travellers, at the expense of the corporation. And villas, wherever the river is most beautiful, are situated upon its banks.

In short, every object that presents itself will afford you entertainment. For you will also find food for study in the numerous inscriptions, by many hands all over the pillars and walls, in praise of the spring and its tutelar deity. Many of them you will admire, others you will laugh at; but I must correct myself when I say so; you are too good-natured I know, to laugh at any. Farewell.

IX

To Ursus

It is a long time since I have taken either a book, or a pen in my hand. It is long since I have known the sweets of leisure and repose; since I have known illud iners quidem, iucundum tamen nihil agere, nihil esse; adeo multa me negotia amicorum nec secedere nec studere patiuntur. Nulla enim studia tanti, ut amicitiae officium deseratur, quod religiosissime custodiendum studia ipsa praecipiunt. Vale.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

X

C. PLINIUS FABATO PROSOCERO SUO S.

Quo magis cupis ex nobis pronepotes videre, hoc tristior audies neptem tuam abortum fecisse, dum se praegnantem esse puellariter nescit ac per hoc quaedam custodienda praegnantibus omittit, facit omittenda. Quem errorem magnis documentis expiavit in summum periculum adducta. Igitur, ut necesse est graviter accipias senectutem tuam quasi paratis posteris destitutam, sic debes agere dis gratias, quod ita tibi in praesentia pronepotes negaverunt, ut servarent neptem, illos reddituri, quorum nobis spem certiorem haec ipsa quamquam parum prospere explorata fecunditas facit.

Isdem nunc ego te quibus ipsum me hortor, moneo, confirmo. Neque enim ardentius tu pronepotes, 118 in fine, that indolent but agreeable situation of doing nothing, and being nothing: so entirely has the pressure of business on my friends' account put a stop alike to my going into the country and my studying. For no studies are of consequence enough to supersede that duty of friendship which they themselves teach us most religiously to observe. Farewell.

X

To Fabatus, His Wife's Grandfather

Your concern to hear of your grand-daughter's miscarriage will be proportionate, I know, to your earnest desire that we should make you a great-grandfather. The inexperience of her youth rendered her ignorant that she was breeding: so that she not only omitted the proper precautions, but managed herself in a way extremely unsuitable to a person in her condition. But she has received a severe lesson, paying for her mistake by the utmost hazard of her life. So, though you cannot but feel it an affliction to be bereaved at your advanced age of the immediate prospect of posterity; yet it deserves your gratitude to the Gods, that while denying you great-grandchildren for the present, they preserved the life of your grand-daughter, as designing yet to bestow them; a blessing we may expect with more certainty, as she has given this proof, though an unhappy one indeed, of her being capable of bearing children.

I am offering you the reflections in which I seek exhortation, counsel, and strengthening for myself. You cannot more ardently wish to have great-quam ego liberos cupio, quibus videor a meo tuoque latere pronom ad honores iter et audita latius nomina et non subitas imagines relicturus, nascantur modo et hunc nostrum dolorem gudio mutent. Vale.

XI

C. Plinius Hispulalae Suae S.

Cum affectum tuum erga fratri filiam cogito etiam materna indulgentia molliorem, intellego prius tibi, quod est posterius, nuntiandum, ut praeumenta laetitia sollicitudini locum non relinquat. Quamquam vereor, ne post gratulationem quoque in metum redeas atque ita gaudeas periculo liberatam, ut simul, quod periclitata sit, perhorrescas. Iam hilaris, iam sibi, iam mihi reddita incipit refici transmissumque discrimen convalescendo metiri. Fuit alioqui in summo discrimine, impune dixisse liceat, fuit nulla sua culpa, aetatis aliqua. Inde abortus et ignorant uteri triste experimentum.

Proinde, etsi non contigit tibi desiderium fratri amissi aut nepote eius aut nepte solari, memento a imagines, wax portrait masks of ancestors who had held curule office (carried in their own and their descendants’ funeral processions), were kept in the atrium of the family house, “arranged, and connected by coloured lines, in such a way as to exhibit the family pedigree” (Seyffert). Hence “to have imagines” meant “to be of noble ancestry,” in grandchildren, than I do to have children; for methinks as your offspring and mine they will inherit an easy path to honours, a fairly well-known name, and an ancestral tree of no mushroom growth. May we but see them born, it will turn our present sorrow into joy. Farewell.

XI

To Hispulla

When I consider that you love your brother’s daughter with a more than maternal fondness, I see I ought to give you my latest news first; that sentiments of joy may forestall and preclude anxiety. Though I fear indeed, even after your transports of gratulation you will feel some renewal of concern, and in the midst of your joy for the danger she has escaped, will tremble at the thought of that which she has undergone. She is now, however, in good spirits, and again restored to herself and to me; already she is making as rapid progress towards recovery, as she did towards her late danger. To tell you the truth, she was in the utmost danger (be it said without ill omen); for which no blame can be laid on her, but a good deal on her youthfulness. To this must be imputed her miscarriage, and the sad result she has experienced of not knowing her condition.

But though you have not been vouchsafed the consolation of a nephew or niece, to supply the loss of your brother; remember, that comfort is rather contrast to being novus homo, the first of your family to attain curule rank.
tamen dilatum magis istud quam negatum, cum salva sit, ex qua sperari potest. Simul excusa patri tuo casum, cui paratior apud feminas venia est. Vale.

XII

C. PLINIUS MINICIANO SUO S.

Hunc solum diem excuso. Recitaturus est Titi-nius Capito, quem ego audire nescio magis debeam an cupidam. Vir est optimus et inter praeципua saeculi ornamenta numerandus; colit studia, studiosos amat, foveit, provehit, multorumque, qui aliqua componunt, portus, sinus, gremium, omnium exemplum, ipsarum denique litterarum iam senescentium reductor ac reformator. Domum suam recitantibus praebet, auditoria, non apud se tantum benignitate mira frequentat; mihi certe, si modo in urbe est, defuit nunquam.

Porro tanto turpius gratiam non referre, quanto honestior causa referendae. An, si litibus tererer, obstrictum esse me crederem obeunti vadimonia mea, nunc, quia mihi omne negotium, omnis in studiis cura, minus obligor tanta sedulitate celebranti, in a Fabatus.

1 gremium Schaefer, praemium vulg.

122
deferred than denied, since her life is preserved from whom it is to be expected. I beg also you will excuse this accident to your father, whose indulgence is always more readily forthcoming when solicited by one of your sex. Farewell.

XII

To Minicianus

I beg you would excuse me this one day. Titinius Capito is going to recite, and I know not whether it is most my inclination, or my duty to attend him. He is a man of a most amiable disposition, and justly to be numbered among the brightest ornaments of our age; he cultivates the polite arts himself, and generously admires and encourages them in others. To many authors of merit, he is a haven, a refuge, a resting-place; to all, a model. In a word, he is the restorer and reformer of literature itself, now alas! falling into decrepitude. His house is at the disposal of everyone who wishes to give a recital; and it is not there only that he attends these assemblies with the most obliging good nature. I am sure at least he never missed one of mine if he happened to be at Rome.

Besides, it were the more unseemly not to return a favour, when I have such honourable cause. Should not I, if my business lay in lawsuits, think myself obliged to a man who kept the recognizances I had entered into for his appearance? And am I less indebted because my whole care and business is of the literary kind, for his assiduity on a point which, quo obligari ego, ne dicam solo, certe maxime possum?
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Quod si illi nullam vicem, nulla quasi mutua officia deberem, sollicitarer tamen vel ingenio hominis pulcherrimo et maximo et in summa severitate dulcissimo vel honestate materiae. Scribit exitus illustrium virorum, in iis quorundam mihi carissimorum. Videor ergo fungi pio munere, quorumque exsequias celebrare non licuit, horum quasi funebribus laudationibus seris quidem, sed tanto magis veris interesse. Vale.

XIII

C. PLINIUS GENIALI SUO S.

Probo, quod libellos meos cum patre legisti. Pertinet ad profectum tuum a disertissimo viro discere, quid laudandum, quid reprehendendum, simul ita institui, ut verum dicere adsuescas. Vides, quem sequi, cuius debas implere vestigia. O te beatum, cui contigit vivum atque idem optimum et conjunctissimum exemplar, qui denique eum potissimum imitandum habes, cui natura esse te simillimum voluit! Vale.
if not the only, is however the principal instance wherein I can be obliged?

But though I owed him no return, nor what I might call reciprocity of good offices; yet not only the beauty of his extensive genius, as polite as it is severely correct, but the dignity of his subject, would forcibly invite my attendance. He has written an account of the deaths of several illustrious persons, some of whom were my dear friends. It is a pious office, methinks, as I could not be present at their obsequeies, to attend this (as I may call it) their funeral oration; which though a late, is however for that reason a more genuine tribute to their memories. Farewell.

XIII

TO GENIALIS

I much approve of your having read my orations with your father. It is important for your progress, to learn from a man of his eloquence what to admire and what to condemn, and by the same course of training to acquire the habit of speaking your real sentiments. You see whose steps you ought to follow; and happy are you in having a living model before you, which is at once the nearest and the noblest you can pursue! Happy, in a word, that he whom nature designed you should most resemble, is, of all others, the person whom you should most imitate! Farewell.
C. Plinius Aristoni Suo S.

Cum sis peritissimus et privati iuris et publici, cuius pars senatorium est, cupio ex te potissimum audire, erraverim in senatu proxime necne, non ut in praeteritum (serum enim) verum ut in futurum, si quid simile inciderit, erudiar.

Dices: 'Cur quaeris, quod nosse debebas?' Priorum temporum servitus ut aliarum optimarum artium sic etiam iuris senatorii oblivionem quandam et ignorantiam induxit. Quotus enim quisque tam patiens, ut velit discere, quod in usu non sit habiturus? Adde, quod difficile est tenere, quae acceperis, nisi exerceas. Itaque reducta libertas rudes nos et imperitos deprehendit; cuius dulcedine accensi cogimur quaedam facere ante quam nosse.

Erat autem antiquitus institutum, ut a maioribus natu non auribus modo, verum etiam oculis disceremus, quae facienda mox ipsi ac per vices quasdam tradenda minoribus haberemus. Inde adulescentuli statim castrensibus stipendiis imbuebantur, ut imperare parendo, duces agere, dum sequuntur, adsuecerent, inde honores petituri adsistebant curiae

---

\(^a\) That of Domitian.

\(^b\) On the accession of Nerva, 96 A.D.
As you are equally versed in civil and constitutional law, which latter includes the procedure of the Senate, I am particularly desirous to have your opinion, whether or no I made a mistake in the House the other day. This I request for my better instruction, not as to what is passed, (for that is now too late,) but as regards questions of the same nature that may hereafter arise.

I can fancy your replying, "Why do you ask, what you ought to have known?" But our servitude under a former reign\(^a\) cast a cloud of oblivion and ignorance over all branches of useful knowledge, and not excluding even the usages of the Senate; for who is so tame-spirited as to desire to learn an art of which he will be debarred the exercise? Besides, it is not easy to retain the knowledge one has acquired, without putting it in practice. Thus Liberty at her return\(^b\) found us ignorant and inexperienced; and kindled by her charms, we are sometimes impelled to action, ere we know how to act.

But in the olden time it was an established rule that Romans should learn from their elders, not only by precept, but by example, the principles on which they themselves should one day act, and which they should in their turn transmit to the younger generation. Hence they were inured from boyhood to service in camp, that by being accustomed to obey, they might learn to command and by following others, be trained to play the leader. And hence, on becoming candidates for office, they used to stand foribus et consilii publici spectatores ante quam consortes erant. Suus cuique parens pro magistro, aut cui parens non erat, maximus quisque et vetustissimus pro parente. Quae potestas referentibus, quod censentibus ius, quae vis magistratibus, quae ceteris libertas, ubi cedendum, ubi resistendum, quod silendi tempus, quis dicendi modus, quae distinctio pugnantium sententiarum, quae exsecutio prioribus aliquid addentium, omnem denique senatorium morem, quod fidelissimum praecipiendi genus, exemplis docebantur.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

At nos iuvenes fuimus quidem in castris, sed cum suspecta virtus, inertia in pretio, cum ducibus auctoritas nulla, nulla militibus verecundia, nusquam imperium, nusquam obsequium, omnia soluta, turbata atque etiam in contrarium versa, postremo obliviscenda magis quam tenenda. Iadem prospexisimus curiam, sed curiam tremidam et elinguem; cum dicere, quod velles, perculosum, quod nolles, miserum esset. Quid tunc disci potuit, quid didicisse iuvit, cum senatus aut ad otium summum aut ad summum nefas vocaretur, et modo ludibrio, modo dolori retentus, numquam seria, tristia saepe censeret? Eadem mala iam senatores, iam particeps malorum multos per

\[a\] If any motion proposed in the Senate was thought too general, and to include several distinct articles, some of which might be approved, and others rejected, it was usual to require that it might be divided. (Melm.)

\[b\] The fourth satire of Juvenal will serve as a comment upon this passage, where he acquaints us that a turbot of a most enormous size being brought to Domitian, he immediately convened the Senate, in order to consult in what manner it should be dressed. (Melm.)

128
at the senate-house doors, and were spectators, before they were members of the Council of State. The father of each youth served as his instructor, or, if he had none, some person of years and dignity supplied the place of a father. Thus they were taught by that surest method of instruction, example, how far the right of proposing any law to the Senate extended; what privileges a senator had in delivering his opinion; the powers of senators who are magistrates, and the independence of the rest; where it is proper to yield, and where to stand firm; how long to speak, and when to be silent; how to distinguish conflicting motions, and how to discuss an amendment. In a word, they learnt by this means the whole conduct of a senator.

It is true, indeed, I myself served in the army as a young man; but it was at a time when courage was suspected, and cowardice at a premium; when the generals were without authority, and the soldiers without awe; when there was neither command nor obedience; when our whole military system was relaxed, disordered, and actually turned upside down—in short, when it was better to forget than to remember its lessons. I likewise went as a spectator to the Senate, but a Senate that was mute and fearful; since it was dangerous to speak one's real sentiments, and infamous to profess any others. What satisfaction in learning, or indeed what could be learnt, when the Senate was convened either for utter idleness or for business the most criminal; when they were kept sitting either for cruel or ridiculous purposes; and when their resolutions were never serious, though often tragical. On becoming a senator, and a partaker of these miseries, annos vidimus tulimusque: quibus ingenia nostra in posterum quoque hebetata, fracta, contusa sunt. Breve tempus (nam tanto brevius omne quanto felicius tempus), quo libet scire, quid simus, libet exercere, quod scimus.¹

Quo iustius peto, primum ut errori, si quis est error, tribuas veniam, deinde medearis scientia tua, cui semper fuit curae sic iura publica ut privata, sic antiqua ut recentia, sic rara ut adsidua tractare. Atque ego arbitror illis etiam, quibus plurimarum rerum agitatio frequens nihil esse ignotum patiebatur, genus quaestionis, quod adfero ad te, aut non satis tritum aut etiam inexpertum fuisse. Hoc et ego excusatior, si forte sum lapsus, et tu dignior laude, si potes id quoque docere, quod in obscuero est, an didiceris.

Referebatur de libertis Afrani Dextri consulis incertum sua an suorum manu, scelere an obsequio peremti. Hos alius (‘Quis?’ inquis. Ego; sed nihil refert) post quaestionem supplicio liberandos, alius in insulam relegandos, alius morte puniendos arbitrabatur. Quarum sententiarum tanta diversitas

¹ scimus Reifferscheid. Mus. Rhen. 1860, p. 636, sumus vulg. 130
I both witnessed and endured them for many years; which so broke and damped my spirits, that they have not even yet been able fully to recover themselves. It is but a short time (for every period is shorter, the happier it is) since we could take any pleasure in knowing the rights and duties of our station, or in putting that knowledge into practice.

Upon these grounds I may the more reasonably ask you, in the first place, to condone my error (if I have been guilty of one), and in the next, to remedy it by your expert knowledge: for you have ever been a devoted student of our laws both public and private, ancient and modern, general and exceptional. And I think the point upon which I am going to consult you, is one that even those who by constant and varied practice must have mastered every detail of public business, have seldom or never had to deal with. I shall be more excusable, therefore, if I happen to have been mistaken; as you will deserve so much the higher applause, if you can teach me a lesson which it is not clear that you have learned yourself.

The case before the House concerned the freed-men of the consul Africanus Dexter, who being found murdered, it was uncertain whether he fell by his own hands or by those of his people; and if the latter, whether they acted in obedience to his commands, or were prompted by their own villainy. After they had been put to the question, a certain senator (never mind his name, but if you wish to know, it was myself) was for acquitting them; another moved that they should be banished to an island; and a third that they should be put to death. These several verdicts were so extremely opposite, erat, ut non possent esse nisi singulae. Quid enim commune habet occidere et relegare? Non hercule magis quam relegare et absolvere; quamquam propior aliquanto est sententiae relegantis, quae absolvit, quam quae occidit (utraque enim ex illis vitam relinquit, haec adimit) cum interim, et qui morte puniebant, et qui relegabant, una sedebant et temporaria simulatione concordiae discordiam differebant. Ego postulabam, ut tribus sententiis constaret suus numerus, nec se brevibus induciis duae iungerent. Exigebam ergo, ut, qui capitali supplicio afficiendos putabant, discederent a relegante, nec interim contra absolventis mox dissensuri congregarentur, quia parvulum referret, an idem displiceret, quibus non idem placuisset. Illud etiam mihi permirum videbatur, eum quidem, qui libertos relegandos, servos supplicio adficiendos censuisset, coactum esse dividere sententiam; hunc autem, qui libertos morte multaret, cum relegante numerari. Nam, si oportuisset dividi sententiam unius, quia res duas comprehendebat, non reperiebam, quem ad modum posset iungi sententia duorum tam diversa censentium.

Those in favour of a motion in the Senate signified the same by ranging themselves on that side of the House where the proposer was seated.

132
that it was impossible to put them to the vote otherwise than separately. For what is there in common between a sentence of banishment, and a sentence of death? Nothing more, heaven knows, than there is between a sentence of banishment and an acquittal. (Albeit acquitting a person comes much nearer to banishing him, than does sentencing him to death; for both the former verdicts spare, whereas the latter takes away, his life.) In the meanwhile, those respectively in favour of death, and of banishment, sate together on the same side of the House: and by a temporary appearance of union, suspended their real disagreement. I demanded, that the three verdicts should be counted as three, and that two of them should not coalesce by a momentary truce; consequently, I insisted that members who were for capital punishment should move away from the proposer of banishment; and that those who would shortly be at variance should not meanwhile group themselves in opposition to the party for acquittal, merely to disunite again; for it was not material that they all opposed the same motion, since they did not support the same. It also seemed to me very extraordinary that whereas he who proposed banishment for freedmen and death for the slaves was obliged to put two distinct motions to the House; the proposer of a death-sentence upon the freedmen should be reckoned along with him who proposed to banish them. For if one and the same senator’s motion had to be divided, because it comprehended two distinct things, I could not see how the motions of two different persons, whose views were diametrically opposed, could be taken together.
Atque adeo permitte mihi sic apud te tamquam ibi, sic peracta re tamquam adhuc integra rationem iudicii mei reddere, quaeque tunc carptim multis obstrepentibus dixi, per otium iungere. Fingamus tres omnino iudices in hanc causam datas esse, horum uni placuisse perire libertos, alteri relegari, tertio absolvi; utrumne sententiae duae collatis viribus novissimam periment, an separatim una-quaeque tantundem quantum altera valebit, nec magis poterit cum secunda prima conecti, quam secunda cum tertia? Igitur in senatu quoque numerari tamquam contrariae debent, quae tamquam diversae dicuntur. Quodsi unus atque idem et perpendos censeret et relegandos, num ex sententia unius et perire possent et relegari? num denique omnino una sententia putaretur, quae tam diversa coniungeret? Quem ad modum igitur, cum alter puniendos, alter censeat relegandos, videri potest una sententia, quia dicitur a duobus, quae non videretur una, si ab uno diceretur?

Quid? lex non aperte docet dirimi debere sententias occidentis et relegantis, cum ita dis- cessionem fieri iubet: ‘Qui haec sentitis, in hanc partem, qui alia omnia, in illam partem ite, qua sentitis’? Examina singula verba et expende: ‘Qui haec sentitis,’ hoc est qui relegandos putatis, ‘in hanc partem,’ id est in eam, in qua sedet, qui Permit me then, notwithstanding the point is determined, to go over it again as if it were still undecided, and to lay before you those reasons at my ease, which I offered to the House in the midst of much interruption and clamour. Let us suppose there had been only three judges appointed to hear this cause, one of whom was of opinion that the freedmen should die; the second that they should be banished; and the third that they ought to be acquitted: should the two former verdicts unite their strength to the destruction of the latter? Or should not each of them separately be balanced, and the first and second be no more combined than the second and third? They ought therefore to be counted in the Senate likewise as contrary, since they were delivered as conflicting opinions. Suppose the same person had moved, that the freedmen be banished and put to death as well; could they on one individual's motion have suffered both punishments? Or could it possibly have been esteemed as one motion, when it united two such contrary proposals? How then can one man's vote for death and another's for banishment, which could not be deemed a single motion if proposed by a single person, pass for such because it has two proposers?

Does not the law manifestly teach that we are to separate a capital verdict from one of banishment, by the formula employed when the House is ordered to divide? "You who hold such an opinion come to this side; you who hold any other go over to the side of him whose opinion you follow." Let us examine and weigh every clause: "You who are of this opinion": that is, you who would banish the freedmen, "come on this side"; namely, where the censuit relegandos. Ex quo manifestum est non posse in eadem parte remanere eos, qui interficiendos arbitrantur. ‘Qui alia omnia.’ Animadvertis, ut non contenta lex dicere ‘alia’ addiderit ‘omnia.’ Num ergo dubium est alia omnia sentire eos, qui occidunt, quam qui relegant? ‘In illam partem ite, qua sentitis.’ Nonne videtur ipsa lex eos, qui dissentiunt, in contrarium partem vocare, cogere, impellere? non consul etiam, ubi quisque remanere, quo transgredi debeat, non tantum solemnibus verbis, sed manu gestuque demonstrat?

At enim futurum est ut, si dividantur sententiae interficientis et relegantis, praevaleat illa, quae absolvit. Quid istud ad censentes? quos certe non decet omnibus artibus, omni ratione pugnare, ne fiat, quod est mitius. Oportet tamen eos, qui puniant capite, et qui relegant, absolventibus primum, mox inter se comparari. Scilicet, ut in spectaculis quibusdam sors aliquem seponit ac servat, qui cum victore contendat, sic in senatu sunt aliqua prima, sunt secunda certamina, et ex duabus sententiis eam, quae superior exierit, tertia exspectat.

Quid, quod prima sententia comprobata ceterae perimantur? Qua ergo ratione potest esse nunc 1 unus atque idem locus sententiarum, quarum nullus est postea? Planius repetam. Nisi dicente sententiam eo, qui relegat, illi, qui puniunt capite, initio

1 nunc Schaefer, non codd.
proposer of that motion is sitting. From whence it is clear that those who would execute the freedmen cannot remain on that side. “You who hold any other”: observe, the Law is not contented with barely saying another, but it adds any. Now can there be a doubt, whether they who declare for a capital conviction are of any other opinion, than those who propose exile? “Go over to the side of him whose opinion you follow”: does not the Law herself seem to summon, force and urge those who differ to opposite sides? Does not the Consul actually point out, not only by the customary formula, but by waving his hand, where each man is to remain, or to which side he must cross over?

“But,” it is objected, “if the House votes separately on the motions for death and for banishment, the motion for acquittal will get a majority.” But what is that to the parties who vote? Certainly it ill becomes them to fight tooth and nail to defeat the milder verdict. “Still,” they say, “those who would condemn the accused either capitally or to banishment, should be first matched against those who would acquit them, and afterwards against each other.” Thus, as in certain public games one competitor is reserved and set apart by lot to engage with the conqueror of the rest; so, it seems, in the Senate there is a first and second combat, and of two motions, the prevailing one has still a third to contend with.

How about the rule that when the first motion proposed is carried, all the rest fall to the ground? On what principle then can motions be simultaneously put now, which cannot later be put at all? To repeat this more plainly; unless those in favour of the death-penalty immediately go over to the side statim in alia discendar, frustra postea dissentient ab eo, cui paulo ante consenserint.

Sed quid ego similis docenti? cum discere velim, an sententias dividi an iri in singulas oportuerit? Obtinui quidem, quod postulabam; nihilo minus tamen quaero, an postulare debuerim. Quem ad modum obtinui? Is, qui ultimum supplicium sumendum esse censebat, nescio an iure, certe aequitate postulationis meae victus omissa sententia sua accessit releganti veritus scilicet, ne, si dividerentur sententiae, quod alioqui fore videbatur, ea, quae absolvendos esse censebat, numero praevaleret. Etenim longe plures in hac una quam in duabus singulis erant. Tum illi quoque, qui auctoritate eius trahebantur, transeunte illo destituti reliquerunt sententiam ab ipso auctore desertam secutique sunt quasi transfugam, quem ducem sequebantur. Sic ex tribus sententiis duae factae, tenuitque ex duabus altera tertia expulsa, quae cum ambas superare non posset, elegit, ab utra vinceretur. Vale.

XV

C. Plinius Iuniori Suo S.

Oneravi te tot pariter missis voluminibus, sed oneravi, primum quia exegeras, deinde quia scripseras 138 of the "Noes" when a member proposes banishment, it will be vain for them to oppose him on a future division, whom they have supported just before.

But why do I talk like one giving instruction, when I wish to learn whether or no these motions should have been taken separately? My demand was at least successful; nevertheless, I ask, was it justifiable? Would you know how I succeeded in it? The proposer of the death penalty, overcome probably by the legality, certainly by the equity of my demand, dropped his own motion and went over to the proposer of exile. He was afraid, to be sure, that if the motions were taken separately (which he saw would anyhow be the case), those for acquittal would have a majority. And truly, the numbers were far greater on that side than on either of the other two, separately counted. The consequence was, that those who had been influenced by his authority, when they saw themselves forsaken by his going over to the other party, gave up a motion which they found abandoned by the first author, and deserted, as it were, with their leader. Thus the three motions were resolved into two; and of those two one prevailed; while the rejected third, as it could not vanquish both the others, had only to choose to which of the two it would yield. Farewell.

XV
To Junior

I have over-burthened you by sending you so many volumes at once; but I have done so firstly at your own request; and secondly because you wrote tam graciles istie vindemias esse, ut plane seirem tibi vacaturum, quod vulgo dicitur, librum legere. Eadem ex meis agellis nuntiantur. Igitur mihi quoque licebit scribere, quae legas, sit modo, unde chartae emi possint; quae si scabre bibulaeae sint, aut non scribendum, aut necessario, quidquid scripserimus boni malive, debemus. Vale.

XVI

C. PLINIUS PATERNO SUO S.

Confecerunt me infirmates meorum, mortes etiam, et quidem iuvenum. Solacia duo nequaquam paria tanto dolori, solacia tamen, unum facilitas manumittendi (videor enim non omnino immatuos perdisisse, quos iam liberos perdidit), alterum, quod permitto servis quoque quasi testamenta facere eaque, ut legitima, custodio. Mandant rogantque, quod visum; pareo ut iussus. Dividunt, donant, reliquunt dumtaxat intra domum; nam servis res publica quaedam et quasi civitas domus est. Sed, quamquam his solaciis adquiescam, de*a* Slaves could not hold or bequeath property.

me word that the yield of your vineyards had been so poor, that I might be assured you would have time, as people say, to read a book. I have received the same bad accounts of my own little farms; and am myself therefore at full leisure to write books for you, provided I can but raise money enough to furnish me with good paper. For should I be reduced to the coarse and spongy sort, either I must not write at all, or whatever I compose, whether good or bad, must necessarily undergo one cruel blot. Farewell.

XVI

To Paternus

The sickness which has lately run through my family, and carried off several of my domestics, some of them too in the prime of their years, has deeply afflicted me. I have two consolations, however, which though they are not equal to so considerable a grief, still they are consolations. One is, that I have always very readily manumitted my slaves (for their death does not seem altogether immature, if they lived long enough to receive their freedom); the other, that I have allowed them to make a kind of will, which I observe as religiously as if it were good in law.⁠* I receive and obey their last requests, as so many authoritative commands, suffering them to dispose of their effects to whom they please; with this single restriction, that they leave them to some in my household, for to persons in their station the household takes the place of city and commonwealth. But though I solace myself with such reflections, bilitor et frangor eadem illa humanitate, quae me, ut hoc ipsum permetterem, induxit.

Non ideo tamen velim durior fieri. Nec ignoro alios huius modi casus nihil amplius vocare quam damnun coque sibi magnos homines et sapientes videri. Qui an magni sapientesque sint, nescio, homines non sunt. Hominis est enim adfici dolore, sentire, resistere tamen et solacia admittere, non solaciis non egere. Verum de his plura fortasse, quam debui, sed pauciora, quam volui. Est enim quaedam etiam dolendi voluptas, praesertim si in amici sinu defleas, apud quem lacrimis tuis vel laus sit parata vel venia. Vale.

XVII

C. Plinius Macrino Suo S.

Num istic quoque immite et turbidum caelum? Hic adsiduae tempestates et crebra diluvia. Tiberis alveum excessit et demissioribus ripis alte superfunditur. Quamquam fossa, quam providentissimus imperator fecit, exhaustus premit valles, innatat campis, quaque planum solum, pro solo cernitur. Inde, quae solet flumina accipere et permixta devehere, velut obvius sistere cogit atque ita alienis aquis operit agros, quos ipse non tangit. Anio, 142
BOOK VIII. xvi.–xvii

I am overpowered by those very sentiments of humanity which led me to grant them that indulgence.

However, I do not therefore wish to become more callous. Others, I know, describe misfortunes of this kind by no higher term than "a pecuniary loss," and fancy they thereby shew themselves men of sense and spirit. Their wisdom and magnanimity I shall not dispute, but men, I am sure, they are not; for it is the very essence of human nature to feel those impressions of sorrow, which it yet endeavours to resist, and to admit, not to be above, consolation. But perhaps I have detained you too long upon this subject—though not so long as I would. For there is a certain luxury in grief; especially when we pour out our sorrows in the bosom of a friend, who will approve, or, at least, pardon our tears. Farewell.

XVII

To Macrinus

Is the weather in your parts as rude and boisterous as it is with us? All here is tempest and inundation. The Tiber has overflowed its channel, and deeply flooded its lower banks. Though drained by a dyke, which the Emperor providently had cut, it submerges the valleys, swims along the fields, and entirely overspreads the flats. The streams which it ordinarily receives and carries down commingled to the sea, it now forcibly checks in their course, by, so to speak, advancing to meet them; and thus deluges with borrowed waters lands it cannot reach itself. That most delightful of rivers, the Anio, delicatissimus amnium ideoque adiacentibus villis velut invitatus retentusque, magna ex parte nemora, quibus inumbratur, fregit et rapuit; subruit montes et decidentium mole pluribus locis clausus, dum amissum iter quaerit, impulit tecta ac se super ruinas eiecit atque extulit.

Viderunt, quos excelsioribus terris illa tempestas non deprehendit, alibi divitum apparatus, et grævem supellectilem, alibi instrumenta ruris, ibi boves, aratra, rectores, hic soluta et libera armenta atque inter haec arborum truncos aut villarum trabes atque culmina varie lateque fluitantia. Ac ne illa quidem malo vacaverunt, ad quae non ascendit amnis. Nam pro amne imber adsiduus et deiecti nubibus turbinis, proruta opera, quibus pretiosa rura cinguntur, quassata atque etiam decussa monumenta. Multi eius modi casibus debilitati, obruti, obtriti; et aucta luctibus damna.

Ne quid simile istic pro mensura periculi, vereor teque rogo, si nihil tale, quam maturissime sollicitudini meae consulas, sed, et si tale, id quoque nunties. Nam parvulum differt, patiaris adversa an exspectes: nisi quod tamen est dolendi modus, non est timendi. Doleas enim, quantum scias accidisse, timeas, quantum possit accidere. Vale.

144
which seems invited and detained by the villas upon its banks, has destroyed and carried away much of the woods that shade its brink. It has undermined mountains, and its channel being blocked by the resulting landslides, it has wrecked houses in the endeavour to regain its course, and surges high above the ruins.

Dwellers in the uplands, who were out of reach of this fearful inundation, have seen, here the household gear and heavy furniture of lordly mansions, there instruments of husbandry, elsewhere ploughs and oxen with their drivers, elsewhere again herds of cattle let loose and astray, together with trunks of trees, or beams and gables of the neighbouring villas—all floating about far and wide. Nor indeed have even these uplands, to which the river did not rise, escaped calamity. For long torrential rains, and waterspouts hurled down from the clouds, have destroyed all the enclosures on the valuable farms, and shaken, and even overturned, public buildings. Numbers have been maimed, crushed, or buried by such accidents, and loss of property has been aggravated by bereavements.

I am extremely uneasy lest this extensive disaster should have spread to you; I beg therefore, if it has not, you will immediately relieve my anxiety. And indeed, I desire you would inform me though it should; for there is little difference between expecting misfortune and undergoing it; except that grief has limits, whereas apprehension has none. For we grieve only for what we know has happened; but we fear all that possibly may happen. Farewell.
C. Plinius Rufino Suo S.

Falsum est nimirum, quod creditur vulgo, testamenta hominum speculum esse morum, cum Domitius Tullus longe melior apparuerit morte quam vita. Nam, cum se captandum praebuisset, reliquit filiam heredem, quae illi cum fratre communis, quia genitam fratre adoptaverat. Prosecutus est nepotes plurimis iucundissimisque legatis, prosecutus etiam proneptem. In summa omnia pietate plenissima ac tanto magis, quoniam inexspectata sunt.

Ergo varii tota civitate sermones; alii fictum, ingratum, immemorem loquuntur seque ipsos, dum insectantur illum, turpissimis confessionibus produnt, ut qui de patre, avo, proavo quasi de orbo querantur, alii contra hoc ipsum laudibus ferunt, quod sit frustratus improbas spes hominum, quos sic decipere pro moribus temporum prudentia est. Addunt etiam non fuisse ei liberum alio testamento mori; neque enim reliquisse opes filiae, sed reddidisse, quibus auctus per filiam fuerat. Nam Curtilius Mancia perosus generum suum Domitium Lucanum (frater is Tulli) sub ea condicione filiam eius, neptem suam,
BOOK VIII. xviii

XVIII

To Rufinus

There is certainly no truth in the popular belief, that a man's will is the mirror of his character. We have an instance to the contrary in Domitius Tullus, who appears a much better man in his death than during his life. After having encouraged the attentions of legacy-hunters, he has left his estate to his brother's daughter, whom he had adopted as his own. He has complimented his grandsons, and also his great grand-daughter, by a number of very agreeable bequests. In a word, all the provisions of the will showed the utmost family feeling, and all the more as they were unexpected.

All Rome has been discussing this affair; some people charge Tullus with feigning, ingratitude, and unmindfulness; and while they thus complain of him as if, instead of leaving three generations of descendants, he had died without natural heirs, their invectives betray their own dishonest designs. Others, on the contrary, applaud him precisely for having disappointed the hopes of this infamous tribe of men, whom, considering the manners of the age, it is but prudence to deceive in this way. And they add, that he was not at liberty to leave any other will; for he did not bequeath, but restore, to his adopted daughter, wealth that accrued to him through her. For Curtilius Mancia, having taken a dislike to his son-in-law Domitius Lucanus (brother to Tullus) devised his estate to this young lady, his grand-daughter, upon condition that Lucanus, her father, effecerat heredem, si esset manu patris emissa. Emiserat pater, adoptaverat patruus, atque ita circumscripto testamento consors frater in patris postestatem emancipatam filiam adoptionis fraude revocaverat et quidem cum opibus amplissimis.

Fuit alioqui fratribus illis quasi fato datum, ut divites sierent invitissimis iis, a quibus facti sunt. Quin etiam Domitius Afer, qui illos in nomen adsumpsit, reliquit testamentum ante octo et decem annos nuncupatum adeoque postea improbatum sibi, ut patris eorum bona proscripta curaverit. Mira illius asperitas, mira felicitas horum, illius asperitas, qui numero civium exscidit, quem socium etiam in liberis habuit, felicitas horum, quibus successit in locum patris, qui patrem abstulerat.

Sed haec quoque hereditas Afri ut re aliqua cum fratre quaesita transmittenda erat filiae fratris, a quo Tullus ex asse heres institutus praelatusque filiae fuerat, ut conciliaretur. Quo laudabilius testamentum est, quod pietas, fides, pudor, scripsit, in quo denique omnibus adfinitatibus pro euisque officio gratia relata est, relata et uxori. Accepit amoenissimas villas, accepit magnam pecuniam uxor optima et patientissima ac tanto melius de viro merita, quanto would renounce his paternal rights over her. He did so, but her uncle adopted her. In this way the purpose of Mancia's will was defeated, and as the brothers held their property in common, Lucanus, despite the act of emancipation, got his daughter under his dominion again, along with her handsome fortune, by this trick of adoption.

\[1\] iis add. Müller.

\[a\] See iv. 2 n.

It seems, indeed, to have been the fate of these two brothers, to be enriched by those who had the greatest aversion to them. For Domitius Afer, by whom they were adopted, left a will in their favour, which he had made eighteen years before his death; though he afterwards so entirely reversed his intention as to be active in procuring the confiscation of their father's estate. There is something very strange about his harsh conduct, and the good fortune of the other two; strange on the one hand that Domitius should cut off from the citizen order a man with whom he went partner even in children; and on the other, that these brothers should find a second father in him who had ruined their first.

But it was highly just in Tullus, after having been appointed sole heir by his brother, in preference to the latter's own daughter, to make her amends by giving her this estate which came to him from Afer, as well as all the rest which he possessed in common with his brother. His will therefore is the more praise-worthy, since it follows the dictates of family affection, integrity and honour; since, finally, he has therein acknowledged his obligations to all his relatives by marriage, according to their respective good offices. He has made a similar acknowledgement to his wife, having bequeathed to that excellent and much-enduring spouse his delightful villas, besides a magis est reprehensa, quod nupsit. Nam mulier natalibus clara, moribus proba, aetate declivis, diu vidua, mater olim parum decore secuta matrimoniunm videbatur divitis senis ita perditii morbo, ut esse taedio posset uxor, quam iuvenis sanusque duxisset.

Quippe omnibus membris extortus et fractus tantas opes solis oculis obibat ac ne in lectulo quidem nisi ab aliis movebatur. Quin etiam (foedum miserandumque dictu) dentes lavandos fricandosque praebebat. Audition frequenter ex illo, cum quereretur de contumeliis debilitatis suae, digitos se servorum suorum quotidie lingere. Vivebat tamen et vivere volebat sustentante maxime uxor, quae culpam inchoati matrimonii in gloriam perseverantia verterat.

Habes omnes fabulas urbis; nam sunt omnes fabulae Tullus. Exspectatur auctio. Fuit enim tam copiosus, ut amplissimos hortos eodem, quo emerat, die instruxerit plurimis et antiquissimis statuis. Tantum illi pulcherrimorum operum in horreis, quae neglegebantur. Invicem tu, si quid istic epistula large sum of money. And indeed, she deserved so much the more at his hands, as she was highly censured for her marriage with him. It was thought indecorous for a woman of her high birth and character, long widowed of a husband by whom she had issue, to marry in her declining years a rich old man, who was so hopelessly diseased, that even a wife whom he had wedded in his youth and health might well have grown weary of him.

He had so entirely lost the use of all his limbs, that he could not move himself in bed without assistance; and all the enjoyment he had of his riches, was only to contemplate them. He was even reduced to the wretched necessity (which indeed one cannot mention without loathing as well as lamenting) of having his teeth washed and cleansed by others; and he used frequently to say, when he was complaining of the indecencies which his infirmities obliged him to suffer, that he was every day forced to lick his servants' fingers. Still, however, he lived, and was willing to accept of life which was mainly preserved to him by his wife, who, whatever censure she might incur by contracting the alliance, turned it to praise by her steadfast loyalty afterwards.

Now I have given you all the gossip of the town, where nothing is talked of but Tullus. We are all eagerly awaiting the sale of his effects. For he was so large a collector that he adorned a vast pleasure ground with a quantity of antique statuary the very day he purchased it, so numerous were the exquisite works of art which lay neglected in his granaries. If you have any local news worth communicating in return, I hope you will not refuse the trouble of dignum, ne gravare scribere.\(^1\) Nam cum aures hominum novitate laetantur, tum ad rationem vitae exemplis erudimur. Vale.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XIX

C. PLINIUS MAXIMO SUO S.

Et gaudium mihi et solacium in litteris, nihilque tam laetum, quod his laetius, tam triste, quod non per has sit minus triste. Itaque et infirmitate uxoris, et meorum periculo, quorundam vero etiam morte turbatus ad unicum doloris levamentum studia confugi, quae praestant, ut adversa magis intellegam, sed patientius feram. Est autem mihi moris, quod sum daturus in manus hominum, ante amicorum iudicio examinare, in primis tuo. Proinde, si quando, nunc intende libro, quem cum hac epistula accipies, quia vereor, ne ipse ut tristis parum intenderim. Imperare enim dolori, ut scriberem, potui, ut vacuo animo laetoque, non potui. Porro ut ex studiis gaudium sic studia hilaritate proveniunt. Vale.

XX

C. PLINIUS GALLO SUO S.

Ad quae noscenda iter ingredi, transmittere mare solemus, ea sub oculis posita neglegimus, seu quia

\(^1\) scribere add. a.
BOOK VIII. xviii.–xx writing to me: not only as we all love to hear some new thing, but because our moral education is promoted by examples. Farewell.

XIX

To Maximus

Literature proves both an entertainment and consolation to me; and as there is no pleasure I prefer to it, so there is no pain it does not alleviate. Accordingly, distracted as I am by my wife's ill-health, the dangerous sickness of some of my servants, and the death of others, I fly to my studies, those sovereign composers of my grief. It is true, they give me a keener perception of misfortunes, but they teach me too how to bear them more patiently. It is an established rule with me, before I publish anything, to take the judgement of my friends upon it, especially yours. I beg therefore you would examine the speech I here send you with particular care, as I am afraid my dejection may have prevented me from doing so myself. For though I could command my grief so far as to write, I could not master it enough to write with ease and cheerfulness. Moreover, if study promotes a pleasing serenity, so does a cheerful mood promote study. Farewell.

XX

To Gallus

Those works of art or nature which are usually the motives of our travels by land or sea, are often overlooked and neglected if they lie within our
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

ita natura comparatum, ut proximorum incuriosi longinqua sectemur, seu quod omnium rerum cupidum languescit, cum facilis occasio, seu quod differimus tamquam sæpe visuri, quod datur videre, quoties velis cernere. Quacunque de causa permulta in urbe nostra iuxtaque urbem non oculis modo, sed ne auribus quidem novimus, quae si tulisset Achaia, Aegyptus, Asia aliave quaelibet miraculorum ferax commendatrixque terra, audita, perlecta, lustrata haberemus.

Ipse certe nuper, quod nec audieram ante nec videram, audivi pariter et vidi. Exegerat prosocer meus, ut Amerina praedia sua inspicerem. Haec perambulanti mihi ostenditur subiacens lacus nomine Vadimonis; simul quaedam incredibilitia narrantur. Perveni ad ipsum. Lacus est in similitudinem iacentis rotae circumscriptus et undique aequalis; nullus sinus, obliquitas nulla, omnia dimensa, paria et quasi artificis manu cavata et excisa. Color caeruleo albidior, viridior et pressior, sulphuris odor saporque medicatus, vis, qua fracta solidantur. Spatium modicum, quod tamen sentiat ventos et fluctibus intumescat. Nulla in hoc navis (sacer enim), sed innatant insulae herbidae omnes arundine et iunco a "The water, as it evaporated, depositing a crust of sulphurous or calcareous character" (Merrill).

154
reach; whether it be that we are naturally less inquisitive concerning those things which are near us, while we are pushed forward in pursuit of remote objects; or because the easiness of gratifying a desire is always sure to damp it; or, perhaps, that we defer from time to time viewing what we know we have an opportunity of seeing when we please. Whatever the reason be, it is certain there are several rarities in and near Rome which we have not only never seen, but even never so much as heard of: and yet if they had been the produce of Greece, or Egypt, or Asia, or any other country which offers us a rich display of wonders, we would long since have heard about them, read about them, and surveyed them ourselves.

For myself at least, I confess, I have lately become acquainted with one of these curiosities, to which I was an entire stranger before. My wife's grandfather desired I would view his estate near Ameria. As I was walking over his grounds I was shewn a lake that lies below them, called Vadimon, and given at the same time an incredible account of it. So I went close up to this lake. It is formed exactly circular; there is not the least obliquity or winding, but all is regular and even as if it had been hollowed and cut out by the hand of art. The colour of its water is a whitish-blue, verging upon green, and somewhat cloudy; it has the odour of sulphur and a strong medicinal taste, and possesses the property of cementing fractures. Though it is but of moderate extent, yet the winds have a great effect upon it, throwing it into violent commotions. No vessels are suffered to sail here, as its waters are held sacred; but several grassy islands swim about it, covered tectae, quaeque alia fecundior palus ipsaque illa extremitas lacus effert. Sua cuique figura ut modus; cunctis margo derasus, quia frequenter vel litori vel sibi illisae terunt terunturque. Par omnibus altitudo, par levitas; quippe in speciem carinae humili radice descendunt. Haec ab omni latere perspicitur eademque suspensa pariter et mersa. Interdum iunctae copulataeque et continenti similes sunt, interdum discordantibus ventis digeruntur; non numquam destitutae tranquillitate singulae fluitant.
Saepe minores maioribus velut cumbulae onerariis adhaerescunt, saepe inter se maiores minoresque quasi cursum certamenque desumunt; rursus omnes in eundem locum adpulsae, qua steterunt, promovent terram et modo hac, modo illac lacum reddunt auferuntque ac tum demum, cum medium tenuere, non contrahunt. Constat pecora herbas secuta sic in insulas illas ut in extremam ripam procedere solere nec prius intellegere mobile solum, quam litori abrepta quasi illata et imposita circumfusum undique lacum paveant, mox, quo tulerit ventus, egressa non magis se descendisse sentire, quam senserint ascendisse. Idem lacus in flumen egeritur, quod, ubi se paulisper oculis dedit, specu mergitur alteque con-

156
with reeds and rushes, and whatever other plants the more prolific neighbouring marsh and the borders of the lake produce. No two are alike in size or shape; but the edges of all of them are worn away by their frequent collision against the shore and one another. They have all the same depth, and the same buoyancy; for their shallow bases are formed like the hull of a boat. This formation is distinctly visible from every point of view; the hull lies half above and half below the water. Sometimes the islands cluster together and seem to form one entire little continent; sometimes they are dispersed by veering winds; at times, when it is calm, they desert their station and float up and down separately.

You may frequently see one of the larger islands sailing along with a lesser joined to it, like a ship with its long boat; or perhaps, seeming to strive which shall outswim the other; then again all are driven to one spot of the shore, which they thus advance, and now here, now there, diminish or restore the area of the lake; only ceasing to contract it anywhere, when they occupy the centre. Cattle have often been known, while grazing, to advance upon those islands as upon the border of the lake, without perceiving that they are on moving ground, till, being carried away from shore they are alarmed by finding themselves surrounded with water, as if they had been put on board ship; and when they presently land wherever the wind drives them ashore, they are no more sensible of disembarking than they had been of embarking. This lake empties itself into a river, which after running a little way above ground, sinks ditum meat ac si quid, antequam subduceretur, accepit, servat et profert.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Haec tibi scripsi, quia nec minus ignota quam mihi nec minus grata credebam. Nam te quoque, ut me, nihil aeque ac naturae opera delectant. Vale.

XXI

C. PLINIUS ARRIANO SUO S.

Ut in vita sic in studiis pulcherrimum et humanissimum aestimo severitatem comitatemque miscere, ne illa in tristitiam, haec in petulantiam excedat. Qua ratione ductus graviora opera lusibus iocisque distinguo. Ad hos proferendos et tempus et locum opportunissimum elegi, utque iam nunc adsuescerent et ab otiosis et in triclinio audiri, Iulio mense, quo maxime lites interquiescunt, positis ante lectos cathedris amicos collocavi.

Forte accidit, ut eo die mane in advocationem subitam rogaret, quod mihi causam praeloquendi dedit. Sum enim deprecatus, ne quis ut irreverentem operis argueret, quod recitaturus, quamquam et amicis et paucis, idem iterum amicis, foro et negotiis a Apparently that the guests might jot down comments during the reading.

---

158
into a cavern and pursues a subterraneous course and if anything is thrown in brings it up again where the stream emerges.

I have given you this account because I imagined it would not be less new, nor less agreeable to you than it was to me; as I know you take the same unique pleasure as myself, in contemplating the works of nature. Farewell.

XXI

To Arrianus

Nothing, in my opinion, gives a more amiable and becoming grace to our studies, as well as our manners, than to temper gravity with gaiety, lest the former should degenerate into austereness, and the latter run up into levity. Upon this maxim it is, that I diversify my more serious works with light and playful effusions. I had chosen a convenient place and season to introduce some of these; and designing to accustom them early to a disengaged audience, and to the dinner table, I invited my friends in July, when the courts of justice are usually shut up, and I placed writing-desks before their dining-couches.¹

But as I happened that morning to be suddenly called on to plead a cause, I took occasion to preface my recital with an apology. I begged my audience not to infer that I slighted the affair in hand, because when on the point of reading my works, though merely to a small circle of friends, I had not kept clear of other friends and of legal business. I non abstinuissem. Addidi hunc ordinem me et in scribendo sequi, ut necessitates voluptatibus, seria iucundis anteferrrem ac primum amicis, tum mihi scriberem.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Liber fuit et opusculis varius et metris. Ita solemnus, qui ingenio parum fidimus, satietatis periculum fugere. Recitavi biduo. Hoc adsensus audientium exegit. Et tamen, ut alii transeunt quaedam imputantque, quod transeant, sic ego nihil praetereo atque etiam non praeterire me, testor. Lego enim omnia, ut omnia emendem, quod contingere non potest electa recitantibus. At illud modestius et fortasse reverentius. Sed hoc simplicius et amantius. Amat enim, qui se sic amari putat, ut taedium non pertimescat; et alioqui quid praestant sodales, si conveniunt voluptatis suae causa? Delicatus ac similis ignoto est, qui amici librum bonum mavult audire quam facere.

Non dubito cupere te pro cetera mei caritate quam maturissime legere hunc adhuc musteum librum. Leges, sed retractatum, quae causa recitandi fuit; et tamen nonnulla iam ex eo nosti. Haec vel emendata postea vel, quod interdum longiore mora solet, deteriora facta quasi nova rursus et rescripta 160.
added that I observed the same rule, as an author, of giving precedence to the necessary over the entertaining, the preference to the grave over the gay, and of writing for my friends first, myself afterwards.

The poems I read composed a variety of subjects and measures. It is thus that we, who dare not rely upon the single force of our genius, endeavour to avoid giving our readers satiety. In compliance with the unanimous demand of my audience, I read for two days successively. And this although, just as others omit their less shining passages, and make a merit of doing so, I omit nothing, and actually affirm that fact. I read the whole, that I may correct the whole; which it is impossible those who only read select passages should do. True, the latter plan is more modest, perhaps more respectful; but the former is more artless and affectionate. For to be so confident of your friends' affection that you feel no dread of wearying them, is a sure indication of your own. Besides, what good do your company do you if they assemble merely with a view to their own entertainment. He who had rather find his friend's performance correct, than make it so, is to be considered as a stranger, or one who is too indolent to give himself any trouble.

Your affection for me leaves me no room to doubt, that you are impatient to read my yet unripened book. You shall do so, when I have corrected it; which was indeed the design of my recital. You are already acquainted with some parts of it; but even those, after they have been polished (or perhaps spoiled, as is sometimes the case by over-keeping) will seem new to you. For when a composition

XXII

C. PLINIUS GEMINIO SUO S.

Nostine hos, qui omnium libidinum servi sic aliorum vitiiis irascentur, quasi invidiunt, et gravissime puniunt, quos maxime imitantur? cum eos etiam, qui non indigent clementia ullius, nihil magis quam lenitas deceat. Atque ego optimum et emendatissimum existimo, qui ceteris ita ignoscit, tamquam ipse quotidie peccet, ita peccatis abstinet, tamquam nemini ignoscat. Proinde hoc domi, hoc foris, hoc in omni vitae genere teneamus, ut nobis implacabiles simus, exorabiles istis etiam, qui dare veniam nisi sibi nesciunt, mandemusque memoriae, quod vir mitissimus et ob hoc quoque maximus, Thrasea, crebro dicere solebat: 'Qui vitia odit, homines odit.'

Quaeris fortasse, quo commotus haec scribam. Nuper quidam—sed melius coram; quamquam ne tunc quidem. Vereor enim, ne id, quod improbo, eos sectari, carpere, referre huic, quod cum maxime praecipimus, repugnet. Quisquis ille, qualiscunque, sileatur, quem insignire exempli nihil, non insignire, humanitatis plurimum refert. Vale.

162
BOOK VIII. xxi.–xxii

has been extensively altered, it contracts an air of novelty even in those parts which remain untouched. Farewell.

XXII

To Germinius

Have you ever observed a sort of people, who, though they are themselves slaves to every lust, shew a kind of jealous resentment against the vices of others; and are most severe upon those whom they most resemble? yet, surely tolerance, even in persons who have the least occasion for clemency themselves, is of all virtues the most becoming. To my mind, the best and most faultless character is his, who is as ready to pardon the rest of mankind, as though he daily transgressed himself; and at the same time as cautious to avoid a fault, as if he never forgave one. Be it our rule, then, at home, abroad, and in every sphere of conduct to be relentless to ourselves, placable to others, even such as forgive no failings but their own; remembering always what the humane, and therefore, as well as upon other accounts, the great Thrasea used frequently to say: "He who hates vice, hates mankind."

You will ask, perhaps what has moved me to these reflections? The other day, a certain person—but of that when we meet—though upon second thoughts, not even then, lest whilst I inveigh against and expose conduct I disapprove, I should act counter to that maxim I particularly recommend. Who therefore, and what he is, shall remain in silence: for to brand the man would point no moral, while to refrain is to take the side of humanity. Farewell.
C. PLINIUS MARCELLINUS SUO S.

Omnia mihi studia, omnes curas, omnia avocamenta exemit, excussit, eripuit dolor, quem ex morte Iuni Aviti gravissimum cepi. Latum clavum in domo mea induerat, suffragio meo adiutus in petendis honoribus fuerat, ad hoc ita me diligebat, ita verebatur, ut me formatore morum, me quasi magistro uteretur. Rarum hoc in adulescentibus nostris. Nam quotusquisque vel aetati alterius vel auctoritati ut minor cedit? Statim sapiunt, statim sciunt omnia, neminem verentur, imitantur neminem atque ipsi sibi exempla sunt.

Sed non Avitus, cuius haec praecipua prudentia, quod alios prudentiores arbitrabatur, haec praecipua eruditio, quod discere volebat. Semper ille aut de studiis aliquid aut de officiis vitae consulebat, semper ita recedebat ut melior factus et erat factus vel eo, quod audierat, vel quod omnino quaesierat.

Quod ille obsequium Serviano, exactissimo viro, praestitit! quem legatum tribunus ita et intellexit et cepit, ut ex Germania in Pannoniam transeuntem non ut commilito, sed ut comes adsectatorque sequeretur. Qua industria, qua modestia quaestor

\(^a\) ii. 9, note.
BOOK VIII. xxiii

XXIII

To Marcellinus

The deep concern I am under for the death of Junius Avitus, has rendered me incapable of business, study or amusement. He was invested with the laticlave in my house; my interest supported him whenever he stood for office; more than that, his affection and esteem for me were so great that he formed his manners and regulated his conduct by my example and direction. An uncommon proceeding, this, with the youth of our day; for which of them pays submission as an inferior to age or authority? These young gentlemen begin life as sages, and know everything from the first; there is no one they revere or imitate, as they are their own models.

But not so Avitus; he especially shewed his wisdom, in believing there were some who had more; and discovered his knowledge, in his desire to learn. He constantly sought advice on points relating to his studies, or his duties in life, and always went away with the feeling of being morally improved; and improved he was, if not by the advice he received, by the mere act of seeking it.

How implicitly he obeyed that strict disciplinarian, Servianus! During the latter's command as Legate, Avitus, who was tribune under him, so fully learnt his merit, and so endeared himself to him, that when Servianus was transferred from Germany to Pannonioid, he attended him, not as a fellow-officer, but as a friend and admirer. How diligent, how respectful, he must have been as Quaestor, to make himself no consulibus suis (et plures habuit) non minus iucundus et gratus quam utilis fuit! Quo discursu, qua vigilantia hanc ipsam aedilitatem, cui praereptus est, petiit! quod vel maxime dolorem meum exulcerat.

Accedit lacrimis meis, quod absens et impenentis mali nescius pariter aegrum, pariter descessisse cognovi, ne gravissimo dolori timore consuescerem. In tantis tormentis eram, cum scriberem haec, scriberem sola; neque enim nunc aliud aut cogitare aut loqui possum. Vale.

---

a Lit. "had taken up from the ground"; the ceremony by which a father admitted a new-born child (which he had the right to rear or not, as he pleased) into the family.
less pleasing and acceptable, than useful, to the several Consuls he served under! With what energy and vigilance did he canvass for this very aedileship, from which he is now prematurely snatched—a circumstance that intensely aggravates my grief!

His wasted labours, his fruitless solicitations, and the office which he only merited, never enjoyed, are ever in my mind's eye. That memorable investiture of the laticlave under my roof; the first and the last occasions of my supporting his candidature; the conversations we have had, and the consultations we have held, all return fresh upon my mind. I am affected by his own youth, and the misfortune of his family. He had an aged parent; a wife, who was his virgin bride only a year ago; a daughter, whom he had only lately given a father's first embrace: so many pleasing hopes, so many tender joys, were all reversed and destroyed in one day! When he was just elected aedile; when he was lately commenced husband and father, he had to leave his office untasted, his mother childless, his wife a widow, his daughter a mere infant, never to know a father's love.

But what increases my tears upon this melancholy occasion is that, being absent and unconscious of the impending stroke, I never knew of his sickness, till I heard of his death, and had no time to prepare myself for this cruel blow, by previously apprehending it! Such is the distress of my mind as I communicate these tidings. You must not wonder then that they are the whole subject of my letter; for I am not able at present to think or talk of anything else. Farewell.
Amor in te meus cogit, non ut praecipiam (neque enim praeeptore eges), admoneam tamen, ut, quae scis, teneas et observes aut scias melius.

Cogita te missum in provinciam Achaiam, illam veram et meram Graeciam, in qua primum humanitas, litterae, etiam fruges inventae esse creduntur, missum ad ordinandum statum liberarum civitatum, id est ad homines maxime homines, ad liberos maxime liberos, qui ius a natura datum virtute, meritis, amicitia, foedere denique et religione tenuerunt.

Reverere conditores deos et numina deorum, reverere gloriam veterem et hanc ipsam senectutem, quae in homine venerabilis, in urbibus sacra. Sit apud te honor antiquitati, sit ingentibus factis, sit fabulis quoque. Nihil ex cuiusquam dignitate, nihil ex libertate, nihil ex iactatione decerpsis. Habe ante oculos hanc esse terram, quae nobis miserit iura, quae leges non victis, sed petentibus dederit, Athenas esse, quas adeas, Lacedaemonem esse, quam regas; quibus reliquam umbram et residuum libertatis nomen eripere durum, ferum, barbarum est. Vides a medicis, a Achaia is so called in contrast to the province of Macedonia, not only as including most of Greece proper, but because it contained Athens and Sparta.

---

b i.e. enjoying nominal independence, and more or less autonomy under Roman rule.

c i.e. the "Laws of the Twelve Tables" (451–50 B.C.) on which the whole of Roman jurisprudence was founded. Previous to framing this code, the Romans sent commissioners to study the laws of the chief Greek cities.
XXIV

To MAXIMUS

The love I bear you obliges me to give you, not indeed a precept (for you are far from needing a preceptor), but a reminder that you should resolutely act up to the knowledge you already have, or else improve it. Consider that you are sent to the province of Achaia, that real, genuine Greece, where politeness, learning, and even agriculture itself, are supposed to have first arisen. You are commissioned to superintend the affairs of free states; in other words, of men who are in the fullest sense men, and freemen who are in the highest sense free; who have maintained the right they received from Nature, by courage, by virtue, by friendship—in fine, by civil treaties and religious sanctions.

You will revere their Divine Founders, and the workings of divine powers among them; their ancient glory, and even their very age, which as it is venerable in men, in states it is sacred. Cherish sentiments of respect for their antiquity, their colossal achievements, and even for their legends. Let no man's dignity, liberty, or vanity, suffer the least diminution at your hands. Remember it was from this land we derived our legal code, that she gave us laws not by right of conquest, but as a favour. Remember it is Athens you approach; it is Lacedaemon you govern; and to snatch from such a people the shadow that remains, the name that is left, of their freedom, would be a harsh, cruel, nay, barbarous, act. Physicians, you see, though in
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

quamquam in adversa valetudine nihil servi ac liberi differant, mollius tamen liberos clementiusque tractari.

Recordare, quid quaeque civitas fuerit, non ut despicias, quod esse desierit; absit superbia, asperitas.
Nec timueris contemptum. An contemnitis, qui imperium, qui fasces habet, nisi humilis et sordidus, et qui se primus ipse contemnis? Male vim suam potestas aliorum contumeliis experitur, male terrore veneratio adquiritur, longeque valentior amor ad obtinendum, quod velis, quam timor. Nam timor abit, si recedas, manet amor: ac sicut ille in odium hic in reverentiam vertitur.

Te vero etiam atque etiam (repetam enim) meminisse oportet officii tui titulum ac tibi ipsi interpre-tari, quale quantumque sit ordinare statum liberarum civitatum. Nam quid ordinatione civilius, quid libertate pretiosius? Porro quam turpe, si ordinatio eversione, libertas servitute mutetur!

Accedit, quod tibi certamen est tecum. Onerat te quaesturae tuae fama, quam ex Bithynia optimam revexisti, onerat testimonium principis, onerat tribunatus, praetura atque haec ipsa legatio quasi praemium data. Quo magis nitendum est, ne in longinquas provincia quam suburbana, ne inter servientes quam

a i.e. of local rights and institutions.

170
sickness there is no difference between slaves and freemen, yet give the latter milder and more gentle treatment.

Recollect each city's former greatness, but not so as to despise her for having lost it. Far be pride and asperity from my friend; nor fear that a proper condescension can breed contempt. Can he who is vested with the powers and bears the ensigns of the state—can he be contemned, unless he is a low, sordid being, and sets the example by his self-contempt? To put affronts upon others is an ill way of testing the force of your authority; ill-gotten the homage inspired by terror; and love will help you to gain your ends far more effectually than fear. For while fear departs the moment you withdraw your presence, love abides! and as fear turns to hatred, so does love to respect.

It behoves you then (I cannot but repeat it), to recall again and again the terms of your commission, and to make yourself clearly comprehend the nature and importance of your task as comptroller of free states. For what is more constitutional than such control, or more precious than liberty? How infamous, then, his conduct, who transforms controlling into overturning and liberty into slavery!

Moreover, you are your own rival. The reputation of having been an admirable Quaestor, which you brought home from Bithynia; the approbation of the Emperor; your conduct as Tribune and Praetor; in a word, this very mission, which may be looked upon as the reward of your services—all these are so many weighty responsibilities. So much the more must you endeavour to avoid the imputation, that you showed more honesty, sympathy, and liberos, ne forte quam iudicio missus, ne rudis et incognitus quam exploratus probatusque humanior, melior, peritior fuisse videaris, cum sit alioqui, ut saepe audisti, saepe legisti, multo deformius amittere quam non adsequi laudem.

Haec velim credas, quod initio dixi scripsisse me admonentem, non praecipientem; quamquam praecipientem quoque. Quippe non vereor, in amore ne modum exsserim. Neque enim periculum est, ne sit nimium, quod esse maximum debet. Vale.

\[a\] sc. of the Emperor, by whose appointment Maximus was sent to Greece.
skill in a remote, than in a suburban province; among a subject, than among a free people; when you held office by lot, than when you did so by deliberate choice; whilst you were still a novice and unknown, than after you had been tried and tested. For, speaking generally, the maxim you have often heard and read holds true—'tis far more disfiguring to lose, than to lack, men's praises.

Pray believe, what I began by saying, that I have written as your monitor, not your preceptor, though I have played the preceptor also. For, to be sure, I am not afraid of carrying affection beyond its just limits: since there cannot be any danger of excess where we ought to advance as far as possible.
Farewell.
BOOK IX
LIBER NONUS

I

C. PLINIUS MAXIMO SUO S.

Sæpe te monui, ut libros, quos vel pro te vel in Plantam, immo et pro te et in illum (ita enim materia cogebat) composuisti, quam maturissime emitteres, quod nunc præcipue morte eius audita et hortor et moneo. Quamvis enim legeris multis legendosque dederis, nolo tamen quemquam opinari defuncto demum inchoatos, quos incolumi eo peregisti. Salva sit tibi constantiae fama. Erit autem, si notum aequis iniquisque fuerit non post inimici mortem scribendi tibi natam esse fiduciam, sed iam paratam editionem morte praeventam. Simul vitabis illud

'Oîx ὁσίῃ φθιμένοις.'

Nam, quod de vivente scriptum, de vivente recitatum

\[ ^{a} \text{Odyss. 23. 412.} \]

176
BOOK IX

I

To MAXIMUS

I have frequently recommended it to you, to be as expeditious as possible in publishing what you have written either in defence of yourself, or against Planta; or rather indeed (as your materials demanded) what you drew up with both those views: but I particularly press this advice upon you now that I hear he is dead. For though you read this piece to several of your friends, and put it into the hands of others, yet I should regret extremely, that the world should suspect you only began after his death, what it is most certain you had finished during his life. Let not the character my friend has acquired of firmness and resolution be called in question. And it will; unless both the candid and the malicious shall know, that the death of your adversary did not give you confidence to compose this piece, but merely forestalled the appearance of a work you were on the point of giving to the world. And thus you will also avoid the imputation,

"With impious joy to triumph o'er the dead." a

For what you wrote and recited on the subject of a living personage, will be considered as published so est, in defunctum quoque tamquam viventem adhuc editur, si editur statim. Igitur, si quid aliud in manibus, interim differ; hoc perfice, quod nobis, qui legimus, olim absolutum videtur. Sed iam videatur et tibi, cuius cunctationem nec res ipsa desideret et temporis ratio praecidit. Vale.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

II

C. PLINIUS SABINO SUO S.

Facis iucunde, quod non solum plurimas epistulas meas, verum etiam longissimas flagitas; in quibus parcior fui, partim quia tuas occupationes verebar, partim quia ipse multum distingebar plerumque frigidis negotiis, quae simul et avocant animum et comminuunt. Praeterea nec materia plura scribendi dabatur. Neque enim eadem nostra condicio quae M. Tulli, ad cuius exemplum nos vocas. Illi enim et copiosissimum ingenium et ingenio qua varietas rerum qua magnitudo largissime suppetebat, nos quam angustis terminis claudamur, etiam tacente me perspicis, nisi forte volumus scholasticas tibi atque, ut ita dicam, umbraticas litteras mittere. Sed nihil minus aptum arbitramur, cum arma vestra, cum castra, cum denique cornua, tubas, sudorem, pulverem, soles cogitamus. Habes, ut puto, iustam 178 too, provided you publish it at once. If therefore you have any other work upon your hands, let me intreat you to lay it aside, and give your last finishing touches to this performance. It seemed to me, indeed, when I formerly read it, to want no improvements; and so let it now seem to you; as neither the thing itself requires, nor the occasion will admit, of any farther delay. Farewell.

II

To Sabinus

Your request that I would write to you not only very frequent, but very long letters, is extremely agreeable to me. If I have forborne to do so, it is partly in consideration of your being much occupied, and partly from some very cold and uninteresting engagements of my own, which distract and at the same time dissipate my ideas. Besides I had not sufficient matter for frequent letters; and am by no means in the same situation that Tully was, whom you point out to me as an example. He not only possessed a most enlarged genius, but the times wherein he lived furnished a variety of noble occasions for exercising it. As for myself, you know (without my telling you) to what narrow limits I am confined; unless I should take into my head to write you rhetorical, and what I might call, armchair letters. But nothing seems to me more out of place, when I imagine you in the midst of arms and encampments, in short, inflamed with martial music and toiling in dust and heat. This is my apology, and I think a
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

III

C. PLINIUS PAULINO SUO S.

Alius alium, ego beatissimum existimo, qui bonae mansuraeque famae praesumptione perfruitur certus-que posteritatis cum futura gloria vivit. Ac mihi nisi præmium aeternitatis ante oculos, pingue illud altumque otium placeat. Etenim omnes homines arbitror oportere aut immortalitatem suam aut mortalitatem cogitare, et illos quidem contendere, eniti, hos quiescere, remitti nec brevem vitam caducis laboribus fatigare, ut video multos, misera simul et ingrata imagine industrie ad vilitatem sui pervenire. Haec ego tecum, quae quotidie mecum, ut desinam mecum, si dissenties tu; quamquam non dissenties, ut qui semper clarum aliquid et immortale mediteris. Vale.

a Cf. Cowley:

"What shall I do to be for ever known,
And make the age to come my own?"
BOOK IX. ii.–iii

reasonable one; however, I almost wish you would not accept it. For to reject a friend's excuses for writing briefly, be they ever so just, bespeaks the warmest affection. Farewell.

III

To Paulinus

Mankind differ in their notions of supreme happiness; but in my opinion it consists in the foretaste of an honest and abiding fame, the assurance of being admired by posterity, the realization, while yet living, of future glory. I confess if I had not the reward of an immortal reputation in view, I should choose to live in the lap of Leisure, as people say. There seem to be but two points worthy our attention; either the endless duration of fame, or the short extent of life. Those who are governed by the former consideration, must pursue it with the full exertion of the most laborious efforts; while such as are influenced by the latter should quietly resign themselves to repose, nor wear out a short life in perishable pursuits: as some, we may observe, do, and then sink at last into self-contempt, in the midst of a wretched and fruitless course of false industry. These are my daily reflections, which I communicate to you, in order to renounce them if you do not join with me in the same sentiments: as undoubtedly you will, who are for ever meditating some glorious and immortal enterprise. Farewell.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

IV

C. PLINIUS MACRINO SUO S.

V

C. PLINIUS TIRONI SUO S.

Egregie facis (inquirò enim, et persevere) quod iustitiam tuam provincialibus multa humanitate commendas; cuius praecipua pars est honestissimum quemque complecti atque ita a minoribus amari, ut simul a principibus diligare. Plerique autem, dum verentur, ne gratiae potentium nimium impertire videantur, sinisteritatis atque etiam malignitatis famam consequuntur. A quo vitio tu longe recessisti (scio), sed temperare mihi non possum, quo minus 182
BOOK IX. iv.–v

IV

To Macrinus

I should fear you would think the oration which you receive with this letter, immoderately long, but that it is of such a nature as to require several breaks; and as it consists of different charges, has the appearance of so many distinct speeches. Wherever therefore you begin or end, you may consider what follows, either as connected with what went before, or making of itself a new subject; so that you may look upon it as very long upon the whole, and yet as extremely short with respect to its particular parts. Farewell.

V

To Tiro

You are to be highly applauded for the courtesy by which as I am informed (and I make very strict enquiry), you commend your administration of justice to the people of your province; one principal branch of which virtue is to distinguish merit in every degree, and so to gain the love of the lower rank, as to preserve at the same time the regard of their superiors. But it is an error many have fallen into, that while they endeavour to avoid the appearance of favouring the great, they run into the contrary extreme, and gain the character of acting with ill manners, or ill nature. A mistake this, which you are far from committing, I well know: however, I cannot forbear throwing in a caution with laudem similis monenti, quod eum modum tenes, ut discrimina ordinum dignitatumque custodias; quae si confusa, turbata, permixta sunt, nihil est ipsa aequalitate inaequalius. Vale.

VI

C. Plinius Calvisio Suo S.

Omne hoc tempus inter pugillares ac libellos iucundissima quiete transmisi. 'Quem ad modum,' inquis, 'in urbe potuisti?' Circenses erant; quo genere spectaculi ne levissime quidem teneor. Nihil novum, nihil varium, nihil quod non semel spectasse sufficiat. Quo magis miror tot milia virorum tam pueriliter identidem cupere currentes equos, insistentes curribus homines videre. Si tamen aut velocitate equorum aut hominum arte traherentur, esset ratio nonnulla; nunc favent panno, pannum amant, et si in ipso cursu medioque certamine hic color illuc, ille hue transferatur, studium favorque transibit, et repente agitatores illos, equos illos, quos procul noscitant, quorum clamitant nomina, relinquunt.

Tanta gratia, tanta auctoritas in una vilissima

* The games in the Circus Maximus, chiefly consisting of chariot-races, for which the Roman people had the same passion as the English now have for football matches.
my applause, and recommending it to you, to conduct yourself in such a manner as to keep up the distinctions of rank and dignity. For to level and confound the different orders of mankind, is far from producing an equality among them; it is, in truth, the most unequal thing imaginable. Farewell.

VI

To Calvisius

I have spent these several days past among my papers with the most pleasing tranquillity imaginable. You will ask how that can possibly be in the midst of Rome? Why, the Circensian Games were taking place; a kind of entertainment for which I have not the least taste. They have no novelty, no variety, nothing, in short, one would wish to see twice. I am the more astonished that so many thousands of grown men should be possessed again and again with a childish passion to look at galloping horses, and men standing upright in their chariots. If, indeed, they were attracted by the swiftness of the horses or the skill of the men, one could account for this enthusiasm. But in fact it is a bit of cloth they favour, a bit of cloth that captivates them. And if during the running the racers were to exchange colours, their partisans would change sides, and instantly forsake the very drivers and horses whom they were just before recognizing from afar, and clamorously saluting by name.

Such favour, such weighty influence, hath one

The elder Pliny (N.H. xxxvi. 102) says that the Circus Maximus, as enlarged by Nero, held 250,000 spectators.
tunica, mitto apud vulgus, quod vilius tunica, sed apud quosdam graves homines; quos ego cum recordor in re inani, frigida, adsidua tam insatiabiliter desidere, capio aliquam voluptatem, quod hac volup-tate non capior. Ac per hos dies libentissime otium meum in litteris colloco, quos alii otiosissimis occupationibus perdunt. Vale.

VII

C. Plinius Romano Suo S.

Aedificare te scribis. Bene est; inveni patro-cinium; aedifico enim iam ratione, quia tecum. Nam hoc quoque non dissimile, quod ad mare tu, ego ad Larium lacum.

Huius in litore plures villae meae, sed duae ut maxime delectant ita exercent. Altera imposita saxis more Baiano lacum prospicit, altera aeque more Baiano lacum tangit. Itaque illam tragoediam, hanc appellare comoediam soleo; illam, quod quasi cothurnis, hanc quod quasi socculis, sustinetur. Sua utrique amoenitas, et utrique possidenti ipsa diversitate iucundior. Haec lacu propius, illa latius utitur; haec unum sinum molli curvamine

---

* The charioteers and their teams were hired out by rival companies or “factions,” named from the colours of their livery. The “Greens” and “Blues,” introduced in early Imperial times, eclipsed the two older Red and White

BOOK IX. vi.–vii

cheap tunic—never mind it with the vulgar herd, who are more worthless than the tunics they wear—but with certain grave personages. When I observe such men thus insatiably fond of so silly, so low, so uninteresting, so common an entertainment, I congratulate myself that I am insensible to these pleasures: and am glad to devote the leisure of this season to literature, which others throw away upon the most idle employment. Farewell.

VII

To Romanus

Your letter informs me that you are engaged in building; 'tis mighty well; I have now found patronage; for I am doing the same, and since I have you, who shall deny I have reason on my side? We are pretty much agreed likewise, I find, in our situations; as you are building upon the sea-coast, and I beside the Larian lake.

I have several villas upon this shore, but there are two particularly, in which as I take most delight, so they give me the most employment. They are both situated in the manner of those at Baiae; one of them stands upon a rock, and overlooks the lake; the other touches it. The first, supported as it were by the lofty buskin, I call my Tragedy; the other, as resting upon the humble sock, my Comedy. Each has its peculiar beauties, and recommends itself the more to their owner by mere force of contrast. The former enjoys a wider, the latter a nearer prospect of factions, and had frantic partisans among all classes. Caligula and Nero were devotees of the "Greens." See Gibbon, c. xl. 2.
amplectitur, illa editissimo dorso duos dirimit; illie recta gestatio longo limite super litus extenditur, hic spatiosissimo xysto leviter inflectitur; illa fluctus non sentit, haec frangit; ex illa possis despicere piscantes, ex hac ipse piscari hamunque de cubiculo ac paene etiam de lectulo ut e navicula iacere. Hae mihi causae utrique, quae desunt, adstruendi ob ea quae supersunt. Sed quid ego rationem tibi? apud quem pro ratione erit idem facere. Vale.

VIII

C. Plinius Augurino Suo S.

Si laudatus a te laudare te coepero, vereor, ne non tam proferre iudicium meum quam referre gratiam videar. Sed, licet videar, omnia scripta tua pul-cherrima existimo, maxime tamen illa, quae de nobis. Accidit hoc una eademque de causa. Nam et tu, quae de amicis, optime scribis, et ego, quae de me, ut optima lego. Vale.

188
the lake. This follows the gentle curve of a single bay; the salient ridge upon which the other stands, forms two. Here you have a straight alley extending itself along the shore, there, a spacious terrace that falls by a gentle descent towards it. The former does not perceive the force of the waves; the latter breaks them: from that you see the fishermen at work below; from this you may fish yourself, and throw your line out of your chamber, and almost as you lie in bed, as out of a boat. It is the beauties therefore these agreeable villas possess, that tempt me to add to them those which are wanting.—But I need not assign a reason to you; who, undoubtedly, will think it a sufficient one that you are about the same business. Farewell.

VIII

To Augurinus

Were I to begin praising you from whom I have received so much applause, I am afraid I should seem not so much to profess my genuine opinion as to confess my gratitude. Nevertheless I will not scruple to say, that I think all your productions are beautiful, but especially those of which I am the subject. And the same reason will account both for their deserving that character, and for my thinking so: for as on the one hand you ever succeed best when writing about your friends; so, on the other, I always admire most what is written about myself. Farewell.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

IX

C. PLINIUS COLONI SUO S.

Unice probo, quod Pompeii Quintiani morte tam dolenter adsiceris, ut amissi caritatem desiderio extendas, non ut plerique, qui tantum viventes amant, seu potius amare se simulant ac ne simulant quidem, nisi quos florentes vident. Nam miserorum non secus ac defunctorum obliviscuntur. Sed tibi perennis fides tantaque in amore constantia, ut finiri nisi tua morte non possit. Et hercule is fuit Quintianus, quem diligi deceat ipsius exemplo. Felices amabat, miseros tuebatur, desiderabat amissos. Iam illa quanta probitas in ore, quanta in sermone cunctatio, quam pari libra gravitas comitasque! quod studium litterarum, quod iudicium! qua pietate cum dissimillimo patre vivebat! quam non obstabat illi, quo minus vir optimus videretur, quod erat optimus filius!

Sed quid dolorem tuum exulcero? Quamquam sic amasti iuvenem, ut hoc potius quam de illo sileri velis, a me praesertim, cuius praedicatione putas vitam eius ornari, memoriam prorogari, ipsamque illam, qua est raptus, actatem posse restitui. Vale.

190
IX
To Colo

I greatly approve your being so poignantly affected by the death of Pompeius Quintianus, as to keep alive by your regrets your love for a lost friend. Far different from the majority, who love, or rather, who counterfeit love to, none but the living; nor even counterfeit it, save to those whom they see in the height of prosperity! For the unfortunate they forget as quickly as they do the dead. But your fidelity is perennial, and the constancy of your affection can only end with your life. Quintianus, most certainly, well deserved to meet with that generous warmth from his friends, of which he was himself so bright an example. He loved them in prosperity; he protected them in adversity; he lamented them in death. How honest was his countenance! how deliberate his speech! how equally did he hold the balance between dignity and courtesy! how fond was he of learning! how judicious his sentiments! how dutiful his commerce with a father of a very different character! how completely did he surmount the difficulty of proving himself a good son, without forfeiting the title of a good man!

But I must not sharpen your affliction—yet I know your affection for this excellent youth was such, that you had rather endure such a recital, than have his virtues passed over in silence; especially by me, whose applause, you imagine, will adorn his actions, extend his fame, and restore him, as it were, to that life from which he is unhappily snatched. Farewell.

191
C. PLINIUS TACITO SUO S.

Cupio praeceptis tuis parere; sed aprorum tanta penuria est, ut Minervae et Dianae, quas ais pari- ter colendas, convenire non possit. Itaque Minervae tantum serviendum est, delicate tamen ut in secessu et aestate. In via plane non nulla levjora statimque delenda ea garrulitate, qua sermones in vehiculo seruntur, extendi. His quaedam addidi in villa, cum aliud non liberet. Itaque poëmata quiescunt, quae tu inter nemora et lucos commodissime perfici putas. Oratiunculam unam, alteram retractavi; quamquam id genus operis inamabile, inamoenum magisque laboribus ruris quam voluptatibus simile. Vale.

XI

C. PLINIUS GEMINO SUO S.

Epistulam tuam iucundissimam accepi, eo maxime, quod aliquid ad te scribi volebas, quod libris inseri posset. Obveniet materia, vel haec ipsa quam mon-
To Tacitus

I should like extremely well to follow your advice; but there is such a scarcity of boars, that it is impossible to reconcile Minerva with Diana, who, you think, ought to be worshipped together. I must content myself then with paying my service to the former; and even that half-heartedly, considering it is holiday time and summer weather. I composed, indeed, a few trifles in my journey hither, which are only fit to be destroyed, as they are written with the same negligence and inattention that one usually chats upon the road. Since I came to my villa, I have made some few additions to them, not finding myself in a humour for work of more consequence. Thus my poetry, which you imagine is carried on with so much advantage amidst the silence and solemnity of woods and groves, is, in truth, at a stand. I have revised a small oration or two; though that kind of work is disagreeable and unentertaining enough, and has a much nearer affinity with rustic labours, than with rural pleasures. Farewell.

To Geminus

Your letter was particularly agreeable to me, as it mentioned your desire that I would address some epistle to you which might appear in my published correspondence. I shall find matter either in the stras, vel potior alia. Sunt enim in hac offendicula non nulla: circumfer oculos, et occurrent.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Bibliopolas Lugduni esse non putabam, ac tanto libentius ex litteris tuis cognovi venditari libellos meos, quibus peregre manere gratiam, quam in urbe collegerint, delector. Incipio enim satis absolutum existimare, de quo tanta diversitate regionum discreta hominum iudicia consentiunt. Vale.

XII

C. PLINIUS JUNIORI SUO S.

CASTIGABAT quidam filium suum, quod paulo sumptuosius equos et canes emeret. Huic ego iuvene digresso; 'Heus tu, numquamne fecisti, quod a patre corripi posset? fecisti, dico, non interdum facis, quod filius tuus, si repente pater ille, tu filius, pari gravitate reprehendat? Non omnes homines aliquo errore ducuntur? non hic in illo sibi, in hoc alius, indulget?'

Haec tibi admonitus immodicae severitatis exemplo pro amore mutuo scripsi, ne quando tu quoque filium tuum acerbius duriusque tractares. Cogita et illum puero esse et te fuisse atque ita hoc, quod es pater, 194 subject you indicate or some preferable one. For yours contains some points of offence; look about you, and they will be obvious.

As I did not imagine there were any booksellers at Lyons, I am so much the more pleased to learn from your letter that my volumes are sold there. I rejoice to find they retain the favour abroad, which they gained at home; and I begin to flatter myself they are finished compositions, since persons living in entirely different localities are agreed in their sentiments concerning them. Farewell.

XII

To Junior

A certain friend of mine lately corrected his son with great severity before me, for being something too profuse in the article of dogs and horses. “And pray,” said I to him (when the youth was withdrawn), “did you never do anything yourself which deserved your father’s correction? Nay, are you not sometimes even now guilty of acts which your son, were your relations suddenly reversed, might with equal gravity reprove? Are not all mankind subject to errors of some kind? have we not each of us our particular foibles in which we fondly indulge ourselves?”

The great affection subsisting between us, has induced me to set this instance of unreasonable severity before you, as a caution not to treat your son with too much rigour and austerity. Consider he is but a boy, and that there was a time when you utere, ut memineris et hominem esse te et hominis patrem. Vale.

XIII

C. Plinius Quadrato Suo S.

Quanto studiosius intentiusque legisti libros, quos de Helvidi ultione composui, tanto impensius postulas, ut perscribam tibi, quaeque extra libros quaeque circa libros, totum denique ordinem rei, cui per aetatem non interfuisti.

Occiso Domitiano statui mecum ac deliberavi esse magnam pulchramque materiam insectandi nocentes, miserros vindicandi, se proferendi. Porro inter multa scelera multorum nullum atrocius videbatur, quam quod in senatu senator senatori, praetorius consulari, reo iudex manus intulisset. Fuerat alloqui mihi cum Helvidio amicitia, quanta potuerat esse cum eo, qui metu temporum nomen ingens, pares virtutes secessu tegebat, fuerat cum Arria et Fannia, quorum altera Helvidi noverca, altera mater novercae. Sed non ita me iura privata ut publicum fas et indignitas facti et exempli ratio incitabat.

a i.e. his speech against Publicius Certus, revised, enlarged, and divided into “books.” See iv. 21, vii. 30.

b Sept. 18, 96 A.D.

c See iii. 16.

196 were so too. In exerting, therefore, the authority of a father, remember always that you are a man, and the parent of a man. Farewell.

XIII

To Quadratus

The pleasure and attention with which you read my books a On the Avenging of Helvidius, has made you, it seems, more earnest in requesting I would fully inform you of particulars not included in, yet relevant to, my work, and, in short, of the whole course of the affair, as you were too young to witness it.

When Domitian was killed, b I judged, on mature consideration, that a glorious opportunity now offered of pursuing the guilty, vindicating the injured, and advancing one's own career. Further, amidst the many crimes whereof many had been guilty, none appeared to me more atrocious, than that one who was at once an ex-praetor and a judge, a senator, should in the very senate itself have laid violent hands upon a senator and ex-consul, who then stood arraigned before him. Apart from this, I had maintained with Helvidius the closest friendship that was possible with one who, fearing the tyranny of the times, endeavoured to hide his glory and his no less glorious virtues, by a retired life. I had been intimate, too, with Arria and her daughter Fannia, c who was stepmother to Helvidius. But it was not so much private attachments as the rights of the public, indignation at the crime, and the importance of establishing a precedent, that incited me to action.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Ac primis quidem diebus redditae libertatis pro se quisque inimicos suos, dumtaxat minores, incondito turbidoque clamore postulaverant simul et oppresserant. Ego et modestius et constantius arbitratus immanissimum reum non communi temporum invidia, sed proprio crimine urgere, cum iam satis primus ille impetus defervisset et languidior in dies ira ad iustitiam redisset, quamquam tum maxime tristis amissa nuper uxore mitto ad Anteiam (nupta haec Helvidio fuerat), rogo, ut veniat, quia me recens adhuc luctus limine contineret. Ut venit, 'Destinatum est' inquam 'mihi maritum tuum non inultum pati. Nuntia Arriae et Fanniae' (ab exsilio redierant); 'consule te, consule illas, an velitis adscribi facto, in quo ego comite non egeo; sed non ita gloriae meae faverim, ut vobis societate eius invideam.' Perfert Anteia mandata, nec illae morantur.

Opportune senatus intra diem tertium. Omnia ego semper ad Corellium retuli, quem providentissimum aetatis nostrae sapientissimumque cognovi; in hoc tamen contentus consilio meo fui, veritus ne vetaret; erat enim cunctantior cautiorque. Sed non sustinui inducere in animum, quo minus illi eodem die facturum me indicarem, quod an facerem

* i.e. of Nerva's reign.
* Tacitus also uses constans in this sense, Hist. iii. 1, (Church and Brodribb.)
* See x. 2 n.

198
In the first days of restored liberty a every man had singled out his personal enemy (though it must be confessed, those only of a lower rank) and in the midst of much clamour and confusion, no sooner accused, than crushed him. But for myself, I thought it the more moderate and also the more effectual b course against a defendant so steeped in crime, to rely not on the universal detestation of the last reign, but on a specific indictment. When, therefore, that first outburst of rage had fairly subsided and daily declining resentment gave way to justice, though I was at that time saddened by the recent loss of my wife, c I sent to Anteia, the widow of Helvidius, and desired her to come to me, as my recent mourning obliged me to keep at home. When she arrived, "I am resolved," I said, "not to suffer your husband to remain unavenged. Pray make this known to Arria and Fannia" (they had returned from exile), "and consider along with them whether you will jointly lodge an accusation. Not that I want an associate, but I am not so fond of my own renown as to grudge your participating in it." Anteia carried my message to those ladies, who at once embraced the proposal.

It happened very opportunely, that the Senate met the next day but one. I never acted without consulting Corellius, in whom I recognised the most far-seeing and the wisest man of our time. However, in the present case, I contented myself with following my own plan, which I feared he would veto, as he was of a very slow and cautious temper. But I could not prevail with myself to forbear acquainting him, on the day of the event, that I was about to take a step, on which I did not consult non deliberabam, expertus usu de eo, quod destinaveris, non esse consulendos, quibus consultis obsequi debeas. Venio in senatum, ius dicendi peto, dico paulisper maximo adsensu. Ubi coepi crimen attingere, reum destinare, adhuc tamen sine nomine, undique mihi reclamari. Alius: 'Sciamus, quis sit, de quo extra ordinem referas,' alius: 'Quis est ante relationem reus?' alius: 'Salvi simus, qui supersumus.' Audio imperturbatus, interitus; tantum susceptae rei honestas valet, tantumque ad fiduciam vel metum differt, nolint homines, quod facias, an non probent.

Longum est omnia, quae tunc hinc inde iacta sunt, recensere. Novissime consul: 'Secunde, sententiae loco dices, si quid volueris.' 'Permiseras' inquam, 'quod usque adhuc omnibus permisisti.' Resido. Aguntur alia. Interim me quidam ex con-sularibus amicis secreto accuratoque sermone quasi nimis fortiter incauteque progressum corripit, revocat, monet, ut sistam: adiecit etiam notabilem me futuris principibus. 'Esto' inquam, 'dum malis.'

a Ordinarily, motions were put to the Senate by the presiding Consul, who then called upon the members, in formal order, to express their opinions. But any Senator might bring in a private motion by leave of the House.

b Lit. "out of the regular order," i.e. by the privilege explained above.

c sc. Domitian's reign of terror.

d "'Tis very remarkable, that when any senator was asked his opinion in the house, he had the privilege of speaking as long as he pleased upon any other affair." (Melm.)

e Nerva had not yet adopted an heir. His choice of Trajan (97 A.D.) put an end to wide-spread anxiety.

200
anyone; experience having taught me the unwisdom of consulting on a predetermined affair those whose judgment you are bound to follow, if you do consult them. The Senate being assembled, I came into the house, and begged leave to introduce a motion;\textsuperscript{a} I spoke for a few moments with universal assent. When I began to touch upon the charge, and indicate whom I intended to accuse (though as yet without mentioning him by name) I was attacked on all sides. "Let us know," says one, "who is the object of this extraordinary motion."\textsuperscript{b} "Who is it," asked another, "that is thus actually put on trial before the question of indicting him has been submitted to the House?" "Let us be safe," added a third, "who have survived."\textsuperscript{c} I heard all this unruffled and undismayed; such strength is derived from a good cause, and so much difference it makes with respect to confidence or fear, whether the world deprecates, or disapproves, your action.

It would be too tedious to relate all that was thrown out by different sides upon this occasion. At length the Consul said, "You will be at liberty, Secundus, to speak on whatever you wish to propose, when you are called upon to give your opinion on the business of the day."\textsuperscript{d} "The permission you granted and now withdraw," said I, "you never yet refused to any," and so sat down; when immediately the House went upon other affairs. In the meanwhile, one of my consular friends took me aside, and with great earnestness telling me he thought I had carried on this affair with more boldness than prudence, used every method of reproof and persuasion, to prevail with me to desist. He even added that I should find myself a marked man under future Emperors.\textsuperscript{e} "So be it,"
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Vix ille discesserat, rursus alter: 'Quid audes? quo ruis? quibus te periculis obiicis? quid praesentibus confidis incertus futurorum? lacescis hominem iam praefectum aerarii et brevi consulem, præterea qua gratia, quibus amicitiiis fultum!' Nominat quendam, qui tunc ad orientem amplissimum et famosis-simum exercitum non sine magnis dubiisque rumori-bus obtinebat. Ad haec ego: "Omnia præcepi atque animo mecum ante peregi"¹ nec recuso, si ita casus attulerit, luere poenas ob honestissimum factum, dum flagitosissimum ulciscor.

Iam censendi tempus. Dicit Domitius Apollinaris, consul designatus, dicit Fabricius Veiento, Fabius Postumius, Vettius Proculus, collega Publici Certi, de quo agebatur, uxoris autem meae, quam amiseram, vitricus, post hos Ammius Flaccus. Omnes Certum nondum a me nominatum ut nominatum defendunt, crimenque quasi in medio relictum defensione suscipiunt. Quae præterea dixerint, non est necesse narrare; in libris habes. Sum enim cuncta ipsorum verbis persecutus.

Dicunt contra Avidius Quietus, Cornutus Tertullus; Quietus, iniquissimum esse querelas dolentium excludi, ideoque Arriæ et Fanniae ius

¹ Verg. Aen. vi. 105.

² sc. of Saturn; see x. 3a, note b.
quoth I, "if they are bad Emperors." He had scarce left me, when a second came up: "For God's sake," said he, "what are you attempting? Will you ruin yourself? Do you consider to what hazards you are exposed? Why will you presume on the present situation of public affairs, when it is so uncertain what turn they may hereafter take? You are attacking a man who is actually at the head of the treasury, and will shortly be Consul. Besides, consider what credit he has, and with what powerful friendships he is supported!" Upon which he named a certain person, who (not without several strong and suspicious rumours) was then commanding a powerful army in the east. I replied,

"'All I've foreseen, and oft in thought revolv'd;' and am willing, if so it falls out, to suffer pains and penalties for an honourable action, provided I avenge an infamous one."

The time for the members to give their opinion was now arrived. Domitius Apollinaris, the consul elect, spoke first; after him Fabricius Veiento, Fabius Postumius, Vettius Proculus, (my late wife's step-father, and the colleague of Publicius Certus, on whom the debate turned,) and lastly Ammius Flaccus. They all defended Certus, as if I had named him (tho' I had not yet done so), and thus as it were took up the challenge of my accusation. I need not relate what they said further, as you can read it all word for word in my speech.

Avidius Quietus and Cornutus Tertullius spoke in the opposite sense. The former observed, that it was extremely unjust not to hear the complaints of those in distress, and therefore that Arria and querendi non auferendum, nec interesse, cuius ordinis quis sit, sed quam causam habeat; Cornutus, datum se a consulis tutorem Helvidi filiae petentibus matre eius et vitrico; nunc quoque non sustinere deserere officii sui partes, in quo tamen et suo dolori modum imponere et optimarum feminarum perferre modestissimum adfectum; quas contentas esse admonere senatum Publici Certi cruente adulationis et petere, si poena flagitii manifestissimi remittatur, nota certe quasi censoria inuratur. Tum Satrius Rufus medio ambiguoque sermone 'Puto' inquit, 'iniuriam factam Publicio Certo, si non absolvitur; nominatus est ab amicis Arriae et Fanniae, nominatus ab amicis suis. Nec debemus solliciti esse; idem enim nos, qui bene sentimus de homine, iudicaturi sumus; si innocens est, sicuti et spero et malo, donec aliquid probetur, credo poteritis absolvere.'

Haec illi, quo quisque ordine citabantur. Venitur ad me; consurgo, utor initio, quod in libro est, a A reply to the plea above, salvi simus, qui supersumus, against any further prosecutions of Senators, so many of whom had perished in that way under Domitian.

---

b Towards Domitian, at whose desire he brought a capital charge against Helvidius.

c During the Republic, the list of senators was revised once in five years by the Censors, who affixed a mark (nota) to the names of those whom they thought proper to degrade. Annual revision of the list, and expulsion of any senator at discretion had now become part of the emperor’s prerogative, Fannia ought not to be denied the privilege of laying their grievances before the house; and that the point to be considered was not the rank of the person, but the merit of the cause. Cornutus told the house, that as he was appointed guardian to the daughter of Helvidius by the consuls, upon the petition of her mother and her step-father, he could not bring himself to abandon the duty of his trust on this occasion. In fulfilling it, however, he would restrain his personal indignation, and report the extremely moderate sentiments of those excellent ladies. They desired no more, he said, than to bring to the Senate's notice the bloodshed which Certus procured in his obsequiousness, with the request that, if the legal penalty of his notorious crime were remitted, at least Certus might be branded with some disgrace equivalent to degradation by the Censors. Satrius Rufus then expressed himself in neutral and ambiguous terms. "I am of opinion," said he, "that injustice will be done to Certus, if he is not acquitted (I do not scruple to name him, since the friends of Arria and Fannia, as well as his own, have done so). Nor has the Senate any grounds for anxiety; for we, who think well of the man, are to be his judges. If he is innocent (as I hope and wish, and till something be proved against him, shall believe he is), it will be in your power to acquit him."

Thus they delivered their several opinions, in the order in which they were called upon. When it came to my turn, I rose up, and using the same exordium as appears in the published speech, I replied to them and he might be induced to degrade Certus if the senate expressed condemnation of him. (Merrill.)
respondeo singulis. Mirum qua intentione, quibus clamoribus omnia exceperint, qui modo reclamabant; tanta conversio vel negotii dignitatem, vel proven-tum orationis, vel actoris constantiam subsecuta est. Finio. Incipit respondere Veiento; nemo patitur; obturbatur, obstrepitur adeo quidem, ut diceret: 'Rogo, patres conscripti, ne me cogatis implorare auxilium tribunorum.' Et statim Murena tribunus: 'Permitto tibi, vir clarissime Veiento, dicere.' Tunc quoque reclamatur. Inter moras consul citatis nominibus et peracta discissione mittit senatum, acp aene adhuc stantem temptantemque dicere Veientonem reliquit. Multum ille de hac (ita vocabat) contumelia, questus est Homerico versu:

"Ο γέρον, ἡ μάλα δή σε νεṝι τείρουσι μαχηταί."¹

Non fere quisquam in senatu fuit, qui non me complecteretur, exoscularetur, certatimque laude cumularet, quod intermissum iamdiu morem in publicum consulendi susceptis propriis simultatibus reduxissem, quod denique senatum invidia liberassem, qua flagrabit apud ordines alios, quod severus in ceteros senatoribus solis dissimulatione quasi mutua parceret.

¹ II. viii. 102.

---

¹ Theoretically, the Tribunes could still control the procedure of the Senate by interposing their veto. Veiento appealed to them to protect him in exercising his right of giving his opinion (ius censendi).

² i.e. introducing a bill, which had become virtually a prerogative of the Emperor. See next note.
severally. It is surprising with what attention, with what applause I was heard by those who just before were exclaiming against me; such a wonderful conversion was wrought either by the importance of the affair, the successful progress of the speech, or the resolution of the advocate. After I had finished, Veiento began to reply; not a soul would hear him;
the general clamour raised against him was so overpowering that he was reduced to saying, "I hope, my lords, you will not oblige me to implore the assistance of the Tribunes." a Immediately the Tribune Murena cried out, "You have my leave, most illustrious Veiento, to proceed." But still the uproar was renewed. In the interval the Consul put the question severally to the rest, and having taken a division, dismissed the Senate, leaving Veiento in the midst, still attempting to speak. He made great complaints of this affront (as he called it) applying the following lines of Homer to himself:

"Great perils, father, wait th' unequal fight;
Those younger champions will oppress thy might."

There was scarce a man in the House that did not embrace and kiss me, and vie in loading me with praises. They extolled me because, at the risk of exciting private animosities, I had revived the custom so long disused, of consulting the Senate in the interest of the public b; in fine, because I had wiped off that reproach which was thrown upon the Senate by the other orders of citizens, that while severe towards the rest of the community, it let its own members escape its justice by a sort of mutual connivance.

207
Haec acta sunt absente Certo; abfuit enim, seu tale aliquid suspicatus, sive, ut excusabatur, infirmus. Et relationem quidem de eo Caesar ad senatum non remisit; obtinui tamen, quod intenderam. Nam collega Certi consulatum, successorem Certus accepit; planeque factum est, quod dixeram in fine, ‘Reddat praemium sub optimoprinipe, quod a pessimo accepit.’

Postea actionem meam, utcunque potui, recollegi, addidi multa. Accidit fortuitum, sed non tamquam fortuitum quod editis libris Certus intra paucissimos dies implicitus morbo decessit. Audivi referentes hanc imaginem menti eius, hanc oculis oberrasse, tamquam videret me sibi cum ferro imminere. Verane haec, adfirmare non ausim; interest tamen exempli, ut vera videantur.

Habes epistulam, si modum epistulae cogites, libris, quos legisti, non minorem; sed imputabis tibi, qui contentus libris non fuisti. Vale.

---

*a From Vespasian’s time, the ius relationis, i.e. the right to submit a motion to the Senate, belonged to the Emperor: relationem remittere was the technical term for his doing so at the request of the Senate itself (addressed to him through the Consuls). We gather that Pliny’s motion for leave to prosecute Certus was carried by a large majority, but that the Senate could not proceed further without a formal...*
All this was transacted in the absence of Certus; who kept out of the way either because he suspected something of the kind was on foot, or (as was said in his excuse) that he was really indisposed. Caesar did not, it is true, refer his case to the Senate. But I obtained nevertheless, what I aimed at, for his colleague was appointed to a consulship, while he himself was superseded. And thus, the wish with which I concluded my speech, was actually accomplished: “May he be obliged,” said I, “to renounce under a virtuous prince that reward he received under an infamous one.”

Some time after I reconstituted my speech as well as I could, and considerably enlarged it. It chanced (though such an event seemed more than a coincidence) that a few days after I had published those books, Certus was taken ill and died. I heard reports that he not only imagined, but actually saw, a figure haunting him—and the apparition was none other than myself, threatening him with a sword. Whether this story is true or not, I cannot venture to affirm; but with a view to pointing a moral, ’tis important that it should be accounted true.

And here you have a letter which, if you consider the limits of a letter, is as long as the books you have perused. But you must blame yourself for that, since the books did not suffice you. Farewell.

relatio from Nerva, whose policy was to let bygones be bygones, and who accordingly allowed the matter to drop.

b i.e. “May Nerva deprive him of the treasurership Domitian gave him.”
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XIV

C. PLINIUS TACITO SUO S.

Nec ipse tibi plaudis, et ego nihil magis ex fide quam de te scribo. Posteris an aliqua cura nostri, nescio, nos certe meremur, ut sit aliqua, non dico ingenio (id enim superbum), sed studio et labore et reverentia posterorum. Pergamus modo itinere instituto, quod ut paucos in lucem famamque provexit ita multos e tenebris et silentio protulit. Vale.

XV

C. PLINIUS FALCONI SUO S.

Refugeram in Tuscos, ut omnia ad arbitrium meum facerem. At hoc ne in Tuscis quidem; tam multis undique rusticorum libellis et tam querulis inquietor, quos aliquanto magis invitus quam meos lego: nam et meos invitus. Retracto enim actiunculas quasdam, quod post intercapedinem temporis et frigidum et acerbum est. Rationes quasi absente me negleguntur. Interdum tamen equum conscendo et patrem familiae hactenus ago, quod aliquam
BOOK IX. xiv.–xv

XIV

To Tacitus

You do not blow your own trumpet, and I, for my part, never write more sincerely than when I write about you. Whether future generations will pay us some regard, I know not; but let us anyhow earn some regard, I will not say by our genius (that would be arrogant) but by our zeal, our labours, and our reverence for posterity. Let us but proceed in the course we have begun; which, as it has conducted some few to the sunshine of fame, so it has led out numbers from nameless obscurity. Farewell.

XV

To Falco

I fled to my Tuscan estate in order to do just as I pleased; but that privilege is denied me even here, so greatly am I harassed by showers of petitions—which are so many complaints—from my various tenants. I look over their papers with more reluctance than my own; for, to confess the truth, it is with great unwillingness I review even them. I am revising, however, some little orations; an employment which, after a length of time has intervened, is but of a very cold and unentertaining kind. In the meanwhile my private affairs are neglected as much as if I were absent. Yet I sometimes so far act the part of a careful master of a family, as to mount my horse and ride about my partem praeediorum, sed pro gestatione percurro. Tu consuetudinem serva nobisque sic rusticis urbana acta perscribe. Vale.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XVI

C. PLINIUS MA MILIANO SUO S.

Summam te voluptatem percepisse ex isto copiosissimo genere venandi non miror, cum historicorum more scribas numerum iniri non potuisse. Nobis venari nec vacat, nec libet; non vacat, quia vindemiae in manibus; non libet, quia exiguae. Devehimus tamen pro novo musto novos versiculos tibique iucundissime exigenti, ut primum videbuntur defervisse, mittemus. Vale.

XVII

C. PLINIUS GENITORI SUO S.

Recepi litteras tuas, quibus quereris taedio tibi fuisse quamvis lautissimam cenam, quia scurrae, cinaedi, moriones mensis inerrabant. Vis tu remittere aliquid ex rugis? Equidem nihil tale habeo, BOOK IX. xv.–xvii

farms, but merely in lieu of taking exercise in my allée. As for you, I hope you will keep up your old custom, and give your rustic friend an account of what is going forward in town. Farewell.

XVI

To Mamilianus

It is no wonder a chace on the vast scale you mention afforded you infinite pleasure, "the number of the slain" (as you write in true historian phrase) "was not to be counted." As for myself, I have neither leisure nor inclination for sports of that kind: not leisure because I am in the midst of my vintage; not inclination because it has proved an extreme bad one this season. However, I shall be able, I hope, to draw off some new verses, in default of new wine, for your entertainment, which (since you request them in so agreeable a manner) I will not fail to send you as soon as they shall be thoroughly settled. Farewell.

XVII

To Genitor

I have received your letter, in which you complain of being highly disgusted lately at an entertainment, though exceeding splendid, by a set of buffoons, fools, and wanton prostitutes, who were playing their antic tricks round the tables. But let me advise you to smooth your brow a little. I confess, indeed, I admit nothing of this kind at my own habentes tamen fero. Cur ergo non habeo? Quia nequaquam me ut inexpectatum festivumve delectat, si quid molle a cinaedo, petulans a scurra, stultum a morione profertur. Non rationem, sed stomachum tibi narro. Atque adeo quam multos putas esse, quos aeque ea, quibus ego et tu capimur et ducimur, partim ut inepta, partim ut molestissima offendant! Quam multi, cum lector aut lyristes aut comoedus inductus est, calceos poscunt aut non minore cum taedio recubant, quam tu ista (sic enim appellas) prodigia perpessus es! Demus igitur alienis oblectationibus veniam, ut nostris impetremus. Vale.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XVIII

C. Plinius Sabino Suo S.

Qua intentione, quo studio, qua denique memoria legeris libellos meos, epistula tua ostendit. Ipse igitur exhibes negotium tibi, qui elicis et invitas, ut quam plurima communicare tecum velim. Faciam, per partes tamen et quasi digesta, ne istam ipsam 214 house; however, I bear with it in others. "And why then (you will be ready to ask) "should you not have them yourself?" The truth is, because the soft gestures from a wanton, the pleasantries from a buffoon, or the folly from a professed fool, give me no entertainment, as they give me no surprise. It is my taste, you see, not my principles, that I plead against them. And indeed, what numbers are there, think you, who distaste the entertainments which you and I are most delighted with, and consider them either trivial or wearisome! How many are there, who as soon as a reader, a musician, or a comedian is introduced, either take their leave of the company, or if they continue at the table, show as much dislike to this kind of diversions, as you did at those monsters, as you call them! Let us bear therefore, my friend, with others in their amusements, that they, in return, may shew indulgence to ours. Farewell.

XVIII

To Sabinus

With what care and attention you have read my works, and how perfectly treasure them in your memory, your letter is a sufficient testimony. Do you consider then, what a troublesome affair you are bringing upon your hands, when you kindly entice me, by every friendly art, to communicate to you as many of them as possible? I cannot, certainly, refuse your request; but shall comply with it, however, at different intervals, and observe some kind of memoriam, cui gratias ago, adsiduitate et copia turbem oneratamque et quasi oppressam cogam pluribus singula, posterioribus priora dimittere. Vale.

XIX

C. Plinius Rusoni Suo S.

Significas legisse te in quadam epistula mea iussisse Verginium Rufum inscribi sepulcro suo:

‘Hic situs est Rufus, pulso qui Vindice quondam Imperium adseruit non sibi, sed patriae.’

Reprehendis, quod iusserit, addis etiam melius rectiusque Frontinum, quod vetuerit omnino monumentum sibi fieri, meque ad extremum, quid de utroque sentiam, consulis. Utrumque dilexi, miratus sum magis, quem tu reprehendis, atque ita miratus, ut non putarem satis unquam laudari posse, cuius nunc mihi subeunda defensio est. Omnes ego, qui magnum aliquod memorandumque fecerunt, non modo venia, verum etiam laude dignissimos iudico si immortalitatem, quam meruere, sectantur victu-que nominis famam supremis etiam titulis prorogare nituntur.
BOOK IX. xviii.—xix succession. For I would not by too copious and too frequent a supply, over-burthen and confound a memory to which I already owe so many acknowledgments; nor, in short, pour in such an unreasonable quantity, as to oblige it to discharge what it had before received, in order to retain what follows. Farewell.

XIX

To Russo

You have read, it seems, in a letter of mine, that Virginius Rufus directed the following lines to be inscribed upon his tomb:

"Here Rufus lies, who raised in victory's hour His country, not himself, to sovran power:"

for which you blame him, adding that Frontinus acted much more worthily in forbidding any monument whatsoever to be erected to his memory. And in the conclusion of your letter you desire my sentiments upon each. I loved them both; but I confess I admired him most whom you condemn; and to such a degree, that so far from imagining I ever should have occasion to rise up in his defence, I thought he could never be sufficiently applauded. In my opinion, every man who has acted a great and memorable part, deserves not only to be excused but extolled, if he pursues that glorious immortality of fame he has merited and endeavours to perpetuate an everlasting remembrance of himself, even by an epitaph.

* vi. 10. Cf. ii. 1.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Nec facile quemquam nisi Verginium invenio, cuius tanta in praedicando verecundia quanta gloria ex facto. Ipse sum testis, familiariter ab eo dilectus probatusque, semel omnino me audiente provectum, ut de rebus suis hoc unum referret, ita secum aliquando Cluvium locutum: 'Scis, Vergini, quae historiae fides debeatur; proinde si quid in historiis meis legis aliter ac velis, rogo ignoscas.'

Ad hoc ille: 'Tune, Cluvi, ignoras, ideo me fecisse, quod feci, ut esset liberum vobis scribere, quae libuisset?'

Age dum, hunc ipsum Frontinum in hoc ipso, in quo tibi parcior videtur et pressior, comparemus. Vetuit exstrui monumentum; sed quibus verbis? 'Impensa monumenti supervacua est; memoria nostri durabit, si vita meruimus.' An restrictius arbitraris per orbem terrarum legendum dare duraturam memoriam suam, quam uno in loco duobus versiculis signare, quod feceris? Quamquam non habeo propositum illum reprehendendi, sed hunc tuendi; cuius quae potest apud te iustior esse defensio quam ex collatione eius, quem praetulisti? Meo quidem iudicio neuter culpandus, quorum uterque ad gloriam pari cupiditate, diverso itinere contendit, alter, dum expetit debitos titulos; alter, dum mavult videri contempsisse. Vale.

---

\[a\] Consul under Caligula; pro-consul of Spain under Nero. Tacitus, Plutarch, and Suetonius seem to have drawn upon his (lost) history of his own times for their accounts of Galba, Otho, and Vitellius.
Yet hardly could I name a man, who had performed such great achievements, so modestly reserved upon the subject of his own actions, as Virginius was. I can bear him witness (and I had the happiness to enjoy his intimacy and affection) that I never but once heard him mention his own conduct; and that was, in giving an account of a conversation which passed between him and Cluvius: "You well know, Virginius," (said Cluvius to him,) "the fidelity required in an historian; you will pardon me therefore, I hope, if you should meet with anything in my works, that is not agreeable to you." "O Cluvius," he replied, "can you be ignorant that what I did, was done in order that you historians might enjoy the liberty of writing what you please?"

But let us compare Frontinus with him in that very instance wherein you think the former is more modest and reserved. He forbid a monument to be erected to him, it is true; but in what words? "The expense of a monument," says he, "is superfluous; my memory will endure if my actions deserve it." Is there less vanity, do you think, thus to put on record for all the world to read that his memory would endure; than to mark upon a single tombstone, in two lines, the actions one has performed? It is not, however, my design to condemn your favourite; I only mean to defend Virginius; and what defence can be more prevailing with you, than one drawn from a comparison between him and the person you prefer? In my own opinion, indeed, neither of them is blameworthy, since they both pursued glory with equal passion, but by different roads; the former in desiring those monumental honours he had merited: the latter in rather choosing the appearance of despising them. Farewell.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XX

C. PLINIUS VENATORI SUO S.

Tua vero epistula tanto mihi iucundior fuit, quanto longior erat, praeertim cum de libellis meis tota loqueretur; quos tibi voluptati esse non miror, cum omnia nostra perinde ac nos ames.

Ipse cum maxime vindemias graciles quidem, uberiores tamen quam exspectaveram, colligo, si colligere est, non numquam decerpere uvam, torculum invisere, gustare de lacu mustum, obrepere urbanis, qui nunc rusticis praesunt meque notariis et lectoribus reliquerunt. Vale.

XXI

C. PLINIUS SABINIANO SUO S.

LIBERTUS tuus, cui succensere te dixeras, venit ad me, advolutusque pedibus meis, tamquam tuis haesit. Flevit multum, multumque rogavit, multum etiam tacuit; in summa, fecit mihi fidem poenitentiae. Vere credo emendatum, quia deliquisse se sentit.
XX

To Venator

The longer your letter was, so much the more agreeable I thought it, especially as it turned entirely upon my works. I am not at all surprised you should find a pleasure in them, since I know you have the same affection for every thing that belongs to me, as you have for myself.

The getting in of my vintage (which though it has proved but a slender one this season, is, however, more plentiful than I expected) particularly employs me at present. If indeed I can with any propriety say so, who only gather a grape now and then, visit the vine-press, taste the must in the vat, and saunter to my town-servants; who being now engaged in assisting their rustic fellows, have wholly abandoned me to my readers and my secretaries. Farewell.

XXI

To Sabinianus

Your freedman, whom you lately mentioned as having displeased you, has been with me; he threw himself at my feet and clung there with as much submission as he could have done at yours. He earnestly requested me with many tears, and even with the eloquence of silent sorrow, to intercede for him; in short, he convinced me by his whole behaviour, that he sincerely repents of his fault. And I am persuaded he is thoroughly reformed, because he seems entirely sensible of his delinquency.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Irasceris, scio; et irasceris merito, id quoque scio; sed tunc praecipua mansuetudinis laus, cum irae causa iustissima est. Amasti hominem et, spero, amabis; interim sufficit, ut exorari te sinas. Licebit rursus irasci, si meruerit, quod exoratus excusatius facies. Remitte aliquid adulescentiae ipsius, remitte lacrimis, remitte indulgentiae tuae; ne torseris illum, ne torseris etiam te. Torqueris enim, cum tam lenis irasceris.

Vereor, ne videar non rogare, sed cogere, si precibus eius meas iunxero. Iungam tamen tanto plenius et effusius, quanto ipsum acrius severiusque corripui destricte minatus numquam me postea rogaturum. Hoc illi, quem terreri oportebat, tibi non idem. Nam fortasse iterum rogabo, impetrabo iterum; sit modo tale, ut rogare me, ut praestare te deceat. Vale.

XXII

C. PLINIUS SEVERO SUO S.

MAGNA me sollicitudine adfecit Passenni Pauli valetudo et quidem plurimis iustissimisque de causis.
I know you are angry with him, and I know too, it is not without reason; but clemency can never exert itself with more applause, than when there is the justest cause for resentment. You once had an affection for this man, and, I hope, will have again: in the meanwhile, let me only prevail with you to pardon him. If he should incur your displeasure hereafter, you will have so much the stronger plea in excuse for your anger, as you shew yourself more exorable to him now. Allow something to his youth, to his tears, and to your own natural mildness of temper: do not make him uneasy any longer, and I will add too, do not make yourself so; for a man of your benevolence of heart cannot be angry without feeling great uneasiness.

I am afraid, were I to join my entreaties with his, I should seem rather to compel, than request you to forgive him. Yet I will not scruple to do it; and so much the more fully and freely as I have very sharply and severely reproved him, positively threatening never to interpose again in his behalf. But though it was proper to say this to him, in order to make him more fearful of offending, I do not say it to you. I may, perhaps, again have occasion to intreat you upon his account, and again obtain your forgiveness; supposing, I mean, his error should be such as may become me to intercede for, and you to pardon. Farewell.

XXII

To Severus

I have been much alarmed by the ill state of health of Passennus Paulus, as indeed I had many and just reasons. He has a most excellent and
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Vir est optimus, honestissimus, nostri amantissimus; praeterea in litteris veteres aemulatur, exprimit, reddit, Propertium in primis, a quo genus ducit, vera soboles eoque simillima illi, in quo ille praecipuus. Si elegos eius in manus sumpseris, leges opus tersum, molle, iucundum et plane in Properti domo scriptum.

Nuper ad lyrica deflexit, in quibus ita Horatium, ut in illis illum alterum effingit. Putes, si quid in studiis cognatio valet, et huius propinquum. Magna varietas, magna mobilitas. Amat ut qui verissime, dolet ut qui impatientissime, laudat ut qui benignissime, ludit ut qui facetissime, omnia denique tamquam singula absolvit.

Pro hoc ego amico, pro hoc ego ingenio non minus aeger animo, quam corpore ille, tandem illum, tandem me recepi. Gratulare mihi, gratulare...
generous heart, of which I have the happiness to share the warmest friendship. In his writings he very successfully emulates the antients, whose spirit and manner he has closely imitated and happily restored; especially that of Propertius, to whom he is no less related by genius, than by blood, as he particularly resembles that poet in his chief excellency. When you read his elegies, whatever is elegant, tender, and agreeable, will conspire to charm you; as you will clearly discover they derive their lineage from Propertius.

He has lately made some attempts in the lyric kind, in which he as successfully copies the manner of Horace as in his elegies he has that of the other poet just mentioned. You would imagine, were there such a thing as a kindred in genius, that the blood of Horace likewise flowed in his veins. He displays a most wonderful variety and versatility; when he describes the passion of love, you perceive his heart is entirely possessed by the most tender sentiments; when he paints the emotions of grief, you see his breast is penetrated with the deepest sorrow; when he enters upon topics of panegyric, it is with all the ardour of the warmest benevolence; when he diverts himself with subjects of pleasantry, it is in the spirit of the most agreeable gaiety; in short, whatever species of poetry he engages in, he executes it with such a masterly hand, that one would imagine it were the single branch to which he had applied himself.

The dangerous indisposition of such a friend and such a genius afflicted me in mind no less than him in body. But at length he is recovered, and my peace is restored. Congratulate me, my friend, and etiam litteris ipsis, quae ex periculo eius tantum discrimen adierunt, quantum ex salute gloriae consequuntur. Vale.

XXIII

C. Plinius Maximo Suo S.

Frequentem agenti mihi evenit, ut centumviri, cum diu se intra iudicum auctoritatem gravitatemque tenuissent, omnes repente quasi victi coactique consurgerent laudarentque; frequentem e senatu famam, qualem maxime optaveram, rettuli; numquam tamen maiorem cepi voluptatem, quam nuper ex sermone Corneli Taciti. Narrabat sedisse secum circensibus proximis equitem Romanum. Hunc post varios eruditosque sermones requisisse: 'Italicus es, an provincialis?' Se respondisse: 'Nostime et quidem ex studiis.' Ad hoc illum, 'Tacitus es an Plinius?'
Exprimere non possum, quam sit iucundum mihi, quod nomina nostra quasi litterarum propria, non hominum, litteris redduntur, quod uterque nostrum his etiam ex studiis notus, quibus aliter ignotus est.

Accidit aliud ante pauculos dies simile. Recum-bebat mecum vir egregius, Fabius Rufinus, super eum BOOK IX. xxii.—xxiii congratulate also literature itself, which ran as great a hazard by his danger, as it will receive glory by his recovery. Farewell.

XXIII

To Maximus

It has frequently happened, as I have been pleading before the centumviri, that those judges, after having preserved as long as possible the gravity and solemnity suitable to their character, have at length as though overcome and compelled, suddenly risen up with one consent to applaud me. I have often likewise gained as much glory in the senate, as my utmost wishes could desire: but I never was touched with a more sensible pleasure than by an account which I lately received from Cornelius Tacitus. He informed me, that at the last Circensian games, he sat next to a Roman knight, who, after much discourse had passed between them upon various points of learning, asked him if he was an Italian or a provincial? Tacitus replied, “Your acquaintance with literature must have informed you who I am.” “Ay!” said the knight, “Pray then is it Tacitus or Pliny I am talking with?” I cannot express how highly I am pleased to find, that our names, as if they were rather the proper appellatives of letters than of men, are ascribed to literature itself; and that those very pursuits render us known to those, who would be ignorant of us by any other means.

An accident of the same nature happened to me a few days ago. Fabius Rufinus, a person of dis-municeps ipsius, qui illo die primum venerat in urbem; cui Rufinus demonstrans me: 'Vides hunc?' Multa deinde de studiis nostris. Et ille 'Plinius est' inquit. Verum fatebor, capio magnum laboris mei fructum. An, si Demosthenes iure laetatus est, quod illum anus Attica ita noscitavit, 'Οὗτος ἐστὶ Δημοσθένης,' ego celebritate nominis mei gaudere non debeo? Ego vero et gaudeo et gaudere me dico. Neque enim vereor, ne iactantior videar, cum de me aliorum iudicium non meum profero, praesertim apud te, qui nec ullius invides laudibus et faves nostris. Vale.

XXIV

C. PLINIUS SABINIANO SUO S.

Bene fecisti, quod libertum aliquando tibi carum reducentibus epistulis meis in domum, in animum recepisti. Iuvabit hoc te; me certe iuvat, primum quod te tam tractabilem\(^1\) video, ut in ira regi possis, deinde quod tantum mihi tribuis, ut vel auctoritati

\(^1\) tam tractabilem M, Müller, talem a, Bipons.

228
BOOK IX. xxiii.–xxiv

tinguished merit, was placed next to me at table; and above him a fellow-townsman of his, who was just then come to Rome for the first time. Rufinus desired his friend to take notice of me, and fell to expatiating upon the subject of my eloquence; to whom the other immediately replied, “That must undoubtedly be Pliny.” To own the truth, I look upon these instances as a very considerable recompense of my labours. Had Demosthenes reason to be pleased with the old woman of Athens crying out on recognizing him “There goes Demosthenes!” and may I not be allowed to congratulate myself upon the extensive reputation my name has acquired? Yes, my friend, I will rejoice in it, and without scruple own that I do. As I only mention the judgement of others concerning me, not the opinion I conceive of myself, I am not afraid of incurring the censure of vanity; especially from you, who, as you envy no man’s reputation, so you are particularly zealous for mine. Farewell.

XXIV

To Sabinianus

I greatly approve of your having, under conduct of my letter, received again into your family and favour, a freed-man, whom you once admitted into a share of your affection. It will afford you, I doubt not, great satisfaction. It certainly, at least, has me, both as it is a proof that you are capable of being governed in your anger, and as it is an instance of your paying so much regard to me, as either to obey a ix. 21.

meae pareas vel precibus indulgeas. Igitur et laudo et gratias ago; simul in posterum moneo, ut te erroribus tuorum, etsi non fuerit, qui deprecetur, placabilem praestes. Vale.

XXV
C. Plinius Mamiliano Suo S.

Quereris de turba castrensium negotiorum et, tamquam summo otio perfruare, lusus et ineptias nostras legis, amas, flagitas meque ad similia condenda non mediocriter incitas. Incipio enim ex hoc genere studiorum non solum oblectationem, verum etiam gloriam petere post iudicium tuum, viri gravissimi, eruditissimi ac super ista verissimi. Nunc me rerum actus modice, sed tamen distingit; quo finito aliquid earundem Camenarum in istum benignissimum sinum mittam. Tu passerculis et columbulis nostris inter aquilas vestras dabis pennas, si tamen et sibi et tibi placebunt, si tantum sibi, continendos cavea nidove curabis. Vale.

XXVI
C. Plinius Luperco Suo S.

Dixi de quodam oratore seculi nostri recto quidem et sano, sed parum grandi et ornato, ut opinor, apte:
my authority or to yield to my entreaty. You will accept therefore, at once, both of my applause and my thanks. At the same time, I must advise you for the future to be placable towards erring servants, though there should be none to interpose in their behalf. Farewell.

XXV

To Mamilianus

Though you complain of the crowd of military affairs which press upon you, yet, as if you were enjoying the most uninterrupted leisure, you read, admire and demand my poetical trifles and not a little encourage me still to persevere in them. I begin, indeed, to pursue this kind of study, not only with a view to my amusement, but my glory, since they have approved themselves to the judgement of a man of your gravity and learning, and what is more than all, of your veracity. At present I have some causes upon my hands, which (though not very deeply indeed, however) engage me; when I shall have dispatched these, I will again trust my Muse in your candid bosom. You will suffer my little doves and sparrows to take wing among your eagles, if you should have the same good opinion of them as they have of themselves; if not, you will kindly confine them to their cage or their nests. Farewell.

XXVI

To Lupercus

I said once (and I think not improperly) of a certain orator of the present age, whose compositions are extremely regular and correct, but by no means
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

‘Nihil peccat, nisi quod nihil peccat.’ Debet enim orator erigi, attolli, interdum etiam effervescere, efferri ac saepe accedere ad praeceps. Nam plerumque altis et excelsis adiacent abrupta; tutius per plana, sed humilium et depressius iter; frequentior currentibus quam reptantibus lapsus, sed his non labentibus nulla, illis non nulla laus, etiamsi labantur. Nam ut quasdam artes ita eloquentiam nihil magis quam ancipitia commendant. Vides, qui per funem in summa nituntur, quantos soleant excitare clamores, cum iam iamque casuri videntur. Sunt enim maxime mirabilia, quae maxime insperata, maxime periculosa, utque Graeci magis exprimunt, παράβολα. Ideo nequaquam par gubernatoris est virtus, cum placido et cum turbato mari vehitur; tunc admirante nullo illaudatus, inglorius subit portum; at, cum stridunt funes, curvatur arbor, gubernacula gemunt, tunc ille clarus et dis maris proximus.

Cur haec? Quia 1 visus es mihi in scriptis meis adnotasse quaedam ut tumida, quae ego sublimia, ut improba, quae ego audentia, ut nimia, quae ego plena arbitrabar. Plurimum autem refert, reprehendenda sublime and ornamented, "His only fault is, that he has none." For the true orator should be bold and elevated, and sometimes even flame out and be hurried away with all the warmth and violence of passion, in short, he should frequently soar to great, and even dangerous heights. For precipices are generally near whatever is towering and exalted, whereas the plain affords a safer, but for that reason a more humble and inglorious path; they that run are more likely to stumble than they that creep; but the latter gain no honour by not slipping, while the former even fall with glory. It is with eloquence as with some other arts; she is never more pleasing than when she hazards most. Have you not observed what acclamations our rope-dancers excite at the instant when they seem on the point of falling? Whatever is most unexpected and hazardous, or, as the Greeks strongly express it, desperate, has always the greatest share of our admiration. The pilot's skill is by no means equally proved in a calm, as in a storm; in the former case he tamely enters the port, unnoticed and unapplauded; but when the cordage creaks, the mast bends, and the rudder groans, then is it that he shines forth in full lustre, and is adored as little inferior to a sea-god.

1 Cur haec? Quia Dpα, K ii., Haec, quia M, K i.

The reason of my making this observation is, because, if I mistake not, you have condemned some passages in my writings as tumid which I thought sublime, excessive which I deemed bold, and overloaded which seemed to me copious. But it is material to consider, whether your criticism turns upon such points as are real faults, or only striking adnotes an insignia. Omnis enim advertit, quod eminet et exstat; sed acri intentione diiudicandum est, immodicum sit an grande, altum an enorme. Atque, ut Homerum potissimum attingam, quem tandem alterutram in partem potest fugere 'Αμφί δὲ σάλπιγξεν μέγας. οὐρανός.'\(^1\) 'ἡρὶ ὁ ἐγχως ἐκέκλιτο'\(^2\) et totum illud, 'οὔτε θαλάσσης κῦμα τόσον βοάς.'\(^3\)? Sed opus est examine et libra, incredibilia sint haec et immania an magnifica et coelestia. Nec nunc ego me his similia aut dixisse aut posse dicere puto. Non ita insanio; sed hoc intellegi volo, laxandos esse eloquentiae frenos, nec angustissimo gyro ingeniorum impetus refringendos.

At enim alia condicio oratorum, alia poetarum. Quasi vero M. Tullius minus audeat. Quamquam hunc omitto; neque enim ambigi puto. Sed Demosthenes ipse, ille norma oratoris et regula, num se cohibet et comprimit, cum dicit illa notissima:

\(^1\) Il. xxi. 388. \(^2\) Il. v. 356. \(^3\) Il. xiv. 394.

\(^a\) Speaking of Mars. (Melm.)
and remarkable expressions. Whatever is salient is sure to be criticized; but it requires a very nice judgement to distinguish the bounds between extravagance and grandeur; between a just and enormous height. To give instances out of Homer, by preference—what reader, whether he incline to one side or the other, can fail to remark—

"Heav'n in loud thunder bids the trumpet sound,
And wide beneath them groans the rending ground."

Again,

"His spear on clouds reclined."

So in that whole passage:

"Not half so loud the bellowing deeps resound."

It requires, I say, a very delicate hand to poise these metaphors, and determine whether they are fantastic and absurd, or truly majestic and sublime. Not that I think anything which I have written or can write, admits of comparison with these. I am not extravagant enough to say so; what I would be understood to contend for is, that we should throw up the reins to eloquence, nor restrain the daring flights of genius within too narrow a compass.

But it will be said, perhaps, there is a wide difference between orators and poets. As if, forsooth, Tully were not as bold in his figures as any of the poets! But not to mention particular instances from him, since in his case, I imagine, there can be no dispute; does Demosthenes himself, that model and standard of true oratory, does Demosthenes check and repress the fire of his genius, in that well-known passage which begins thus: "Ye infamous

235
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Iam quid audentius illo pulcherrimo ac longissimo excessu? Νόσημα γὰρ. Quid haec? breviora superioribus, sed audacia paria, Τότε ἐγὼ μὲν τῷ Πύθωνι θρασυνομένῳ καὶ τολλῷ βέοντι καθ' ἡμῶν. Ex eadem nota: "Ὅταν δὲ ἐκ πλεονεξίας καὶ πονηρίας τίς, ὡσπερ οὕτος, ἱσχύῃ, ἡ πρώτῃ πρόφασισ καὶ μικρὸν πταῖσμα ἀπαντα ἀνεχαίτευσαι καὶ διέλυσε.

1 Dem. xviii. 296.
2 ib. 299.
3 ib. 301.
4 ib. iv. 49.
5 ib. xix. 259.
6 ib. xviii. 136.
7 ib. ii. 9.
8 ib. xxv. 28.
9 ib. 84.
10 ib. 7.
11 ib. 76.

"lit. "throws off" as a horse does his rider when he rears and tosses up his neck."
flatterers, ye evil genii?"—And again, "It is neither with stones nor bricks that I have fortified this city."
And afterwards: "Was it not well done to throw the rampart of Euboea in front of Attica on the seaward side?" And in another place: "O my Countrymen, I think, by the immortal gods, that he is intoxicated with the grandeur of his own actions."

But what can be more daring and beautiful than that long digression, which begins in this manner: "A terrible disease, O my countrymen, has seized upon all Greece?"—The following passage, likewise, though something shorter, is conceived in the same boldness of metaphor:—"Then it was I rose up in opposition to the daring Pytho, who poured forth a torrent of menaces against you." The subsequent stricture is of the same stamp: "When a man has strengthened himself, as Philip has, by avarice and wickedness, the first pretence that offers itself, the least false step, overthrows him and brings all to ruin.

So in the same style with the foregoing is this:—"Railed off, as it were, from all the privileges of society, by the concurrent judgements of three tribunals in the city." And in the same place: "O Aristogiton! you have betrayed that mercy which used to be shewn to offences of this nature, or rather indeed, you have wholly exhausted it. In vain then would you fly for refuge to a port, which you have shut up, and choked with piles."—He had said before: "I am afraid you will appear in the judgement of some to be setting up a public seminary of faction." And later on—"I see no footing for him in any of these places; but all is precipice, gulf, and profound abyss." And again: "Nor do I imagine that our προγόνους ὑπολαμβάνω τὰ δικαστήρια τῶν οἰκοδομήσαι, ἵνα τοὺς τοιούτους ἐν αὐτοῖς μοσχεύσῃ.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

1 Adhuc: Εἰ δὲ κάπηλὸς ἐστί πονηρίας καὶ παλιγκάπηλος καὶ μετάβολεύς.

2 Et mille talia; ut praeteream, quae ab Aeschine βαίματα, non ῥήματα, vocantur.

In contrarium incidi. Dices, hune quoque ab isto culpari. Sed vide, quanto maior sit, qui reprehendit, ipso reprehendente; et maior ob haec quoque. In aliis enim vis, in his granditas eius elucet. Num autem Aeschines ipse iis, quae in Demosthene carpebat, abstinuit? Xρή γάρ, ὃ άνδρες 'Αθηναῖοι, τὸ αὐτὸ φθέγγεσθαι τὸν ρήτορα καὶ τὸν νόμον· ὅταν δὲ ἔτεραν μὲν φωνήν ἄφη δ νόμος, ἔτεραν δὲ δ ῥήτωρ.

3—Alio loco: Ἐπείτα ἀναφαίνεται περὶ πάντων ἐν τῷ ψηφίσματι πρὸς τῷ κλέμματι γράφας τὰ πέντε τάλαντα, τοὺς πρέσβεις ἀξίων τοὺς Ὀρείτας μὴ ἢμῖν ἀλλὰ Καλλία διδόναι. ὅτι δὲ ἀληθῆ λέγω, ἀφελῶν τὸν κομπόν, καὶ τὰς τριήρεις, καὶ τὴν ἀλαξονείαν, ἐκ τοῦ ψηφίσματος ἀνάγνωθι.

4 Iterum alio: Καὶ μὴ ἐὰν αὐτὸν εἰς τοὺς τοῦ παρανόμου λόγους περιστασθαι.

5 Quod adeo probavit, ut repetat, Ἀλλὰ ἐγκαθήμενοι καὶ ἑνεδρεύοντες ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ εἰσελαύνετε αὐτὸν εἰς τοὺς τοῦ παρανόμου λόγους, καὶ τὰς ἐκτροπὰς αὐτοῦ τῶν λόγων ἐπιτηρεῖτε.

An illa custoditius

1 Dem. xxv. 48.
2 ib. 46.
3 Aesch. Oebs. 167.
4 ib. 16.
5 ib. 101.
6 ib. 206.
7 Timarch. 176.

238
ancestors erected those courts of judicature, that men of his character should be propagated there;"—And afterwards: "If he deals in, and retails, and peddles wickedness."—And a thousand other passages which I might cite to the same purpose: not to mention those expressions which Aeschines says are not words, but wonders.

You will tell me I have lighted on an adverse instance, since Demosthenes is condemned by Aeschines for running into these figurative expressions. But observe, I intreat you, how far superior the former orator is to his criticizer, and superior, too, in virtue of these very passages: for in others, the strength of his genius discovers itself: in those above quoted, the sublimity of it shines out. But does Aeschines himself avoid what he reproves in Demosthenes? "The orator," says he, "Athenians, and the law, ought to speak the same language; but when the voice of the law declares one thing, and that of the orator another."—And in another place: "he afterwards manifestly discovered the design he had, of concealing his fraud under cover of the decree, having expressly declared therein, that the embassadors sent to the Oretae gave the five talents, not to you, but to Callias. And that you may be convinced what I say is the truth (after having stripped the decree of its pomp, its galleys, and braggadocio) read the clause itself." And in another part: "Suffer him not to break cover and wander out of the limits of the question:" a metaphor he is so fond of, that he repeats it again: "But sitting firm and lying in ambush in the assembly drive him into the merits of the question, and observe well how he doubles." Is his style more reserved and pressiusque? Συ δὲ ἐλκοποιεῖς, ἢ συλλαβόντες ὡς ληστὴν τῶν πραγμάτων διὰ τῆς πολιτείας πλέοντα τιμωρήσασθε, et alia.

Exspecto, ut quaedam ex hac epistula, ut illud, 'gubernacula gemunt,' et 'dis maris proximus,' iisdem notis, quibus ea, de quibus scribo, confodias. Intellego enim, me, dum veniam prioribus peto, in illa ipsa, quae adnotaveras, incidisse. Sed confodias licet, dummodo iam nunc destines diem, quo et de illis et de his coram exigere possimus. Aut enim tu me timiderum, aut ego te temerarium faciam. Vale.

XXVII

C. PLINIUS PATERNO SUO S.

Quanta potestas, quanta dignitas, quanta maiestas, quantum denique numen sit historiae, cum frequenter alias tum proxime sensi. Recitaverat quidam verissimum librum partemque eius in alium diem reservaverat. Ecce amici cuiusdam orantes obsecrantesque, ne reliqua recitaret. Tantus audiendo, quae fecerint, pudor, quibus nullus faciendi, quae audire erubescunt. Et ille quidem praestitit, 1 Aesch. Otes. 208.

2 ib. 253.

240
BOOK IX. xxvi.–xxvii

simple when he says: “But you are manufacturing wounds,” or, “will you not seize and punish this political pirate, who cruises about the state?”—with many other passages of the like nature.

And now I expect you will make the same strictures upon certain expressions in this letter, as you did upon those I have been endeavouring to defend. The rudder that groans, and the pilot compared to a sea-god, will not, I imagine, escape your erasures: for I perceive while I am suing for indulgence to my former offences, I have fallen into the very turn of figure that you condemn. But blot these expressions if you please, provided you will immediately appoint a day when we may meet to discuss both my letter and my speech in person: you will then either teach me to be less daring, or I shall learn you to be more bold. Farewell.

XXVII

To Paternus

I have had many occasions to observe the power, the dignity, the majesty, and I will add too, even the divine efficacy there is in history; but I never met with so strong an instance of it as lately. An author had recited part of an historical performance, which he had drawn up with the utmost regard to truth, reserving the remainder for another day. When behold! the friends of a certain person came to him and earnestly conjured him not to recite the rest; so much are men ashamed to hear those actions repeated which they yet do not blush to commit! The historian complied (as he well might, without any quod rogabatur; sinebat fides. Liber tamen ut factum ipsum manet, manebit legeturque semper tanto magis, quia non statim. Incitantur enim homines ad agnosceda, quae differuntur. Vale.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XXVIII

C. PLINIUS ROMANO SUO S.

Altera epistula nuntias multa te nunc dictare, nunc scribere, quibus nos tibi praesentes. Gratias ago; agerem magis, si me illa ipsa, quae scribis aut dictas, legere voluisses. Et erat aequum ut te mea ita me tua scripta cognoscere, etiamsi ad alium quam ad me pertinent. Polliceris in fine, cum certius de vitae nostrae ordinatione aliquid audieris, a The Empress, Trajan's wife. breach of honour) with their request. But however, the history, like the action, remains, and will ever remain. And will be read too with so much the greater curiosity as the publication of it is delayed: for nothing raises the inquisitive disposition of mankind so much as to defer the gratification of it. Farewell.

XXVIII

To Romanus

Your letters have at length reached me, but I received three at once; all breathing the very spirit of elegance and friendship, and such as I had reason to expect from you, especially after having wished for them so long. In one, you enjoin me the very agreeable commission of forwarding your letter to that excellent lady, the virtuous Plotina: I will take care to do so. At the same time you recommend to me Popilius Artemisius; and I have at once performed his request. You tell me also your vintage has proved extremely moderate. That complaint, notwithstanding we are separated by such distant countries, is common to us both.

Your second letter informs me, that you are employed in dictating and writing your impressions of myself. I am much obliged to you; and should be more so, if you would give me the pleasure of reading your performance. It were but just indeed, that as I communicate to you all my compositions, you should suffer me to partake of yours, even though they should turn upon another subject than myself. You promise me in the close of your letter, that as soon as you shall be informed with certainty, in what futurum te fugitivum rei familiaris statimque ad nos evolaturum, qui iam tibi compedes nectimus, quas perfringere nullo modo possis.

XXIX

C. PLINIUS RUSTICO SUO S.

Ut satius est unum aliquid insigniter facere quam plurima mediocriter, ita plurima mediocriter, si non possis unum aliquid insigniter. Quod intuens ego variis me studiorum generibus nulli satis confisus experior. Proinde, cum hoc vel illud leges, ita singulis veniam ut non singulis dabis. An ceteris manner I intend to dispose of myself, you will make an elopement from your family, and immediately fly to me: I am already preparing certain chains for you, which, when I have you here, you will by no means be able to break through.

I learn from your third, that my oration in behalf of Clarius has been delivered to you, which appears, it seems, more full than when you heard it pronounced. It is so, I confess: for I afterwards very considerably enlarged it. You mention having sent me another letter, which you say was written with some pains, and desire to know if I have received it: I have not, but impatiently wish for its arrival. To make me amends, write to me upon the first opportunity, and pay me with full interest, which I shall compute at one per cent. monthly; tell me, can I acquit you upon more reasonable terms? Farewell.

XXIX

To Rusticus

As it is far better to excel in any single art, than to arrive only at a mediocrity in several; so on the other hand, a moderate skill in several is to be preferred, where one cannot attain to excellency in any. Upon this maxim it is, that I have attempted compositions of various sorts, as I could not expect to carry any particular one to its highest point of excellency. I hope, therefore, when you read any performance of mine, you will consider it with that indulgence which is due to an author, who has not confined himself to a single manner of writing, but has struck out into different kinds. In every other

XXX

C. Plinius Gemino Suo S.

Laudas mihi et frequenter prae sens et nunc per epistulas Nonium tuum, quod sit liberalis in quosdam. Et ipse laudo, si tamen non in hos solos. Volo enim eum, qui sit vere liberalis, tribuere patriae, propinquis, adfinibus, amicis, sed amicis dico pauperibus, non ut isti, qui iis potissimum donant, qui donare maxime possunt. Hos ego viscatis hamatisque muneribus non sua promere puto, sed aliena corripere. Sunt ingenio simili, qui, quod huic donant, auferunt illi famamque liberalitatis avaritia petunt. Primum est autem suo esse contentum, deinde, quos praecipue scias indigere, sustentantem foventemque orbe quodam societatis ambire. Quae cuncta si facit iste, usque-art quantity pleads some excuse for the quality; and shall literature, the most difficult of all, be tried by a severer law? But whilst I am bespeaking your candour, am I not bringing my gratitude in question? For, if you receive these last pieces with the same indulgence that you have all my former, I have more reason to hope for your applause, than to sue for your pardon. However, your pardon will be sufficient. Farewell.

XXX

To Geminus

You have frequently in conversation, and lately in a letter, commended your friend Nonius to me for his liberality to some particular persons; I shall join with you in his applause, if his bounty is not confined to those only. I would have the man of true generosity assist his country, his kindred, his relations, and his friends; his friends I mean in distress; not like those who chiefly bestow their presents where there is the greatest ability to make returns. I do not look upon such, as parting with any thing of their own; on the contrary, I consider their bounties as only so many disguised baits, thrown out with a design of catching the property of others. Much of the same character are those, who rob Peter to pay Paul, and seek a reputation for munificence by the practice of avarice. The first principle of genuine liberality is to be contented with what you have; and after that, to cherish and embrace all the most indigent of your acquaintance, in one comprehensive circle of benevolence. If your friend observes this rule in its full extent, he is entirely to quaque laudandus est; si unum aliquid, minus quidem, laudandus tamen. Tam rarum est etiam imperfectae liberalitatis exemplar. Ea invasit homines habendi cupido, ut possideri magis quam possidere videantur. Vale.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XXXI

C. Plinius Sardo Suo S.

Postquam a te recessi, non minus tecum, quam cum apud te fui. Legi enim librum tuum identidem repetens ea maxime (non enim mentiar), quae de me scripsisti, in quibus quidem percopiosus fuisti. Quam multa, quam varia, quam non eadem de eodem nec tamen diversa dixisti! Laudem pariter et gratias agam? Neutrum satis possum et, si possem, timerem, ne arrogans esset ob ea laudare, ob quae gratias agerem. Unum illud addam, omnia mihi tanto laudabiliora visa, quanto iucundiora, et tanto iucundiora, quanto laudabiliora erant. Vale.

XXXII

C. Plinius Titiano Suo S.

Quid agis? quid acturus es? Ipse vitam iucundissimam, id est, otiosissimam, vivo. Quo fit, ut 248 be commended; if he only partially pursues it, still he deserves (in a less degree indeed, however, he deserves) applause: so uncommon is it to meet with an instance of generosity even of the most imperfect kind! The lust of lucre has so totally seized upon mankind, that their wealth seems rather to possess them, than they to possess their wealth. Farewell.

XXXI
To Sardus

I still continued with you, notwithstanding we had parted: for I entertained myself with reading over your book. And I frequently went over with particular fondness (I honestly own it) those passages of which I am the subject: a subject upon which, indeed, you have been extremely copious. What a number and variety of remarks, all different, yet all consistent, have you made on one and the same person! Will you suffer me to mingle my applauses with my acknowledgements? I can do neither sufficiently; and if I could, there would be something, I fear, of vanity, in making that the subject of my praise, which is, in truth the object of my thanks. I will only add then, that the pleasure I received from your performance raised its merit in my eyes; and its merit heightened that pleasure. Farewell.

XXXII
To Titianus

What are you doing? And what do you propose to do? As for myself, I pass my life in the most agreeable, that is, in the most disengaged manner scribere longiores epistulas nolim, velim legere; illud tamquam delicatus, hoc tamquam otiosus. Nihil est enim aut pigrius delicatis aut curiosius otiosis. Vale.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XXXIII

C. PLINIUS CANINIO SUO S.

INCIDI in materiam veram, sed simillimam fictae dignamque isto laetissimo, altissimo planeque poëtico ingenio, incidi autem, dum super cenam varia miracula hinc inde referuntur. Magna auctoris fides; tametsi quid poëtae cum fide? Is tamen 'auctor, cui bene vel historiam scripturus credidisses.

Est in Africa Hipponensis colonia mari proxima; adiacet navigabile stagnum; ex hoc in modum fluminis aestuarium emergit, quod vice alterna, prout aestus aut repressit aut impulit, nunc infertur mari, nunc redditur stagno. Omnis hie aetas piscandi, navigandi, atque etiam natandi studio tenetur, maxime pueri, quos otium ludusque sollicitat. His gloria et virtus altissime provehi; victor ille, qui longissime ut litus ita simul nantes reliquit. Hoc certamine puer quidam audentior ceteris in ulteriora 250 imaginable. I do not find myself, therefore, in the humour to write a long letter, though I am to read one. I am too much a man of pleasure for the former, and just idle enough for the latter; for none are more indolent, you know, than the voluptuous, or have more curiosity than those who have nothing to do. Farewell.

XXXIII

To Caninius

I have met with a story, which, though true, has all the air of fable, and would afford a very proper subject for your lively, elevated, and truly poetical genius. It was related to me the other day at table, where the conversation happened to turn upon various kinds of miraculous events. The person who gave the account, was a man of unsuspected veracity:—but what has a poet to do with truth? However, you might venture to rely upon his testimony, even though you had the character of a faithful historian to support.

There is in Africa a town called Hippo, situated not far from the sea-coast: it stands upon a navigable lake, from whence an estuary is discharged after the manner of a river, which ebbs and flows with the sea. Persons of all ages divert themselves here with fishing, sailing or swimming; especially boys, whom love of play and idleness bring hither. The contest among them is, who shall have the glory of swimming farthest; and he that leaves the shore and his companions at the greatest distance, gains the victory. It happened in one of these trials of skill, that a certain boy, more bold than the rest, tendebat. Delphinus occurrit et nunc praeceedere puerum, nunc sequi, nunc circumire, postremo subire, deponere, iterum subire trepidantemque perferre primum in altum, mox flectit ad litus redditque terrae et aequalibus. Serpit per coloniam fama; concurrere omnes, ipsum puerum tamquam miraculum adspicere, interrogare, audire, narrare.

—a This animal is celebrated by several of the ancients for its philanthropy, and Pliny the elder, in particular, relates this very story, among other instances, in confirmation of that notion. See Plin. Hist. Nat. 1. 9, c. 8. (Melm.)
launched out towards the opposite shore. He was met by a dolphin, who sometimes swam before him, and sometimes behind him, then played round him, and at last took him upon his back, then let him down, and afterwards took him up again: and thus carried the poor frightened boy out into the deepest part; when immediately he turns back again to the shore, and lands him among his companions. The fame of this remarkable accident spread through the town, and crowds of people flocked round the boy (whom they viewed as a kind of prodigy) to ask him questions, hear his story and repeat it.

The next day the shore was lined with multitudes of spectators all attentively observing the ocean, and (what indeed is almost itself an ocean) the lake. In the meanwhile the boys swam as usual, and among the rest, the youth I am speaking of went into the lake, but with more caution than before. The dolphin punctually appeared again and came to the boy, who together with his companions swam away with the utmost precipitation. The dolphin, as it were, to invite and recall them, bounded and dived up and down, winding about in a thousand different circles. This he practised for several days together, till the people (accustomed from their infancy to the sea) began to be ashamed of their timidity. They ventured therefore to advance nearer, playing with him and calling him to them, while he, in return, suffered himself to be touched and stroked. Use rendered them more courageous: the boy, in particular, who first made the experiment, swam by the side of him, and leaping upon his back, was carried to and fro in that manner: he fancies the dolphin knows and is fond of him, and he returns its fondness. There seemed neuter timet, neuter timetur; huius fiducia, mansuetudo illius augetur. Nec non alii pueri dextra laevaque simul eunt hortantes monentesque. Ibat una (id quoque mirum) delphinus alius tantum spectator et comes. Nihil enim simile aut faciebat aut patiebatur, sed alterum illum ducebat reducebatque, ut puerum ceteri pueri.

Haec tu qua miseratione, qua copia deflebis,

\[a\] It was a religious ceremony practised by the antients, to pour precious ointment upon the statues of their gods: Avitus, it is probable, imagined this dolphin was some sea-divinity, and therefore expressed his veneration of him by the solemnity of a sacred unction. (Melm.)

254
now, indeed, to be no fear on either side, the confidence of the one and the tameness of the other mutually increasing; the rest of the boys in the meanwhile swimming on either hand, encouraging and cautioning their companion. It is very remarkable, that this dolphin was followed by a second, which seemed only as a spectator and attendant on the former; for he did not at all submit to the same familiarities as the first, but only conducted him backwards and forwards, as the boys did their comrade.

But what is incredible, yet no less true than the rest, this dolphin who thus played with the boys and carried them upon his back, would come upon the shore, dry himself in the sand, and as soon as he grew warm, roll back into the sea. 'Tis known that Octavius Avitus, deputy governor of the province, from an absurd piece of superstition, poured some precious ointment over him as he lay on the shore, the novelty and smell of which made him retire into the ocean, and it was not till after several days that he was seen again, when he appeared dull and languid; however he recovered his strength and continued his usual wanton tricks. All the magistrates round the country flocked hither to view this sight, the entertainment of whom upon their arrival, and during their stay, was an additional expense, which the slender finances of this little community could ill afford; besides, the quiet and retirement of the place was utterly destroyed. It was thought proper therefore to remove the occasion of this concourse, by privately killing the poor dolphin.

And now, with what a flow of tenderness will you describe this sad catastrophe! and how will your ornabis, attolles! Quamquam non est opus adstringas aliquid aut adstruas; sufficit, ne ea, quae sunt vera, minuantur. Vale.

XXXIV

C. Plinius Tranquillo Suo S.

BOOK IX. xxxiii.-xxxiv genius adorn and heighten this moving story! Though, indeed, it does not require any fictitious embellishments; it will be sufficient to place the real circumstances in their full light. Farewell.

XXXIV

To Tranquillus

I am under a wondrous difficulty, which you must settle. I have not, I am told, a good manner of reading verses: my talent lying chiefly in reciting orations, I succeed so much the worse, it seems, in poetry. I design therefore, as I am to recite some poems to my familiar friends, to make trial of my freedman for that purpose. It is treating them, I own, with familiarity, to employ a person who does not read well himself; however, he will perform, I know, better than I can, provided his fears do not disconcert him, for he is as unpractised a reader as I am a poet. Now the perplexing question is, how I shall behave while he is reading; whether I shall sit silent in a fixed and indolent posture, or follow him as he pronounces, with my eyes, hands and voice; a manner which some, you know, practise. But I fancy I have as little gift for pantomime as for reading. I repeat it again, therefore, you must extricate me out of this wondrous difficulty, and write me word whether you honestly think it would be better to read ever so ill, than to practise or omit any of the weighty circumstances above-mentioned. Farewell.
XXXV

C. Plinius Atrio\textsuperscript{1} Suo S.

Librum, quem misisti, recepi et gratias ago. Sum tamen hoc tempore occupatissimus. Ideo nondum eum legi, cum alioqui validissime cupiam; sed eam reverentiam cum litteris ipsis tum scriptis tuis debo, ut sumere illa nisi vacuo animo irreligiosum putem. Diligentiam tuam in retractandis operibus valde probo. Est tamen aliquis modus, primum quod nimia cura deterit magis quam emendat, deinde quod nos a recentioribus revocat simulque nec absolvit priora et inchoare posteriora non patitur. Vale.

XXXVI

C. Plinius Fusco Suo S.

Quaeris, quem ad modum in Tuscis diem aestate disponam.

Evigilo, cum libuit, plerumque circa horam primam, saepe ante, tardius raro. Clausae fenestrae manent. Mire enim silentio et tenebris ab iis, quae avocant, abductus et liber et mihi relictus, non oculos animo sed animum oculis sequor, qui eadem quae \textsuperscript{1} Atrio D, Appio pr, Oppio a, Attio K.

XXXV

To Atrius

I have received your book, and return you thanks for it; but am at present so much engaged, that I have not time to read it; which, however, I impatiently wish to do. I have that high reverence for letters in general, and for your compositions in particular, that I think it a sort of profanation to approach them but with a mind entirely disengaged. I extremely approve of your care in revising your works; remember, however, this exactness has its limits: too much polishing rather weakens than strengthens a performance. Besides, this excessive delicacy, while it calls one off from other pursuits, not only prevents any new attempts, but does not even finish what it has begun. Farewell.

XXXVI

To Fuscus

You desire to know in what manner I dispose of my day in summer-time at my Tuscan villa. I rise just when I find myself in the humour, though generally with the sun; often indeed sooner, but seldom later. When I am up, I continue to keep the shutters of my chamber-windows closed. For under the influence of darkness and silence, I find myself wonderfully free and abstracted from those outward objects which dissipate attention, and left to my own thoughts; nor do I suffer my mind to wander with my eyes, but keep my eyes in subjection.

Ubi hora quarta vel quinta (neque enim certum dimensumque tempus), ut dies suasit, in xystum me vel cryptoporticum confero, reliqua meditor et dicto. Vehiculum ascendo. Ibi quoque idem quod ambulans aut iacens; durat intentio mutatione ipsa refecta. Paulum redormio, dein ambulo, mox orationem Graecam Latinamve clare et intente non tam vocis causa quam stomachi lego; pariter tamen et illa firmatur. Iterum ambulo, ungor, exercceor, lavor. Cenanti mihi, si cum uxor vel paucis, liber legitur; post cenam comoedus aut lyristes; mox cum meis ambulo, quorum in numero sunt eruditi.
to my mind, which in the absence of external objects, see those which are present to the mental vision. If I have any composition upon my hands, this is the time I choose to consider it, not only with respect to the general plan, but even the style and expression, which I settle and correct as if I were actually writing. In this manner I compose more or less as the subject is more or less difficult, and I find myself able to retain it. Then I call my secretary, and, opening the shutters, I dictate to him what I have composed, after which I dismiss him for a little while, and then call him in again and again dismiss him.

About ten or eleven of the clock (for I do not observe one fixed hour), according as the weather recommends, I betake myself either to the terrace, or the covered portico, and there I meditate and dictate what remains upon the subject in which I am engaged. From thence I get into my chariot, where I employ myself as before, when I was walking or in my study; and find this changing of the scene preserves and enlivens my attention. At my return home I repose myself a while; then I take a walk; and after that, read aloud and with emphasis some Greek or Latin oration, not so much for the sake of strengthening my elocution as my digestion; though indeed the voice at the same time finds its account in this practice. Then I walk again, am anointed, take my exercises, and go into the bath. At supper, if I have only my wife, or a few friends with me, some author is read to us; and after supper we are entertained either with music, or an interlude. When that is finished, I take my walk with my domestics, in the number of which I am not without
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Ita variis sermonibus vespera extenditur, et quamquam longissimus dies cito conditur.

Non numquam ex hoc ordine aliqua mutantur. Nam, si diu iacui vel ambulavi, post somnum demum lectionemque non vehiculo, sed, quod brevius, quia velocius, equo gestor. Interveniunt amici ex proximis oppidis partemque diei ad se trahunt interdumque lassato mihi opportuna interpellatione subveniunt. Venor aliquando, sed non sine pugillaribus, ut, quamvis nihil ceperim, non nihil referam. Datur et colonis, ut videtur ipsis, non satis temporis, quorum mihi agrestes querelae litteras nostras et haec urbana opera commendant. Vale.

XXXVII

C. PLINIUS PAULINO SUO S.

Nec tuae naturae est translaticia haec et quasi publica officia a familiaribus amicis contra ipsorum commodum exigere, et ego te constantius amo, quam ut verear, ne aliter, ac velim, accipias, nisi te Kalendis statim consulemvidero; praeertim cum me necessitas locandorum praediorum in\(^1\) plures

\(^1\) in add. Müller.

262
some persons of literature. Thus we pass our evenings in various conversation; and the day, even when it is at the longest, is quickly spent.

Upon some occasions, I change the order in certain of the articles above mentioned. For instance, if I have lain longer or walked more than usual, after my second sleep and reading aloud, instead of using my chariot I get on horseback; by which means I take as much exercise and lose less time. The visits of my friends from the neighbouring towns claim some part of the day; and sometimes by a seasonable interruption, they relieve me, when I am fatigued. I now and then amuse myself with sporting, but always take my tablets into the field, that though I should catch nothing, I may at least bring home something. Part of my time, too (though not so much as they desire), is allotted to my tenants: and I find their rustic complaints give a zest to my studies and engagements of the politer kind. Farewell.

XXXVII

To Paulinus

As you are not of a disposition to expect from your friends the common ceremonies of the world, when they cannot observe them without inconvenience to themselves; so I too warmly love you to be apprehensive you will take otherwise than I wish you should, my not waiting upon you on the first day on your entrance upon the consular office; especially as I am detained here by the necessity of letting my annos ordinatura detineat, in qua mihi nova consilia sumenda sunt. Nam priore lustro, quamquam post magnas remissiones, reliqua creverunt. Inde plerisque nulla iam cura minuendi aeris alieni, quod desperant posse persolvi; rapiunt etiam consumuntque, quod natum est, ut qui iam putent se non sibi parere.

Occurrendum ergo augescentibus viiis et medendi est. Medendi una ratio, si non nummo, sed partibus locem ac deinde ex meis aliquos operis exactores custodes fructibus ponam. Et alioqui nullum iustius genus reditus, quam quod terra, coelum, annus refert. At hoc magnam fidem, acres oculos, numerosas manus poscit. Experiendum tamen et quasi in veteri morbo quaelibet mutationis auxilia temptanda sunt.

Vides, quam non delicata me causa obire primum consulatus tui diem non sinat; quem tamen hic quoque ut praesens votis, gaudio, gratulatione celebrabo. Vale.
BOOK IX. xxxvii

farms upon long leases. I am obliged to enter upon an entire new method with my tenants: for during the last five years, though I made them very considerable abatements, they have run greatly in arrear. For this reason several of them not only take no sort of care to lessen a debt, which they despairs of paying in full; but even seize and consume all the produce of the lands, in the belief that it would now be no advantage to themselves to spare it.

I must therefore obviate this increasing evil, and endeavour to find out some remedy against it. The only one I can think of is, not to let at a money-rent, but on condition of receiving a fixed share of the produce; and then to place some of my servants to overlook the tillage, and to keep a watch on the crops. And indeed, there is no sort of revenue more equitable, than what arises from the bounty of the soil, the seasons and the climate. 'Tis true, this method will require great integrity and diligent attendance in the person I appoint my bailiff, and put me to the expense of employing many hands. However, I must hazard the experiment; and, as in an inveterate distemper, try every change of remedy.

You see, it is not any pleasurable indulgence, that prevents my attending you on the first day of your consulship. I shall celebrate it nevertheless, as much as if I were present, and pay my vows for you here, with all the warmest sentiments of joy and congratulation. Farewell.
XXXVIII

C. Plinius Saturnino Suo S.

Ego vero Rufum nostrum laudo, non quia tu, ut ita facerem, petisti, sed quia ille est dignissimus. Legi enim librum omnibus numeris absolutum, cui multum apud me gratiae amor ipsius adiecit. Iudicavi tamen. Neque enim soli iudicant, qui maligne legunt. Vale.

XXXIX

C. Plinius Mustio Suo S.

Haruspicum monitu reficienda est mihi aedes Cereris in praediiis in melius et in maius, vetus sane et angusta, cum sit alioqui stato die frequentissima. Nam Idibus Septembribus magnus e regione tota coit populus, multae res aguntur, multa vota suscipiuntur, multa redduntur; sed nullum in proximo suffugium aut imbris aut solis. Videor ergo munifice simul religioseque facturus, si aedem quam pulcher rimam exstruxero, addidero porticus aedi, illam ad usum deae, has ad hominum.

Velim ergo emas quattuor marmoreas columnas, cuius tibi videbitur generis, emas marmora, quibus

Soothsayers who practised the (originally Etruscan) method of divination by inspection of the sacrificial victim's entrails.
XXXVIII

To Saturninus

Yes, I sincerely applaud our friend Rufus; not because you desire me; but because I think he highly merits approbation. I have read his very finished performance, to which my affection for the author added a considerable recommendation. Yet it did not blind my judgement; for the malicious, is not, I trust, the only judicious reader. Farewell.

XXXIX

To Mustius

In compliance with the advice of the haruspices, I intend to repair and enlarge the temple of Ceres, which stands upon my estate. It is indeed not only very ancient, but small, considering how thronged it is upon a certain anniversary. On the 13th of September, great numbers of people from all the country round assemble there, many affairs are transacted, and many vows paid and offered; but there is no shelter hard by against rain or sun. I imagine then, I shall do at once an act of piety and munificence, if at the same time that I rebuild the temple on the noblest scale, I add to it a spacious portico; the first for the service of the Goddess, the other for the use of the people.

I beg therefore you would purchase for me four marble pillars, of whatever kind you shall think proper; as also a quantity of marble for laying the solum, quibus parietes excolantur. Erit etiam vel faciendum vel emendum ipsius deae signum, quia antiquum illud e ligno quibusdam sui partibus vetustate truncatum est.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Quantum ad porticus, nihil interim occurrit, quod videatur istinc esse repetendum; nisi tamen ut formam secundum rationem loci scribas. Neque enim possunt circumdari templo; nam solum templi hinc flumine et abruptissimis ripis, hinc via cingitur. Est ultra viam latissimum pratum, in quo satis apte contra templum ipsum porticus explicabuntur; nisi quid tu melius invenires, qui soles locorum difficultates arte superare. Vale.

XL

C. PLINIUS FUSCO SUO S.

Scribis pergratas tibi fuisse litteras meas, quibus cognovisti, quem ad modum in Tuscis otium aestatis exigerem; requiris quid ex hoc in Laurentino hieme permutem. Nihil, nisi quod meridianus somnus eximitur, multumque de nocte vel ante vel post diem sumitur, et si agendi necessitas instat, quae frequens hieme, non iam comoedo vel lyristae post cenam a ix. 36.

268
floor and incrusting the walls. You must likewise either buy a statue of the Goddess, or procure one to be made; for age has maimed, in some parts, the ancient one of wood which stands there at present.

With respect to the portico, I do not at the moment recollect there is any thing you can send me that will be serviceable; unless you will sketch me out a plan suitable to the situation of the place. It is not practicable to build it round the temple, because it is encompassed on one side by the river, whose banks are exceedingly steep; and on the other, by the high road. Beyond this road lies a very large meadow, in which the portico may be conveniently enough placed, opposite to the temple; unless you, who are accustomed to conquer the inconveniences of nature by art, can propose some better situation. Farewell.

XL
To Fuscus

You are much pleased, I find, with the account I gave you in my former letter,* of the manner in which I spend my summer holidays in my Tuscan villa; and desire to know what alteration I make in my method, when I am at my Laurentine villa in the winter. None at all, except depriving myself of my sleep at noon, and considerably abridging my nocturnal repose, either after sunset or before sunrise: and if I have any forensic business impending (which in winter very frequently happens) instead of having interludes or music after supper.

269
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

locus, sed illa, quae dictavi, identidem retractantur, ac simul memoriae frequenti emendatione proficitur. Habes aestate, hieme consuetudinem; nunc¹ addas huc licet ver et autumnum, quae inter hiemem aestatemque media, ut nihil de die perdunt, ita de nocte parvulum acquirunt. Vale.

¹ nunc add. Casaub.
BOOK IX. xl

I meditate upon what I have dictated, and by often revising it in my own mind, fix it in my memory. Thus I have given you my scheme of life in summer and winter; to which you may add the intermediate seasons of spring and autumn. As at those times I lose nothing of the day, so I steal but little from the night. Farewell.
BOOK X
LIBER DECIMUS

I

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Tua quidem pietas, imperator sanctissime, optaverat, ut quam tardissime succederes patri: sed di immortales festinaverunt virtutes tuas ad gubernacula rei publicae, quam susceperas, admovere. Precor ergo, ut tibi et per te generi humano prospera omnia, id est digna saeculo tuo, contingant. Fortem te et hilarem, imperator optime, et privatim et publice opto.

II

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Exprimere, domine, verbis non possum, quantum mihi gaudium attuleris, quod me dignum putasti iure trium liberorum. Quamvis enim Iuli Serviani, optimi viri tuique amantissimi, precibus indulseris, a Nerva, who had adopted Trajan three months previously, died on Jan. 28, 98 A.D. Trajan received the news of his BOOK X

I

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

Your filial affection, most pious Emperor, made you wish it might be late ere you succeeded your Father. But the immortal gods have hastened the advancement of those virtues to the helm of the commonwealth, which had already so successfully shared in the conduct of it. May you then, and the world through your means, enjoy every prosperity, in other words, everything worthy of your reign; to which let me add my wishes, most excellent Emperor, upon a private as well as public account, that your health and spirits may be preserved firm and unbroken.

II

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

You have occasioned me, Sir, an inexpressible pleasure, by thinking me worthy of enjoying the privilege which the laws confer on those who have three children. For though it was an indulgence to the request of your very affectionate and worthy friend Servilianus, that you granted this favour; yet accession at Cologne, and did not return to Rome for nearly two years.

See ii. 13, note, vii. 16, note.

275
tamen etiam ex rescripto intellego libentius hoc ei te praestitisse, quia pro me rogabat. Videor ergo summam voti mei consecutus, cum inter initia felicissimi principatus tui probaveris me ad peculiarem indulgentiam tuam pertinere; eoque magis liberos concupisco, quos habere etiam illo tristissimo saeculo volui, sicut potes duobus matrimoniiis meis credere. Sed di melius, qui omnia integra bonitati tuae reservarunt; malui hoc potius tempore me patrem fieri, quo futurus essem et securus et felix.

III a

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Ut primum me, domine, indulgentia vestra promovit ad praefecturam aerarii Saturni, omnibus advocationibus, quibus aliqui numquam eram promiscue functus, renuntiavi, ut toto animo delegato mihi officio vacarem. Qua ex causa, cum patronum me provinciales optassent contra Marium a Of Domitian. On Pliny’s marriages see Introduction.

---

1 malui Av. a, Bipons, maluere Ernesti, Müller.

b The only public treasury until the time of Augustus, who created two others, with separate sources of revenue. The aerarium Saturni (so called from its office being in the temple
I have the satisfaction to find by the words of your rescript that you complied the more willingly, as his application was in my behalf. I cannot but look upon myself as in possession of my utmost wish, after having thus received, at the entrance of your auspicious government, so distinguishing a mark of your peculiar favour; at the same time that it considerably heightens my desire of leaving a family behind me. I was not without this inclination even in that former most cruel reign: as my two marriages will easily incline you to believe. But the Gods decreed it better, by reserving every valuable privilege to be bestowed by your kindness. I prefer to become a father only now, when I can be secure and happy in my fatherhood.

III a

To the Emperor Trajan

When, Sir, by the joint indulgence of your august Father and yourself, I was promoted to the head of the treasury of Saturn, I immediately renounced all engagements of the bar (which indeed I never undertook promiscuously), that no avocations might call off my attention from the post to which I was appointed. For this reason when the people of Africa petitioned that I might undertake their cause against Marius Priscus, I excused myself from that of Saturn, after various changes of administration under the emperors, was placed by Nerva under the charge of two "prefects of the treasury," who were appointed by the emperor and held office for three years.

See ii. 11; iii. 4, 9; vi. 29.

III b

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Et civis et senatoris boni partibus functus es obsequium amplissimi ordinis, quod iustissime exigebat, praestando. Quas partes impleturum te secundum susceptam fidem confido.

IV

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

INDULGENTIA tua, imperator optime, quam plenis-simam experior, hortatur me, ut audeam tibi etiam pro amicis obligari; inter quos sibi vel praecipuum

---

* When provincials sought to prosecute a governor, an advocate for them was ordinarily chosen by lot, out of several nominated by the Senate. This form was observed when, as office; and accordingly my excuse was admitted. But when afterwards the consul elect proposed that the Senate should apply again to those of us who had put in an excuse and endeavour to prevail with us to place ourselves at its disposal, and suffer our names to be thrown into the urn, I thought it most suitable to that tranquillity and good order which so happily distinguishes your times, not to oppose (especially in so reasonable an article) the will of that august assembly. And, as I am desirous that all my words and actions may be approved by your exemplary virtue, I hope you will think my compliance was proper.

III b

THE EMPEROR TRAJAN TO PLINY

You acted as becomes a good citizen and a worthy senator, by paying obedience to the just injunctions of that august body; and I have full confidence you will faithfully discharge the part you have undertaken.

IV

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

The ample experience, Sir, I have had of your unbounded generosity to me, in my own person, encourages me to hope I may be yet farther obliged to it, in favour of my friends. Voconius Romanus in this case, the provincials asked for some particular advocate.
locum vindicat Voconius Romanus, ab ineunte aetate condiscipulus et contubernalis meus. Quibus ex causis et a divo patre tuo petieram, ut illum in amplissimum ordinem promoveret. Sed hoc votum meum bonitati tuae reservatum est, quia mater Romani liberalitatem sestertii quadragiens,\(^1\) quod conferre se filio codicillis ad patrem tuum scriptis professa fuerat, nondum satis legitime peregerat; quod postea fecit admonita a nobis. Nam et fundos emancipavit et cetera, quae in emancipatione implenda solent exigi, consummavit.

Cum sit ergo finitum, quod spes nostras morabatur, non sine magna fiducia subsigno apud te fidem pro moribus Romani mei, quos et liberalia studia exornant, et eximia pietas, qua et hanc ipsam matris liberalitatem et statim patris hereditatem et adoptionem a vitrico meruit. Auget haec et natalium et paternarum facultatum splendor; quibus singulis multum commendationis accessurum etiam ex meis precibus indulgentiae tuae credo. Rogo ergo, domine, ut me exoptatissimae mihi gratulationis compotem facias et honestis, ut spero, affectibus meis praestes, ut non in me tantum, verum et in amico gloriari iudiciis tuis possim.

\(^1\) quadragiens \(B\), quadringentes \(a\).
(my school-fellow and early companion) claims the first rank in that number; in consequence of which I petitioned your sacred Father to promote him to the dignity of the Senatorial order. But the completion of my request is reserved to your goodness; for his mother had not then executed a deed of gift of the four millions of sesterces which she engaged to give him, in her petition to the Emperor your late father: this, however, on a reminder from me she has since done, having realized a sufficient estate in land, with all the necessary formalities.

The difficulties therefore being removed which deferred our wishes, it is with full confidence I venture to assure you of the merit of my friend Romanus, heightened and adorned as it is, not only by the liberal and polite arts, but by his extraordinary tenderness to his parents. It is to that virtue he owes the present liberality of his mother; as well as his immediate succession to his late father's estate, and his having been adopted by his stepfather. To these personal qualifications, the wealth and rank of his family give an increase of lustre; as I persuade myself it will be some additional recommendation to your favour, that I solicit in his behalf. Let me then intreat you, Sir, to put it in my power to congratulate Romanus, on an occasion so highly agreeable to me; and at the same time to gratify an eager, and I hope a laudable ambition of being able to boast, that your favourable regards are extended not only to myself, but also to my friend.

a Property to the value of 1,200,000 sesterces was a necessary qualification for senatorial rank.
C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Proximo anno, domine, gravissima valitudine usque ad periculum vitae vexatus iatralipten adsumpsi; cuius sollicitudini et studio tuae tantum indulgentiae beneficio referre gratiam possum. Quare rogo, des ei civitatem Romanam. Est enim peregrinae condicionis manumissus a peregrina. Vocatur ipse Harpocras; patronam habuit Thermuthin Theonis, quae iam pridem defuncta est. Item rogo, des ius Quiritium libertis Antoniae Maximillae, ornatissimae feminae, Hediae et Harmeridi, quod a te petente patrona peto.

VI

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Ago gratias, domine, quod et ius Quiritium libertis necessariae mihi feminae et civitatem Romanam Harpocrati, iatraliptae meo, sine mora indulstsisti. Sed, cum annos eius et censum, sicut praeeperas, ederem, admonitus sum a peritioribus debuisse me a An iatraliptes, or “doctor-trainer,” practised a treatment consisting of dieting, exercises, and massage.

---

b Freedmen of citizens, if manumitted with the full legal formalities (iusta manumissio) became ipso facto citizens; those of aliens kept, of course, the status of their patrons.

c A woman, though herself a citizen, could not give iusta manumissio, but must use one of the informal methods, by which the freedman gained only the “Latin franchise”
BOOK X. v.–vi

V

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

Having been attacked last year by a severe and dangerous illness, I employed a physician whose care and diligence, Sir, I cannot sufficiently reward, but by your gracious assistance. I intreat you therefore to make him a citizen of Rome; for he is the freedman of an alien. His name is Harpocrates; his patroness (who has been dead a considerable time) was Thermuthis, the daughter of Theon. I farther intreat you to bestow the full privileges of a Roman citizen upon Hedia and Harmeris, the freedwomen of Antonia Maximilla, a lady of high rank. It is at her desire I make this request.

VI

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

I return you thanks, Sir, for your ready compliance with my desire, in granting the complete privileges of a Roman to the freedwomen of a lady to whom I am allied, and making Harpocrates my physician a citizen of Rome. But when, agreeably to your directions, I gave in an account of his age and estate, I was informed by those who are better skilled in these affairs than I pretend to be, that as he is an (vii. 16, note, x. 104, note). Persons who already had this ius Latinorum became full citizens by the addition of the ius Quiritium; hence Pliny asks the latter for Antonia’s freedwomen, but civitas for the alien Harpocrates.

d Certain legal disqualifications attended the non-fulfilment of this condition.

283
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

ante ei Alexandrinam civitatem impetrare, deinde Romanam, quoniam esset Aegyptius. Ego autem, quia inter Aegyptios ceterosque peregrinos nihil interesse credebam, contentus fueram hoc solum scribere tibi, esse eum 1 a peregrina manumissum patronamque eius iam pridem decadisse. De qua ignorantia mea non queror, per quam stetit, ut tibi pro eodem homine saepius obligarer.

Rogo itaque, ut beneficio tuo legitime frui possim, tribuas ei et Alexandrinam civitatem et Romanam. Annos eius et censum, ne quid rursus indulgentiam tuam moraretur, libertis tuis, quibus iusseras, misi.

VII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

CIVITATEM Alexandrinam secundum institutionem principum non temere dare proposui. Sed, cum Harpocrati, iatraliptae tuo, iam civitatem Romanam impetraveris, huic quoque petitioni tuae negare non sustineo. Tu, ex quo nomo sit, notum mihi facere debebis, ut epistulam tibi ad Pompeium Plantam, praefectum Aegypti, amicum meum, mittam.

1 esse eum B, etsi eum A v., scilicet eum a.

The citizens of Alexandria and other Greek cities in Egypt formed a distinct class from the Egyptians belonging

284
BOOK X. vi.-vii

Egyptian, I ought first to have obtained for him the freedom of Alexandria, before he was made free of Rome. I confess, indeed, as I was ignorant of any difference in this case between Egyptians and other aliens, I contented myself with only acquainting you, that he had been manumitted by a foreign lady, long since deceased. However, it is an ignorance I cannot regret, since it affords me an opportunity of receiving from you a double obligation in favour of the same person.

That I may legally therefore enjoy the benefit of your goodness, I beg you would be pleased to grant him the freedom of the city of Alexandria, as well as that of Rome. And that your gracious intentions may not meet with any farther obstacles, I have taken care, as you directed, to send an account to your freedmen of his age and fortune.

VII

THE EMPEROR TRAJAN TO PLINY

It is my resolution, in pursuance of the maxim observed by the princes my predecessors, to be extremely cautious in granting the freedom of the city of Alexandria: however, since you have obtained of me the freedom of Rome for your physician Harpocras, I cannot refuse you this other request. You must let me know to what district he belongs, that I may give you a letter to my good friend Pompeius Planta, governor of Egypt.

to the forty-seven nomes (provinces). Neither the Ptolemies, nor their successors the Roman emperors, ever granted the Alexandrian citizenship to these Egyptians, except in very special circumstances. (Hardy.)
C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Cum divus pater tuus, domine, et oratione pulcherrima et honestissimo exemplo omnes eives ad munificentiam esset cohortatus, petii ab eo, ut statuas principum, quas in longinquis agris per plures successiones traditas mihi, quales acceperam, custodiebam, permitteret in municipium transferre adiecta sua statua. Quod cum$^1$ ille mihi cum plenissimo testimonio indulserat, ego statim decurionibus scripsersam, ut adsignarent solum, in quotemplum pecunia mea exstruerem; illi in honorem operis ipsius electionem loci mihi obtulerant. Sed primum mea, deinde patris tui valetudine, postea curis delegati a vobis officii retentus nunc videor commodissime posse in rem praesentem excurrere. Nam et menstruum meum Kalendis Septembris finitur, et sequens mensis complures dies feriatos habet.

Rogo ergo ante omnia permittas mihi opus, quod incohaturus sum, exornare et tua statua, deinde, ut hoc facere quam maturissime possim, indulgeas $^1$quod cum Gruterus, quodque a, B.
VIII

To the Emperor Trajan

After your late sacred Father, Sir, had, in a noble speech as well as by his own generous example, exhorted and encouraged the public to acts of munificence, I implored his permission to remove to my township the several statues which I had of the former emperors; and at the same time begged the liberty of adding his own to the number. For these statues had come down to me as family heirlooms, and I had kept them just as they were on my distant estate. He was pleased to grant my request and at the same time to give me a very ample testimony of his approbation.

I immediately therefore wrote to the town council, that they would allot a piece of ground, upon which I might build a temple at my own expense; but as a mark of honour to my design, they offered me the choice of any site I thought proper. However, my own indisposition in the first place, and afterward that of your father, and later the duties of that post with which you were both pleased to intrust me, prevented my going on with that design. But I have now, I think, a convenient opportunity of making an excursion to this place, as my month’s attendance ends on the first of September, and there are several holidays in the month following.

My first request then is, that you would permit me to adorn the temple I am going to erect, with your statue, besides the rest; and next (in order to execute my design with all the expedition possible) that you would indulge me with leave of absence.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

commeatum. Non est autem simplicitatis meae dissimulare apud bonitatem tuam obiter te plurimum collaturum utilitatibus rei familiaris meae. Agrorum enim, quos in eadem regione possideo, locatio cum alioqui cccc excedat, adeo non potest differri, ut proximam putationem novus colonus facere debeat. Praeterea continuae sterilitates cogunt me de remissi-onibus cogitare; quarum rationem nisi praesens inire non possum.

Debebo ergo, domine, indulgentiae tuae et pietatis meae celeritatem et status ordinationem, si mihi ob utraque haec dederis commeatum xxx dierum. Neque enim angustius tempus praefinire possum, cum et municipium et agri, de quibus loquor, sint ultra centesimum et quinquagesimum lapidem.

IX

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Et privatas ¹ multas et omnes publicas causas petendi commeatus reddidisti; mihi autem vel sola voluntas tua suffecisset. Neque enim dubito te, ut primum potueris, ad tam districtum officium reversurum. Statuam poni mihi a te eo, quo desideras, ¹ privatas add. Catan.

BOOK X. viii.–ix

It would ill become the sincerity I profess, were I to conceal from so kind a master that your complying with this desire will at the same time be extremely serviceable to me in my own private affairs. It is absolutely necessary I should not defer any longer the letting of my lands in that province; for besides that they amount to above four hundred thousand sesterces annually, the time for dressing the vineyards is approaching, and that care must fall upon my new tenants. Moreover, the badness of the vintage for several years past obliges me to think of making some abatements in my rents; which I cannot possibly settle unless I am present.

I shall be indebted then to your indulgence, Sir, both as accelerating this public act of piety, and giving me the opportunity of settling my private affairs, if you will be pleased to grant me leave to be absent for thirty days. I cannot limit a shorter time, as the town and the estate of which I am speaking lie above an hundred and fifty miles from Rome.

IX

TRAJAN TO P L I N Y

You have given me many private reasons, and all, moreover, with a bearing on the public welfare, why you desire leave to be absent; but I need no other than that it is your inclination: and I doubt not of your returning as soon as possible to the duty of an office, which so much requires your attendance. As I would not seem to check any instance of your loco, quamquam eiusmodi honorum parcissimus, tamen patior, ne impedisse cursum erga me pietatis tuae videar.

X

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

EXPRIMERE, domine, verbis non possum, quanto me gaudio adfecerint epistulæ tuæ, ex quibus cognovi, te Harpocrati, iatraliptae meo etiam Alexandrinam civitatem tribuisses, quamvis secundum institutionem principum non temere eam dare proposuisses. Esse autem Harpocran νομοῦ Μεμφιτικοῦ indico tibi. Rogo ergo, indulgentissime imperator, ut mihi ad Pompeium Plantam, praefectum Aegypti, amicum tuum, sicut promisisti, epistulam mittas.

Obviam iturus, quo maturius, domine, exoptatissimi adventus tui gaudio frui possim, rogo, permittas mihi quâm longissime occurrere tibi.

XI

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

PROXIMA infirmitas mea, domine, obligavit me Postumio Marino medico; cui parem gratiam referre beneficio tuo possum, si precibus meis ex consuetudine bonitatis tuae indulseris. Rogo ergo, loyalty towards me, I shall not oppose your erecting my statue in the place you mention; though in general I am extremely chary of allowing such marks of honour.

X

To the Emperor Trajan

I cannot express, Sir, the pleasure your letter gave me, by which I am informed that you have made my physician Harpocras a citizen of Alexandria; notwithstanding your resolution to follow the maxim of your predecessors in this point, by being extremely cautious in granting that privilege. Agreeably to your directions, I acquaint you that Harpocras belongs to the nome of Memphis. I intreat you then, most gracious Emperor, to send me as you promised a letter to your good friend, Pompeius Planta, governor of Egypt.

As I purpose (in order to have the earliest enjoyment of your presence, so ardently wished for here)\(^a\) to come to meet you; I beg, Sir, you would permit me to extend my journey as far as possible.

XI

To the Emperor Trajan

I was greatly obliged, Sir, in my late indisposition, to Posthumius Marinus, my physician; and I can only make him a suitable return by the assistance of the gracious indulgence which you are wont to shew to my petition. I intreat you then to confer Roman

\(^a\) Affairs in Germany had delayed Trajan's return to Rome as Emperor. See x. I note.
ut propinquis eius des civitatem, Chrysippo Mithridatis, uxorique Chrysippi Stratonicae Epigoni, item liberis eiusdem Chrysippi, Epigono et Mithridati, ita ut sint in patris potestate, utque iis in libertos servetur ius patronorum. Item rogo, indulges ius Quiritium L. Satrio Abascantio et P. Caesio Phosphoro et Anchariae Soteridi; quod a te volentibus patronis peto.

XII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Scio, domine, memoriae tuae, quae est benefaciendi tenacissima, preces nostras inhaerere. Quia tamen in hoc quoque saepe indulisti, admoneo simul et impense rogo, ut Accium Suram praetura exornare digneris, cum locus vacet. Ad quam spem alioqui quietissimum hortatur et natalium splendor et summa integritas in paupertate et ante omnia felicitas temporum, quae bonam conscientiam civium tuorum ad usum indulgentiae tuae provocat et attollit.

---

*An exceptional privilege to the sons, for on Chrysippus gaining the patria potestas over them they would normally lose their independent rights, including those over their freedmen. (Hardy.)*
citizenship upon the following persons, his relatives; Chrysippus, son of Mithridates, and Stratonica, daughter of Epigonus, who is wife to Chrysippus. I implore likewise the same privilege in favour of Epigonus and Mithridates, the two sons of Chrysippus; but in such manner that they may be under the dominion of their father and yet preserve their right of patronage over their own freedmen. I farther intreat you to grant the full privileges of a Roman to L. Satrius Abascantus, P. Caesius Phosphorus, and Ancharia Soteris. This request I make with the consent of their patrons.

XII

To the Emperor Trajan

Though I am well assured, Sir, that you, who never forget any opportunity of exerting your generosity, are not unmindful of the request I lately made you; yet since you have frequently, among many other instances of your indulgence, permitted me to repeat my solicitations to you, I do so now on behalf of Accius Sura; and I earnestly beseech you to honour him with the Praetorship, which is at present vacant. Though his ambition is extremely moderate, yet the quality of his birth, the inflexible integrity which he has shewn in a fortune below mediocrity, and, above all, the happiness of your reign, which emboldens citizens of conscious virtue to claim the indulgence of your favour, prompts him to hope he may experience it in this instance.
C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Cum sciam, domine, ad testimonium laudemque morum meorum pertinere tam boni principis iudicio exornari, rogo, dignitati, ad quam me provexit indulgentia tua, vel auguratum vel septemviratum, quia vacant, adicere digneris, ut iure sacerdotii precari deos pro te publice possim, quos nunc precor pietate privata.

XIV

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Victoriae tuae, optime imperator, maximae, pulcherrimae, antiquissimae et tuo nomine et rei publicae gratulor deosque immortales precor, ut omnes cogitationes tuas tam laetus sequatur eventus, ut virtutibus tantis gloria imperii et novetur et augeatur.

---

a The Augurs and the Septemviri formed two of the four great priestly colleges. Pliny received the Augurship (vacant by the death of Julius Frontinus), probably in 103 A.D. cf. iv. 8.
BOOK X. xiii.–xiv

XIII

To the Emperor Trajan

As I am sensible, Sir, that the highest applause my conduct can receive, is to be distinguished by so excellent a Prince: I beg you would be graciously pleased to add either the office of Augur or Septemvir (both of which are now vacant) to the dignity I already enjoy by your indulgence; that I may have the satisfaction of publicly offering up those vows for your prosperity, from the duty of my office, which I daily prefer to the Gods in private, from the affection of my heart.

XIV

To the Emperor Trajan

I congratulate both you and the public, most excellent Emperor, upon the great and glorious victory you have obtained, so agreeable to the heroism of Rome. May the immortal Gods give the same happy success to all your designs, that, under the administration of so many princely virtues, the splendour of the Empire may shine out, not only in its former, but with additional lustre.

The Augurship was usually conferred on consulars; Pliny had been Consul 100 A.D.

Over the Dacians. See viii. 4. Whether this letter refers to Trajan’s first or second campaign is unknown.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XV

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Quia confido, domine, ad curam tuam pertinere, nuntio tibi me Ephesum cum omnibus meis ἅπερ Ἔλεαν navigasse. Quamvis contrariis ventis retentus, nunc destino partim orariis navibus, partim vehiculis provinciam petere. Nam sicut itineri graves aestus, ita continuae navigationi etesiae reluctantur.

XVI

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Recte renuntiasti, mi Secunde carissime. Pertinet enim ad animum meum, quali itinere in provincia pervenias. Prudenter autem constituis interim navibus, interim vehiculis uti, prout loca suaserint.

XVII a

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Sicut saluberrimam navigationem, domine, usque Ephesum expertus ita inde, postquam vehiculis iter facere coepi, gravissimis aestibus atque etiam febrī-

\[1\] in add. Cat\[2\].

296
BOOK X. xv.-xvii a

XV

To the Emperor Trajan

Having safely passed the promontory of Malea, I am arrived at Ephesus with all my train, notwithstanding I was detained for some time by contrary winds; an information, Sir, in which I trust you will think yourself concerned. I design to pursue the remainder of my journey to my province, partly in coasting vessels and partly in post-chaises: for as the excessive heats will prevent my travelling altogether by land, so the Etesian winds, which are now set in, will not permit me to proceed entirely by sea.

XVI

Trajan to Pliny

Your communication, my dear Pliny, was extremely proper; as it is much my concern to know in what manner you arrive at your province. You are prudent in arranging to travel either by sea or land, as you shall find most convenient.

XVII a

To the Emperor Trajan

As I had a very salubrious voyage to Ephesus, so in travelling post from thence I was extremely in-commoded by the heats; they even threw me into a *a See Introduction for Pliny's governorship of Bithynia, to which the rest of this book relates.

XVII b

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Quintodecimo Kalendas Octobres, domine, provinciam intravi, quam in eo obsequio, in ea erga te fide, quam de genere humano mereris, inveni. Dispice, domine, an necessarium putes mittere hoc mensorem. Videntur enim non mediocres pecuniae posses revocari a curatoribus operum, si mensurae fideliter aguntur. Ita certe prospicio ex ratione Prusensium, quam cum maxime tracto.
fever, which kept me some time at Pergamum. I then resorted to coasting-vessels; but being detained by contrary winds, I arrived at Bithynia somewhat later than I had hoped, namely on the 17th of September. However, I have no reason to complain of this delay, since it produced me a most auspicious omen—namely, to celebrate your birthday in my province.\(^a\) I am at present engaged in examining into the public finances of the Prusenses, their disbursements, revenues and credits; and the more I look into them, the more I perceive the necessity of my inquiry. Many sums of money are detained in private hands upon various pretences; moreover, some public grants are made for quite illegitimate expenses. This, Sir, I write to you immediately on my arrival.

XVII B

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

I ENTERED this province, Sir, on the 17th of September, and found it in those sentiments of obedience and loyalty which you justly merit from all mankind. You will consider, Sir, whether it would not be proper to send hither a surveyor; for it appears that substantial sums of money might be recovered from the contractors for public buildings, if a faithful admeasurement were taken. At least, I am of that opinion, from what I have already seen of the accounts of this city, which I am now in the act of examining.

\(^a\) The reigning Emperor's birthday had always been a public holiday.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XVIII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

CUPEREM sine querela corpusculi tui et tuorum pervenire in Bithyniam potuisses, ac simile tibi iter ab Epheso ei navigationi fuisset, quam expertus usque illo eras. Quo autem die pervenisses in Bithyniam, cognovi, Secunde carissime, litteris tuis. Provinciales, credo, prospectum sibi a me intellegent. Nam et tu dabis operam, ut manifestum sit illis electum te esse, qui ad eosdem mei loco mittereris. Rationes autem in primis tibi rerum publicarum excutiendae sunt; nam et esse eas vexatas satis constat. Mensores vix etiam iis operibus, quae aut Romae aut in proximo fiunt, sufficientes habeo; sed in omni provincia inveniuntur, quibus credi possit, et ideo non deerunt tibi, modo velis diligenter excutere.

XIX

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Rogo, domine, consilio me regas haesitantem utrum per publicos civitatum servos, quod usque adhuc factum, an per milites adservare custodias debeam. Vereor enim, ne et per servos publicos parum fideliter custodian tur, et non exiguum militum

\[a\] For the playful use of \textit{corpusculum} cf. vi. 4.

\[b\] Slaves owned by a state or city wore a sort of livery, had 300

VIII

TRAJAN TO PLYN

I wish you could have reached Bithynia without any complaint from your little anatomy, or from your train; and that your journey from Ephesus had been as easy as your voyage to that place. I note from your letter, my dear Pliny, what day you reached Bithynia. The people of that province will understand, I believe, that I have their interests at heart. For you will take care to make it clear to them, that you were appointed specially to represent myself. You must pay particular attention to investigating the financial affairs of the towns, which are evidently in confusion. As for surveyors, I have scarce enough for those works which I am carrying on at Rome, and in the neighbourhood; but trustworthy persons of this class may be found in every province, so that you will have no lack of such if you choose to make diligent inquiry.

XIX

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

I beg your advice, Sir, on a matter wherein I am greatly doubtful; it is, whether I should have the prisoners guarded by public slaves (as has been hitherto the practice), or by soldiers? On the one hand, I am afraid the public slaves will not perform this duty faithfully; and on the other, that it will an annual stipend, and were employed as mail-carriers, executioners, attendants at the public baths, libraries, etc.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Numerum haec cura distinguishat. Interim publicis servis paucos milites addidi. Video tamen periculum esse, ne id ipsum utrisque neglegentiae causa sit, dum communem culpam hi in illos, illi in hos regere posse confidunt.

XX

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Nihil opus est, mi Secunde carissime, ad continendas custodias plures commilitones converti. Perseveremus in ea consuetudine, quae isti provinciae est, ut per publicos servos custodiantur. Etenim, ut fideliter hoc faciant, in tua severitate ac diligentia positum est. In primis enim, sicut scribis, verendum est, ne, si permisceantur servis publicis milites, mutua inter se fiducia neglegentiores sint. Sed et illud haereat nobis, quam paucissimos milites a signis avocandos esse.

XXI

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Gabius Bassus, praefectus orae Ponticae, et reverentissime et officiosissime, domine, venit ad me et compluribus diebus fuit mecum, quantum

a An expression avoided as undignified by Augustus and his immediate successors, but affected by later Emperors, whose power largely depended on the goodwill of the army.

b cf. x. 22.
engage too large a body of the soldiery. In the meanwhile I have joined a few of the latter with the former. I see, however, there is a danger that this plan may occasion negligence on both sides; since each will trust to throwing upon the other the blame attaching to both.

XX

Trajan to Pliny

There is no occasion, my dear Pliny, to draw off more of my fellow-soldiers a to guard the prisoners. Let us rather abide by the custom of your province, and employ the public slaves. Their fidelity in this office depends entirely upon the discipline and care you exercise. It is to be feared, as you observe, that if the soldiers are combined with the public slaves, they will mutually rely on each other, and by that means grow so much the more negligent. But let this be our fixed rule, that as few soldiers as possible should be called away from the colours. b

XXI

To the Emperor Trajan

Gabius Bassus, Prefect of the Pontic shore, c visited me in the most respectful and obliging manner, and has been with me, Sir, for several days.

---

a Prefects in the provinces were more or less permanent officials, appointed by the Emperor. Some held civil, others military appointments; among the latter were the Prefects of the Rhine frontier, the Euphrates frontier, and the littoral of the Black Sea.
perspicere potui, vir egregius et indulgentia tua dignus. Cui ego notum feci praecepsisse te, ut ex cohortibus, quibus me praeesse voluisti, contentus esset beneficiariis decem, equitibus duobus, centurione uno. Respondit non sufficere sibi hunc numerum, idque se scripturum tibi. Hoc in causa fuit, quo minus statim revocandos putarem, quos habet supra numerum.

XXII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Et mihi scrispsit Gabius Bassus non sufficere sibi eum militum numerum, qui ut daretur illi, mandatis meis complexus sum. Cui quae rescripsisset, ut notum haberet, his litteris subici ipsis. Multum interest, res poscat an homines imperare latius velint. Nobis autem utilitas demum spectanda est, et, quantum fieri potest, curandum, ne militas a signis absint.

XXIII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Prusenses, domine, balineum habent et sordidum et vetus. Id itaque indulgentia tua restituere

1 Cui quae rescripsisset K, quid quaeris scrisisses me? a, B.
2 res poscat an homines imperare latius velint Cutan., te poscat an homines in se ut latius velint a, B, tempus p. an h. iure uti l. v. Orell.
As far as I could observe, he is a person of great merit and worthy of your favour. I acquainted him it was your order that he should retain only ten beneficiary soldiers, two troopers, and one centurion, out of the cavalry which you were pleased to assign to my command. He assured me these would not be sufficient for him, and that he would write to you upon this head; for which reason I did not, immediately upon your directions, recall his supernumeraries.

XXII
Trajan to Pliny

I have received from Gabius Bassus the letter you mention, acquainting me, that the number of your soldiers I had ordered him was not sufficient: and for your information I have directed my answer to be annexed to this. It is very material to distinguish between what the exigency of affairs requires and what an ambitious desire of extending power may think necessary. As for ourselves, the interest of the public must be our only guide: and it is incumbent upon us to take all possible care, that the soldiers are not absent from their colours.

XXIII
To the Emperor Trajan

The Prusenses, Sir, have an ancient and ruinous bath, which they desire your leave to repair. Upon examining into the condition of it, I find it ought to a Privates who were either exempted from fatigue duty, or detailed for some special duty by a superior, were called his beneficiarii.

---

THE LETTERS OF PLINY

desiderant: ego tamen aestimans novum fieri debere . . . . videris mihi desiderio eorum indulgere posse. Erit enim pecunia, ex qua fiat, primum ea, quam revocare a privatis et exigere iam coepi, deinde quam ipsi erogare in oleum soliti parati sunt in opus balinei conferre; quod alioqui et dignitas civitatis et saeculi tui nitor postulat.

XXIV

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Si instructio novi balinei oneratura vires Prusen-sium non est, possumus desiderio eorum indulgere, modo ne quid ideo aut intribuatur, aut minus illis in posterum fiat ad necessarias erogationes.

XXV

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

SERVILIUS PUDENS legatus, domine, vii Kal. Decembres Nicomediam venit meque longae exspectationis sollicitudine liberavit.

XXVI

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

ROSIANUM GEMINUM, domine, artissimo vinculo mecum tua in me beneficia iunxerunt. Habui enim be rebuilt; I think therefore you may indulge them in this request, as there will be a sufficient fund for that purpose, partly from those debts which are due from private persons to the public, which I am now calling in, and partly from what they disburse from their treasury towards furnishing the bath with oil, which they are willing to apply to the carrying on of this building: a work which the dignity of the city, and the splendour of your reign seems to demand.

XXIV

Trajan to Pliny

If the erecting a public bath will not be too great a charge upon the Prusenses, we may comply with their request: provided, however, that no new tax be levied for this purpose, nor any of those taken off which are applied for necessary purposes.

XXV

To the Emperor Trajan

My lieutenant Servilius Pudens came to Nicomedia, Sir, on the 24th of November; and by his arrival freed me, at last, from the solicitude of a very uneasy expectation.

XXVI

To the Emperor Trajan

Your generosity to me, Sir, was the occasion of uniting me to Rosianus Geminus, by the strongest illum quaestorem in consulatu, mei summe observantissimum expertus. Tantam mihi post consulatum reverentiam praestat, ut publicae necessitutininis pignora privatis cumulet officiis. Rogo ergo, ut ipse apud te pro dignitate eius precibus meis faveas, cui et, si quid mihi credis, indulgentiam tuam dabis. Dabit ipse operam, ut in iis, quae ei mandaveris, maiora mereatur. Parciorem me in laudando facit, quod spero tibi et integritatem eius et probitatem et industriam non solum ex eius honoribus, quos in urbe sub oculis tuis gessit, verum etiam ex commilitio esse notissimam. Illud unum, quod propter caritatem eius nondum mihi videor satis plene fecisse, etiam atque etiam facio; teque, domine, rogo, gaudere me exornata quaestoris mei dignitate, id est per illum mea, quam maturissime velis.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XXVII

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Maximus, libertus et procurator tuus, domine, praeter decem beneficiarios, quos adsignari a me ties; for he was my Quaestor when I was Consul. His behaviour to me, during the continuance of our offices, was highly respectful; and he has treated me ever since with so peculiar a regard, that besides the many obligations I owe him upon a public account, I am indebted to him for the strongest pledges of private friendship. I intreat you then to comply with my request for the advancement of one, whom (if my recommendation has any weight) you will even honour with your particular favour; as whatever trust you shall repose in him, he will endeavour to shew himself still deserving of an higher. But I forbear to enter into a more particular detail of his merit; being persuaded, his integrity, his probity, and his vigilance are well known to you, not only from those high posts, which he has exercised in Rome within your immediate inspection; but from his behaviour when he served under you in the field. One thing, however, my affection for him inclines me to think I have not yet sufficiently done; and therefore, Sir, I repeat my entreaties to you, that you will give me the pleasure, as early as possible, of rejoicing in the honourable advancement of my Quaestor; or, in other words, of receiving an addition to my own dignity, in the person of my friend.

XXVII

To the Emperor Trajan

I am assured, Sir, by your freedman and receiver-general Maximus, that it is necessary he should have a party of six soldiers assigned to him, over and besides
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Gemellino, optimo viro, iussisti, sibi quoque confirmat necessarios esse milites sex. Tres\(^1\) interim, sicut inveneram, in ministerio eius relinquendos existimavi, praesertim cum ad frumentum comparandum iret in Paphlagoniam. Quin etiam tutelae causa, quia desiderabat, addidi duos equites. In futurum quid servari velis, rogo rescribas.

XXVIII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Nunc quidem proficiscentem ad comparationem frumentorum Maximum, libertum meum, recte militibus instruxisti. Fungebatur enim et ipse extraordinario munere. Cum ad pristinum actum reversus fuerit, sufficient illi duo a te dati milites et totidem a Virdio Gemellino, procuratore meo, quem adiuvat.

XXIX

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

SEMPRONIUS CAELIANUS, egregius iuvenis, repertos inter tirones duos servos misit ad me; quorum ego

\(^1\) milites sex. Tres Mommsen, milites. Ex his interim a, B, lacunam post milites K, post interim ind. Müller.

\(^a\) See x. 21, note.
the ten beneficiary soldiers, a which by your orders I allotted to the very worthy Gemellinus. Three therefore which I found in his service I thought proper to continue there, especially as he was going into Paphlagonia in order to procure corn. For his better security likewise, and because it was his request, I added two of the horse-guards. But I beg you would inform me in your next despatches, what method you would have me observe for the future in points of this nature.

XXVIII

Trajan to Pliny

As my freedman Maximus was going upon an extraordinary commission to procure corn, I approve of your having supplied him with a file of soldiers. But when he shall return to the duties of his former post, I think two from you, and as many from my receiver-general Virdius Gemellinus (to whom he is coadjutor) will be sufficient.

XXIX

To the Emperor Trajan

Sempronius Caelianus (whose merit I must always mention with esteem) having discovered two slaves b among the recruits has sent them to me. But I b The Roman policy excluded slaves from entering into military service, and it was death if they did so. (Melm.) But in great crises, as after the battle of Cannae, and during the civil wars, slaves were occasionally enlisted.

THE LETTERS OF PLINY

supplicium distuli, ut te conditorem disciplinae militaris firmatoremque consulerem de modo poenae. Ipse enim dubito ob haec maxime, quod, ut iam dixerant sacramento militari, nondum distributi in numeros erant. Quid ergo debeam sequi, rogo, domine, scribas, praesertim cum pertineat ad exemplum.

XXX

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Secundum mandata mea fecit Sempronius Caelianus mittendo ad te eos, de quibus cognosci oportebat, an capitale supplicium meruisse videantur. Refert autem, voluntarii se obtulerint an lecti sint vel etiam vicarii dati. Lecti si sunt, inquisitio peccavit; si vicarii dati, penes eos culpa est, qui dederunt; si ipsi, cum haberent condicionis suae conscientiam, venerunt, animadvertendum in illos erit. Neque enim multum interest, quod nondum per numeros distributi sunt. Ille enim dies, quo primum probati sunt, veritatem ab his originis suae exigit.

312 deferred passing sentence till I had conferred with you, the glorious founder, and firm support of military discipline, concerning the punishment proper to be inflicted upon them. My principal doubt is, that though they have taken the military oath, they are not yet entered into any particular legion. I beg therefore, Sir, you would let me know what method I shall pursue, especially as it is an affair in which example is concerned.

XXX

Trajan to Pliny

Sempronius Caelianus has acted agreeably to my orders, in sending those persons to you for trial, the capital nature of whose offence must be decided by investigation. It is material, in the case in question, to inquire, whether these slaves enlisted themselves voluntarily, or were enrolled by the recruiting officers, or presented as proxies for others. If they were enrolled, the officer is guilty; if they are proxies, the blame rests with those who deputed them; but if, conscious of the legal inabilities of their station, they presented themselves voluntarily, the punishment must fall upon their own heads. That they are not yet entered into any legion makes no great difference in their case; for they ought to have given a true account of themselves immediately, upon their being approved as fit for the service.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XXXI

C. Plinius Traiano Imperator

Salva magnitudine tua, domine, descendas oportet ad meas curas, cum ius mihi dederis referendi ad te, de quibus dubito. In plerisque civitatibus, maxime Nicomediae et Niceae, quidam vel in opus damnati vel in ludum similiaque his genera poenarum publicorum servorum officio ministerioque funguntur atque etiam ut publici servi annua accipiunt. Quod ego cum audissem, diu multumque haesitavi, quid facere deberem. Nam et reddere poenae post longum tempus plerosque iam senes et, quantum adfirmatur, frugaliter modesteque viventes nimis severum arbitrabar, et in publicis officis retinere damnatos non satis honestum putabam; eosdem rursus a republica pasci otiosos inutile, non pasci etiam periculosum existimabam. Necessario ergo rem totam, dum te consulerem, in suspenso reliqui.

Quaeres fortasse, quem ad modum evenerit, ut poenis, in quas dati erant, exsolverentur; et ego quaesivi, sed nihil comperi, quod adfirmare tibi possim.

\textsuperscript{a} x. 19, note.
As I have your permission, Sir, to address myself to you in all my doubts, you will not esteem it below your dignity to descend to those affairs, which concern the administration of my post. I find there are in several cities, particularly those of Nicomedia and Nicea, certain persons who take upon themselves to act as public slaves, and receive an annual stipend accordingly; notwithstanding they have been condemned either to the mines, the public games or other punishments of like nature. Having received information of this abuse, I have been long debating with myself how I should act. On the one hand, to send them back again after a long interval to their respective punishments, (many of them being now grown old, and behaving, as I am assured, with sobriety and modesty,) would, I thought, be proceeding against them too severely; on the other, to retain convicts in the public service, seemed not altogether decent. I considered at the same time, to support these people in idleness, would be an useless expense to the public; and to leave them to starve, would be dangerous. I was obliged therefore to suspend the determination of this matter, till I could consult with you.

You will be desirous, perhaps, to be informed, how it happened that these persons escaped the punishments to which they were condemned. This inquiry I have also made myself, but cannot return you any satisfactory answer. The records of their
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Ut decreta, quibus damnati erant, proferebantur, ita nulla monumenta, quibus liberati probarentur. Erant tamen, qui dicerent deprecantes iussu proconsulum legatorumve dimissos. Addebat fidem, quod credibile erat neminem hoc ausum sine auctore.

XXXII

Traianus Plinio

Meminerimus idcirco te in istam provinciam missum, quoniam multa in ea emendanda apparuerint. Erit autem vel hoc maxime corrigendum, quod, qui damnati ad poenam erant, non modo ea sine auctore, ut scribis, liberati sunt, sed etiam in condicionem proborum ministrorum retrahuntur. Qui igitur intra hos proximos decem annos damnati nec ullo idoneo auctore liberati sunt, hos oportebit poenae suae reddi; si qui vetustiores invenientur et senes ante annos decem damnati, distribuamus illos in ea ministeria, quae non longe a poena sint. Solent enim eius modi ad balineum, ad purgationes cloacarum, item munitiones viarum et vicorum dari.
sentence were indeed produced; but no record of their ever having been reversed. It was asserted, however, that these people were released upon their petition to the proconsuls, or their lieutenants; which seems likely enough to be the truth, as it is improbable any person should have dared to set them at liberty without authority.

XXXII

TRAJAN TO PLINE

We are to remember that you were sent into Bithynia for the particular purpose of correcting those many abuses with which it appeared to be over-run. Now none stands more in need of reformation, than that convicts should not only be set at liberty (as your letter informs me) without authority; but actually restored to the station of respectable officials. Those therefore among them who have been convicted within these ten years, and whose sentence has not been reversed by proper authority, must be sent back again to their respective punishments: but where more than ten years have elapsed since their conviction, and they are grown old and infirm, let them be distributed in such employments as approach penal servitude; that is, either to attend upon the public baths, cleanse the common sewers, or repair the streets and highways, the usual offices to which such persons are assigned.
XXXIII

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Cum diversam partem provinciae circumirem, Nicomediae vastissimum incendium multas privatorum domos et duo publica opera quamquam via interiacente, Gerusian et Iseon, absumpsit. Est autem latius sparsum primum violentia venti, deinde inertia hominum, quos satis constat otiosos et immobiles tanti mali spectatores perstistisse; et alioqui nullus usquam in publico sipho, nulla hama, nullum denique instrumentum ad incendia compescenda. Et haec quidem, ut iam praecipi, parabuntur. Tu, domine, dispice, an instituendum putes collegium fabrorum dumtaxat hominum CL. Ego attendam, ne quis nisi faber recipiat, neve iure concesso in alium utatur; nec erit difficile custodire tam paucos.

XXXIV

Traianus Plinio

Tibi quidem secundum exempla complurium in mentem venit posse collegium fabrorum apud Nicomedenses constitui. Sed meminerimus provin-

1 quos Rittershusius, quod a.
BOOK X. xxxiii.—xxxiv

XXXIII
To the Emperor Trajan

While I was making a progress in a different part of the province, a prodigious fire broke out at Nicomedia, which not only consumed several private houses, but also two public buildings, the old men’s hospice and the temple of Isis, though they stood on contrary sides of the street. The occasion of its spreading thus far was partly owing to the violence of the wind, and partly to the indolence of the people, who, I am well assured, stood fixed and idle spectators of this terrible calamity. And at any rate, the city was not provided either with a single engine or bucket or any one instrument proper to extinguish fires; these however will be got ready, as I have already ordered. Pray determine, Sir, whether you think it well to institute a guild of fire-men, not to exceed one hundred and fifty members. I will take care none but those of that calling shall be admitted into it; and that the privileges granted them shall not be diverted to any other purpose. As they will be so few, it will be easy enough to keep them under proper regulation.

XXXIV
Trajan to Pliny

You are of opinion it would be proper to constitute a guild of fire-men in Nicomedia, agreeably to what has been practised in several other places. But it a Several cities are known to have had these institutions, which provided common meals and a common resort for aged citizens elected to membership.

THE LETTERS OF PLINY

ciam istam et praecipue eas civitates eius modi factionibus esse vexatas. Quodcumque nomen ex quacumque causa dederimus iis, qui in idem contracti fuerint hetaeriae aeque brevi¹ sient. Satius itaque est comparari ea, quae ad coercendos ignes auxilio esse possint, admonerique dominos praediorum, ut et ipsi inhibeant, ac, si res poposcerit, accursu populi ad hoc uti.

XXXV

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

SOLEMnia vota pro incolumitate tua, qua publica salus continetur, et suscipimus, domine, pariter et solvimus, precati deos ut velint ea semper solvi semperque signari.

XXXVI

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Et solvisse vos cum provincialibus dis immortalibus vota pro mea salute et incolumitate et nuncu-passe libenter, mi Secunde carissime, cognovi ex litteris tuis.

¹ aeque brevi Lightfoot, quae breves a, B.

---

¹ Nicomedia and, probably, Nicomedia, her rival.

² This had happened in the case of many of the trade-guilds at Rome. Our own Trades Unions supply parallels.
BOOK X. xxxiv.–xxxvi

is to be remembered that this sort of societies have greatly disturbed the peace of your province in general, and of those cities\(^a\) in particular. Whatever title we give them, and whatever our object in giving it, men who are banded together for a common end will all the same become a political association before long.\(^b\) It will therefore be better to provide suitable means for extinguishing fires, and enjoin owners of house-property to employ these themselves, calling in the help of the populace when necessary.

XXXV

To the Emperor Trajan

We have offered,\(^c\) Sir, and acquitted, our annual vows for your safety, in which that of the State is included; imploring the Gods to grant us ever thus to pay, and thus to confirm them.

XXXVI

Trajan to Pliny

I was gratified, my dear Pliny, to learn by your letter, that you, together with the provincials, have both paid and renewed your vows to the immortal Gods, for my health and safety.

\(^c\) \textit{suscipere vota} = \text{to undertake vows (for the coming year)}; \textit{vota solvere} = \text{to pay vows (for the past year)}. The ceremony referred to was performed on the Capitol, in the various camps, and in the provinces, on the 3rd January. (Hardy.)
In aquae ductum, domine, Nicomendenses impenderunt sestertium [xxx] cccxxix, qui imperfectus adhuc relictus ac etiam destructus est: rursus in alium ductum erogata sunt cc. Hoc quoque relecto novo impendio est opus, ut aquam habeant, qui tantam pecuniam male perdiderunt. Ipse perveni ad fontem purissimum, ex quo videtur aqua debere perduci, sicut initio tentatum erat, arcuato opere, ne tantum ad plana civitatis et humilia perveniat. Manent adhuc paucissimi arcus; possunt et erigi quidam lapide quadrato, qui ex superiore opere detractus est; aliqua pars, ut mihi videtur, testaceo opere agenda erit; id enim et facilius et vilius. Et in primis necessarium est mitti a te vel aquilegem vel architectum, ne rursus eveniat, quod accidit. Ego illud unum adfirmo, et utilitatem operis et pulchritudinem saeculo tuo esse dignissimam.

* About £27,000.
* The Pont de Gard near Nimes (Nemausus) is a magnificent specimen of these overground aqueducts.
To the Emperor Trajan

The citizens of Nicomedia, Sir, have expended three million three hundred and twenty-nine thousand sesterces on an aqueduct; but they abandoned it unfinished, and it has actually been pulled down. They made a grant of two hundred thousand sesterces for another aqueduct, but this likewise is discontinued; so that after having thrown away an immense sum they must incur fresh expense in order to be accommodated with water. I have personally visited a most limpid spring from whence the water may be conveyed over arches (as was done in their first design), so as not to reach only the level and low parts of the city. There are but very few arches remaining; others can be erected with the square blocks of stone which have been pulled down from the former work; some part, I think, may be built of brick, as that will be the easier and cheaper method. But first, to prevent another failure, it will be necessary for you to send here an inspector of aqueducts or an engineer. I will venture to affirm one thing—the beauty and usefulness of the work will be entirely worthy of your reign.

opus testaceum, "brickwork," was only used as facing to a concrete core, as was also the lapis quadratus just mentioned. (Hardy.)
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XXXVIII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Curandum est, ut aqua in Nicomedensem civitatem perducatur. Vere credo te ea, qua debebis, diligentia hoc opus aggressurum. Sed medius fidius ad eandem diligentiam tuam pertinet inquirere, quorum vitio ad hoc tempus tantam pecuniam Nicomedenses perderint, ne, cum inter se gratificantur, et inchoaverint aquaeductus et reliquerint. Quid itaque compereris, perfer in notitiam meam.

XXXIX

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Theatrum, domine, Nicaeae maxima iam parte constructum, imperfectum tamen, sestertium, ut audio (neque enim ratio operis excussa est) amplius centies hausit, vereor ne frustra. Ingentibus enim rimis desedit et hiat, sive in causa solum humidum et molle, sive lapis ipse gracilis et putris; dignum est certe deliberatione, sitne faciendum an sit relinquendum an etiam destruendum. Nam fulturae ac substructiones, quibus subinde suscipitur, non tam firmae mihi quam sumptuosae videntur. Huic theatro ex privatorum pollicitationibus multa deben-

1 operis Müller, plus a.
2 desedit Hardy ex Bodl., descendit a, discedit Gruter.
XXXVIII

Trajan to Pliny

Care must be taken to supply the city of Nicomedia with water—you will, I am persuaded, set about the work with all due diligence. But it is most certainly no less incumbent upon you to ascertain whose fault it is that the Nicomedians have up to the present squandered such large sums. They must not be suffered to commence and then abandon aqueducts by a system of collusion. You will let me know the result of your inquiry.

XXXIX

To the Emperor Trajan

The citizens of Nicaea, Sir, have built the greater part of a theatre which, though it is not yet finished, has already exhausted, as I hear said (for the account has not yet been audited) above ten millions of sesterces; and, I fear, to no purpose. For either from the damp and yielding nature of the ground, or that the stones themselves were thin and friable, the building is sinking and displaying enormous cracks. The question certainly deserves consideration, whether it should be completed, or abandoned, or even pulled down. For the buttresses and bases upon which it is here and there supported, appear to me more expensive than solid. Several private persons have undertaken to build parts of this theatre at their own expense, some tur ut basilicae circa, ut porticus supra caveam. Quae nunc omnia differuntur, cessante eo quod ante peragendum est.

Iidem Nicaeenses gymnasium incendio amissum ante adventum meum restituere coeperunt longe numerosius laxiusque, quam fuerat, et iam aliquantum erogaverunt, periculum est, ne parum utiliter; incompositum enim et sparsum est. Praeterea architectus sane aemulus eius, a quo opus inchoatum est, adfirmat parietes quamquam viginti et duos pedes latos imposita onera sustinere non posse, quia sint caemento mediī farti nec testaceo opere praecincti.

Claudiopolitani quoque in depressō loco, imminente etiam monte ingens balineum defodiunt magis quam aedificant, et quidem ex ea pecunia, quam buleutae additi beneficio tuo aut iam obtulerunt ob introitum aut nobis exigentibus conferent. Ergo, cum timeam, ne illic publica pecunia, hic, quod est omni pecunia pretiosius, munus tuum male collocetur, cogor petere a te, non solum ob theatrum, verum etiam ob haec balinea mittas architectum dispecturum, utrum sit utilius post sumptum, qui factus est, quoquo

“"The word Cavea in the original comprehends more than what we call the Pit in our theatres, as it means the whole space in which the spectators sat." (Melm.) "The cavea was the interior of the semi-circular part of the theatre, the rows of seats (cunei) rising out behind one another from the orchestra at the bottom to the external wall of the theatre at the top... At the top there was often a double row of engaging to erect the adjacent basilicas, others the gallery above the pit\(^a\): all of which are now postponed as the principal fabric is at a stand.

The citizens are also rebuilding, upon a larger scale, the Gymnasium, which was burnt down before my arrival in the province. They have already voted funds for the purpose, which are likely to be wasted, for the structure is ill-planned and rambling. Besides, the present architect (who, it must be owned, is a rival to the one first employed) asserts that the walls, though they are twenty-two feet thick, are not strong enough to support the superstructure, as their core is merely rubble, nor are they faced with brickwork.

Furthermore, the people of Claudiopolis are sinking (for I cannot call it building) a large public bath in a hollow at the very foot of a hill, and are appropriating for this work the fees which those extra members you were pleased to add to their senate paid on their admission, or are now paying on my demand.\(^b\) Lest, therefore, the public money in one place, and in the other (what is infinitely more valuable than any pecuniary consideration) your benefaction, should be misapplied, I am obliged to desire you would send hither an architect to inspect not only the theatre but the bath, and decide whether, after so much money has already been

\(^a\) In Bithynia those elected to the local senates paid no entrance fee, but those admitted on the Emperor’s nomination paid either one or two thousand denarii, according to circumstances.
modo consummare opera, ut inchoata sunt, an, quae videntur emendanda, corrigere, quae transferenda, transferre, ne, dum servare volumus, quod impensum est, male impendamus, quod addendum est.

XL

Traianus Plinio

Quid oporteat fieri circa theatrum, quod inchoatum apud Nicaeenses est, in re praesenti optime deliberabis et constitues. Mihi sufficiet indicari, cui sententiae accesseris. Tunc autem a privatis exigi opera tibi curae sit, cum theatrum, propter quod illa promissa sunt, factum erit. Gymnasiis indulgent Graeculi; ideo forsitan Nicaeenses maiore animo constructionem eius aggressi sunt. Sed oportet illos eo contentos esse, quod possit illis sufficere.

Quid Claudiopolitanis circa balineum, quod parum, ut scribis, idoneo loco inchoaverunt, suadendum sit, tu constitues. Architecti tibi deesse non possunt. Nulla provincia est, quae non peritos et ingeniosos homines habeat; modo ne existimes brevius esse ab urbe mitti, cum ex Graecia etiam ad nos venire soliti sunt.
laid out, it will be better to finish them as best we may upon the present plan, or to make improvements and alterations where they are required. Otherwise we may throw away our future outlay by endeavouring not to lose what we have already expended.

XL

Trajan to Pliny

You, who are upon the spot, will best be able to consider and determine what is proper to be done concerning the theatre, which the Nicaeans have begun; as for myself, it will be sufficient if you let me know your decision. It will be time enough for you to exact fulfilment of private undertakings with regard to parts of the theatre, when the main building is finished. These paltry Greeks, I know, have a foible for Gymnasia; hence, perhaps, the citizens of Nicaea have been somewhat too ambitious in planning one; but they must be contented with such a one as will be sufficient to answer their occasions.

You must decide for yourself how best to advise the Claudiopolitani with reference to their bath, which they have placed, it seems, in a very improper situation. As there is no province that is not furnished with architects of skill and ingenuity, you cannot possibly be in want of one; pray do not imagine it is your quickest way to get them from Rome, for it is usually from Greece that they come hither.
Intuenti mihi et fortunae tuae et animi magnitudinem convenientissimum videtur demonstrare opera non minus aeternitate tua quam gloria digna quantumque pulchritudinis tantam utilitatis habitura. Est in Nicomedensium finibus amplissimus lacus. Per hunc marmora, fructus, ligna, materiae et sumptu modico et labore usque ad viam navibus, inde magno labore, maiore impendio vehiculis ad mare devehuntur.\(^1\) Itaque mari committere cupiunt. Hoc opus multas manus poscit; at hae porro non desunt. Nam et in agris magna copia est hominum et maxima in civitate, certaque spes omnes libentissime aggressuros opus omnibus fructuosum.

Superest, ut tu libratorem vel architectum, si tibi videbitur, mittas, qui diligenter exploret, sitne lacus altior mari, quem artifices regionis huius quadraginta cubitis altiorem esse contendunt. Ego per eadem loca invenio fossam a rege percussam, sed incertum, utrum ad colligendum humorem circumiacentium agrorum an ad committendum flumini lacum; est enim imperfecta. Hoc quoque dubium, intercepto

\(^1\) devehuntur \ldots lacunam indic. Müller.
To the Emperor Trajan

When I reflect upon your exalted station, and the greatness of your mind, it seems most fitting to point out to you some works worthy alike of your immortality and your fame, and no less useful than magnificent. Bordering upon the territories of the city of Nicomedia is a most extensive lake; over which marbles, produce, timber and commodities are easily and cheaply transported to the high road; but from thence, are conveyed in carriages to the sea-side, at great charge and labour. Accordingly, they desire to connect this lake with the sea. To carry out this work will require, 'tis true, many hands; but these again cannot be scarce, for the country, and particularly the city, is exceedingly populous; and one may assuredly hope that everybody will readily engage in a work which will be of universal benefit.

It only remains then to send hither, if you shall think proper, a surveyor or an architect, in order to examine whether the lake lies above the level of the sea; the mechanics of this province being of opinion that the former is higher by forty cubits. I find there is in the neighbourhood of this place a large canal, which was cut by one of the kings of this country; but as it is left unfinished, it is uncertain whether it was for the purpose of draining the adjacent lands, or of connecting the lake and the river. It is equally doubtful, too, whether the death of the king, or the despair of being able to rege mortalitate an desperato operis effectu. Sed hoc ipso (feres enim me ambitiosum pro tua gloria) incitor et accendor, ut cupiam peragi a te, quae tantum coeperant reges.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XLII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Potest nos sollicitare lacus iste, ut committere illum mari velimus; sed plane explorandum est diligenter, ne, si demissus¹ in mare fuerit, totus effluat, certe quantum aquarum et unde accipiat. Poteris a Calpurnio Macro petere liberatorem, et ego hinc aliquem tibi peritum eiusmodi operum mittam.

XLIII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Requirenti mihi Byzantiorum rei publicae impendia, quae maxima fecit, indicatum est, domine, legatum ad te salutandum annis omnibus cum psephismate mitti, eique dari nummorum duodena milia. Memor ergo propositi tui legatum quidem retinendum, psephisma ᵃ Legate of Lower Moesia, 112 a.d. cf. letters 61, 67 of this Book. Letter 18 of Bk V. is addressed to him.

¹ demissus Catan., inmissus a, B, dimissus A v.

accomplish the design, prevented the completion of it. If the latter was the reason, I am so much the more impelled to desire ardently (you will forgive, I know, my being ambitious for your fame) that you may have the glory of executing, what kings could only attempt.

XLII

TRAJAN TO PLINY

The scheme you propose of opening a communication between the lake and the sea, may, perhaps, tempt me to come into it. But you must first carefully ascertain what quantity of water your lake contains, and from whence it is supplied; lest by letting it into the sea, it should be totally exhausted. You may apply to Calpurnius Macer for a surveyor; I will also send you from hence some person skilled in works of this nature.

XLIII

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

Upon examining the public expenses of the Byzantines (which I find are extremely great), I was informed, Sir, that they send an envoy every year to salute you with a complimentary decree, and allow him the sum of twelve thousand sesterces. Mindful of your intentions, I thought proper to send the decree without the envoy, that, at the same time

\[b \text{ i.e. that Pliny should enforce economy on the provincials; cf. x. 18, 38.}\]
autem mittendum putavi, ut simul et sumptus levaretur, et impleretur publicum officium. Eidem civitati imputata sunt terna milia, quae viatici nomine annua dabantur legato eunti ad eum, qui Moesiae praest, publice salutandum. Haec ego in posterum circumcidenda existimavi. Te, domine, rogo, ut, quid sentias, rescribendo aut consilium meum confirmare aut errorem emendare digneris.

XLIV

Traianus Plinio

Optime fecisti, Secunde carissime, duodena ista Byzantiis, quae ad salutandum me in legatum impendebantur, remittendo. Fungetur his partibus, etsi solum eorum psephisma per te missum fuerit. Ignoscet illis et Moesiae praeses, si minus illum sumptuose coluerint.

XLV

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Diplomata, domine, quorum dies praeterita, an omnino observari et quam diu velis, rogo scribas, a Calpurnius Macer. See x. 42 note.

b Orders, signed by the Emperor, to use the imperial posting system, by which official correspondence and travelling officials were conveyed between Rome and the provinces.
they discharged their public duty to you, they might be eased as regards the cost. This city is likewise charged with the sum of three thousand sesterces as travelling allowance of an envoy, whom they annually send to compliment the governor of Moesia; this expense I judged it right to retrench for the future. I beg, Sir, you would do me the honour either to confirm my judgement, or correct my error in these points, by letting me know your sentiments.

XLIV

Trajan to Pliny

I well approve, my dear Pliny, of your having remitted to the Byzantines the twelve thousand sesterces which they allowed the envoy commissioned to salute me. I shall esteem their duty as sufficiently paid, though I only receive the act of their senate through your hands. The governor of Moesia a must likewise excuse them, if they compliment him at a less expense.

XLV

To the Emperor Trajan

I beg, Sir, you would settle a doubt I have concerning your passports b; whether you think proper that those whose dates are expired shall remain valid,

"These diplomata at a later time were granted only by the Emperors, but at this period apparently the provincial governors were provided with blank forms which they could fill in and assign." (Hardy.)
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

meque haesitatione liberes. Vereor enim, ne in alterutram partem ignorantia lapsus aut illicita confirmem aut necessaria impediam.

XLVI

TRAIANUS PLINIO

DIPLOMATA, quorum praeteritus est dies, in usu esse non debent; ideo inter prima iniungo mihi, ut per omnes provincias ante mittam nova diplomata, quam desiderari possint.

XLVII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Cum vellem Apameae, domine, cognoscere publicos debitores et reditum et impendia, responsum est mihi cupere quidem universos, ut a me rationes coloniae legerentur, numquam tamen esse lectas ab ullo proconsulum; habuisse privilegium et vetustissimum morem arbitrio suo rem publicam administrare. Exegi, ut, quae dicebant, quaeque recitabant, libello complecterentur; quem tibi, qualem acceperam, misi, quamvis intellegerem pleraque ex illo ad id, de quo quaeritur, non pertinere. Te rogo, ut mihi praecipere digneris, quid me putes observare debere. Vereor enim, ne aut excessisse aut non implesse officii mei partes videar.

praecipere, Av., Bipons, K, Muell., praeire, Ba, Hard., Kukulu.

336
BOOK X. xlv.—xlvii

and how long? For I am apprehensive I may through ignorance fall into one of two errors, and either confirm instruments which are illegal, or obstruct those which are necessary.

XLVI

TRAJAN TO PLINY

Passports whose dates are expired must by no means be made use of. For which reason it is a principal rule with me, to send out fresh passports to all the provinces before there can be any shortage of them.

XLVII

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

Upon my desiring, Sir, to examine the public loans, revenues and expenditure of Apamea, the citizens replied they were all extremely willing I should inspect the accounts of the colony, but nevertheless no Proconsul had ever yet perused them, as they had a privilege (and that of very ancient date) of administering their commonwealth in the manner they thought proper. I required them to draw up a memorial of their assertions, together with the authorities they cited, which I transmit to you exactly as I received it; though I am sensible it contains several things foreign to the question. I beg you would honour me with your commands, how I am to act in this affair; for I would not willingly be thought either to exceed or fall short of my commission.
LIBELLUS Apameorum, quem epistulae tuae iunxeras, remisit mihi necessitatem perpendendi, qualia essent, propter quae videri volunt eos, qui pro consulibus hanc provinciam obtinuerunt, abstinuisse inspectione rationum suarum, cum, ipse ut eas inspiceres, non recusaverint. Remuneranda est igitur probitas eorum, ut iam nunc sciant hoc, quod inspecturus es, ex mea voluntate salvis, quae habent, privilegiis esse facturum.

XLIX
C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

ANTE adventum meum, domine, Nicomedenses priori foro novum adicere coeperunt, cuius in angulo est aedes vetustissima Matris Magnae aut reficienda aut transferenda ob hoc praecipue, quod est multo depressior opere eo, quod cum maxime surgit. Ego cum quae rerem, num esset aliqua lex dicta templo, cognovi alium hic, alium apud nos esse morem dedicationis. Dispice ergo, domine, an putes aedem, cui nulla lex dicta est, salva religione posse transferri. Alioqui commodissimum est, si religio non impedit.

1 ipse ut eas inspic. Hardy, cum ipse . . . non recusaverim Av., cum ipsum te ut eas inspic. non recusaverint a.

a The Phrygian Goddess Cybele.

b The pontifices on consecrating a temple drew up a lex dedicationis or lex templi, defining its precincts, its rights, its ritual, and the administration of its revenues. (Hardy.)
BOOK X. xlviii.–xlix

XLVIII

TRAJAN TO PLINY

The memorial of the Apameans which you annexed to your letter has saved me the necessity of considering the reasons they allege, why the former Proconsuls forbore to inspect their accounts; since they do not refuse to permit your examination. Their integrity deserves to be rewarded; and they must be assured for the present that you are to make your inquiry at my personal wish, and with a full reserve to their privileges.

XLIX

To the Emperor Trajan

The Nicomedians, Sir, before my arrival, had begun to build a new Forum contiguous to their former, in a corner of which stands an ancient temple dedicated to the Great Mother. This fabric must either be rebuilt or removed; and for this reason chiefly, because it stands on a much lower level than the lofty building now being erected. Upon inquiry whether this temple had been dedicated under charter, I was informed that their manner of dedication differs from ours. You will be pleased therefore, Sir, to consider whether a temple which has no charter of dedication, may be removed, consistently with the claims of religion; for if there is no objection from that quarter, there is none on the side of inconvenience.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

L

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Potes, mi Secunde carissime, sine sollicitudine religionis, si loci positio videtur hoc desiderare, aedem Matris Deum transferre in eam, quae est accommodator; nec te moveat, quod lex dedicationis nulla reperitur, cum solum peregrinae civitatis capax non sit dedicationis, quae fit nostro iure.

LI

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Difficile est, domine, exprimere verbis, quantam perceperim laetitiam, quod et mihi et socrui meae praestitisti, ut adfinem eius, Caelium Clementem in hanc provinciam transferres. Ex illo enim mensuram beneficii tui penitus intellego, cum tam plenam indulgentiam cum tota domo mea experiar, cui referre gratiam parem ne audeo quidem, quamvis maxime debeam. Itaque ad vota confugio deosque precor, ut iis, quae in me adsidue confers, non indignus existimer.

\footnote{adfinem eius \textit{Beroaldus}, ad finem eius \textit{Av.}, \textit{a}, ad finem consulatus \textit{Catan}.}

340
You may without religious scruple, my dear Pliny, if the site requires it, remove the temple of the Mother of the Gods to a more convenient spot. That you can find no charter of dedication, need not influence you; for the ground of a foreign city is not capable of receiving that kind of consecration which is conferred by our laws.

It is not easy, Sir, to express the joy I received, when I heard you had, in compliance with the request of my mother-in-law and myself, granted her kinsman Caelius Clemens the Proconsulship of this province after the expiration of his Consular office; as it is from thence I learn the full extent of your beneficence towards me, which thus graciously spreads itself through my whole family. I dare not pretend to make an equal return to those obligations, I so justly owe you. I can only therefore have recourse to vows, and ardently implore the Gods that I may not be found unworthy of those favours, which you are continually bestowing upon me.

a Pompeia Celerina, i. 4, iii. 19, xvi. 10.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

LII
C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI
Diem, domine, quo servasti imperium, dum suscipis, quanta mereris laetitia, celebravimus precati deos, ut te generi humano, cuius tutela et securitas saluti tuae innisa est, incolunem florentemque praestarent. Praeivimus et commilitonibus ius iurandum more solemni praestantibus et provincialibus, qui eadem certarunt pietate, iurantibus.

LIII
TRAIANUS PLINIO
Quanta religione ac laetitia commilitones cum provincialibus te praeeunte diem imperii mei celebraverint, libenter, mi Secunde carissime, cognovi ex litteris tuis.

LIV
C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI
Pecuniae publicae, domine, providentia tua et ministerio nostro et iam exactae sunt et exiguntur: quae vereor ne otiosae iaceant. Nam et praediorum comparandorum aut nulla aut rarissima occa-

342
LII

To the Emperor Trajan

We have celebrated, Sir, (with those sentiments of joy your virtues justly merit,) the day of your accession, when, at the same time that you accepted, you saved the empire. And we sincerely implored the Gods to preserve you in health and prosperity, as it is upon your welfare that the security and repose of mankind depend. I have administered the oath of allegiance to my fellow-soldiers in the usual form, the people of the province emulously expressing their affection to you by taking the same oath.

LIII

Trajan to Pliny

Your letter, my dear Pliny, was extremely acceptable, as it gave me an account how religiously and joyfully my fellow-soldiers and the provincials solemnized the day of my accession to the empire, under your presidency.

LIV

To the Emperor Trajan

The money owing to the public, by the prudence, Sir, of your counsels, and the care of my administration, is either actually paid in, or now recovering; but I am afraid it must lie unemployed. For as on one side, there are few or no opportunities of purchasing land, so on the other, one cannot meet sio est; nec inveniuntur, qui velint debere rei publicae, praesertim duodenis assibus,\(^1\) quanti a privatis mutuantur. Dispice ergo, domine, numquid minuendam usuram ac per hoc idoneos debitores invitandos putes, et, si ne sic quidem reperiuntur, distribuendum inter decuriones pecuniam, ita ut recte rei publicae caveant; quod quamquam invitis recusantibus minus acerbum erit leviore usura constituta.

LV

Traianus Plinio

Et ipse non aliud remedium dispicio, mi Secunde carissime, quam ut quantitas usurarum minuatur, quo facilius pecuniae publicae collocentur. Modum eius ex copia eorum, qui mutuabuntur, tu constitues. Invitos ad accipiendum compellere, quod fortassisipsis otiosum futurum sit, non est ex iustitia nostrorum temporum.

\(^1\) duodenis assibus deleri volunt Ernestius et Hard., usuris assibus Salmasius et Gronovius.

\(^a\) The reason why they did not choose to borrow of the with any person who is willing to borrow of the municipality (especially at the interest of 12 per cent.) when they can raise money upon the same terms from private hands. You will consider then, Sir, whether it may not be advisable, in order to invite responsible persons to borrow this money, to lower the interest; or if that scheme should not succeed, to parcel it out among the town-councillors, upon their giving sufficient security to the public. And though they should not be willing to receive it, yet as the rate of interest will be abated, the hardship will be so much the less.

LV

Trajan to Pliny

Like you, my dear Pliny, I see no other method of facilitating the placing out of the public money, than by lowering the interest; the amount of which reduction you will determine according to the number of the borrowers. But to compel persons to receive it, who are not disposed to do so, when possibly they themselves may have no opportunity of employing it, is by no means consistent with the justice of my government.

public at the same rate of interest which they paid to private persons, was because in the former instance they were obliged to give security (Melm.); and the state was a more formidable creditor than individuals.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

LVI

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Summas, domine, gratias ago, qui inter maximas occupationes in\(^1\) iis, de quibus te consului, me quoque regere dignatus es; quod nunc quoque facias rogo. Adiit enim me quidam indicavitque adversarios suos a Servilio Calvo, clarissimo viro, in triennium relegatos in provincia morari. Illi contra ab eodem se restitutos adfirmaverunt edictum-que recitaverunt. Qua causa necessarium credidi rem integrum ad te referre. Nam sicut mandatis tuis cautum est, ne restituam ab alio aut a me relegatos, ita de iis, quos alius relegaverit et restituerit, nihil comprehensum est.

Ideo tu, domine, consulendus fuisti, quid observare me velles tam hercule de his quam de illis, qui in perpetuum relegati nec restituti in provincia deprehenduntur. Nam haec quoque species incidit in cognitionem meam. Est enim adductus ad me in perpetuum relegatus Iulio Basso proconsule. Ego, quia sciebam acta Bassi rescissa datumque a senatu ius omnibus, de quibus ille aliquid constituisset, ex

\(^1\) in add. Gierig, Ernesti, K.

---

\(^a\) Proconsul of Bithynia 108–110 A.D.
\(^b\) Proconsul 98 A.D. See iv. 9, vi. 29.
BOOK X. lvi

LVI

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

I return you my highest acknowledgements, Sir, that among the many important occupations in which you are engaged, you have condescended to direct me also on those points wherein I have consulted you: a favour which I must now again beseech you to grant me. A certain person came before me with a complaint, that his adversaries, who had been banished for three years by Servilius Calvus, a man of senatorial rank, still remained in the province: they, on the contrary, affirmed that Calvus had restored them again to their country, and produced his edict to that purpose. I thought it necessary, therefore, to refer the whole affair to you. For as I have your express orders not to restore any person who has been sentenced to banishment either by myself or others; so I have no directions with respect to those who, having been banished by some of my predecessors in this government, have by them also been restored.

I am obliged then, to beg you would inform me, Sir, what method I should observe, as well with regard to these, as to others, who, having been condemned to perpetual banishment and never restored, are found in the province; for cases of that nature have likewise fallen under my cognizance. A person was brought before me who had been sentenced to perpetual exile by the Proconsul Julius Bassus; but knowing that the decrees of Bassus had been rescinded, and that the Senate had granted a new trial to all those who had come under his integro agendi dumtaxat per biennium, interrogavi hunc, quem relegaverat, an adiisset docuissetque proconsulem. Negavit.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Per quod effectum est, ut te consulerem, reddendum eum poenae suae an gravius aliquid et quid potissimum constituendum putares et in hunc et in eos, si qui forte in simili condicione invenirentur. Decretum Calvi et edictum, item decretum Bassi his litteris subieci.

LVII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Quid in persona eorum statuendum sit, qui a P. Servilio Calvo proconsule in triennium relegati et mox eiusdem edicto restituti in provincia remanerunt, proxime tibi rescribam, cum causas huius facti a Calvo requisiero. Qui a Iulio Basso in perpetuum relegatus est, cum per biennium agendi facultatem habuerit, si existimabat se iniuria relegaturn, neque id fecerit atque in provincia morari perseveraverit, vinctus mitti ad praefectos praetorii mei debet. Neque enim sufficit, eum poenae suae restitui, quam contumacia elusit.

* i.e. the Proconsul of 99 or 100.
* Not to be tried by them, but to remain in their custody pending the emperor’s decision on the case. Thus St. Paul sentence, provided they appealed within the space of two years, I inquired of this man whom he had banished whether he had acquainted the Proconsul with his case? He replied he had not.

I beg then you would inform me whether you would have him sent back again into exile; or whether you think some more severe, and what kind of punishment, should be inflicted upon him, and such others who may hereafter be found to lie under the same delinquency. I have annexed to my letter the decree of Calvus, and the edict by which the persons mentioned above were restored, as also the decree of Bassus.

LVII

Trajan to Pliny

I will let you know my determination concerning those exiles which were banished for three years by the proconsul P. Servilius Calvus, and afterwards restored to the province by his edict, when I shall have informed myself from him of the reasons of this proceeding. With respect to that person who was sentenced to perpetual banishment by Julius Bassus, yet continued to remain in the province, without making his appeal if he thought himself aggrieved, (though he had two years given him for that purpose,) I would have him sent in chains to my Praetorian prefects; for only to remand him back to a punishment, which he has contumaciously eluded, will by no means be sufficient.

was kept at Rome by the Praetorian Guard; Philippians, i. 13. (Hardy.) CUM citarem iudices, domine, conventum inchoaturus, Flavius Archippus vacationem petere coepit ut philosophus. Fuerunt, qui dicerent non liberandum eum iudicandi necessitate, sed omnino tollendum de iudicum numero reddendumque poenae, quam fractis vinculis evasisset. Recitata est sententia Velii Pauli proconsulis, qua probabatur Archippus crimine falsi damnatus in metallum. Ille nihil proferebat, quo restitutum se doceret; adlegabat tamen pro restitutione et libellum a se Domitiano datum et epistulas eius ad honorem suum pertinentes et decretum Prusensium. Addebat his et tuas litteras scriptas sibi, addebat et patris tui edictum et epistulam, quibus confirmasset beneficia a Domitiano data. Itaque, quamvis eidem talia crimina applicarentur, nihil decernendum putavi, donec te consulerem de eo, quod mihi constitutione tua dignum videbatur. Ea, quae sunt utrimque recitata, his litteris subieci.

a They probably decreed him a statue, cf. Letter LX. (Hardy.)
LVIII

To the Emperor Trajan

When I cited the jurors, Sir, to attend me at a sessions which I was going to hold, Flavius Archippus claimed the privilege of being excused, as exercising the profession of a philosopher. It was alleged by some who were present, that he ought not so much to be excused from that office as struck out of the roll of jurors, and remanded back to the punishment from which he had escaped by breaking his chains. At the same time a sentence of the Proconsul Velius Paullus was read, by which it appeared that Archippus had been condemned to the mines for forgery. He had nothing to produce in proof that this sentence had ever been reversed. He adduced, however, as implying his restitution, a petition which he presented to Domitian, together with honorific letters from that Prince, and a decree of the Prusensians. To these he subjoined a letter which he had received from you; as also an edict and a letter of your august father confirming the grants which had been made to him by Domitian. For these reasons, notwithstanding other crimes were laid to his charge, I did not think proper to determine any thing concerning him, without first consulting with you in the affair, which seems to merit your personal decision. I have transmitted to you, with this letter, the documents put in by both parties.
Flavius Archippus philosophus impetravit a me, ut agrum ei ad c circa Prusiadam, patriam suam, emi iuberem, cuius redivi suos alere posset. Quod ei praestari volo. Summam expensam liberalitati meae feres.

Eiusdem ad L. Appium Maximum

Archippum philosophum, bonum virum et professione sua etiam moribus respondentem, commendum habeas velim, mi Maxime, et plenam ei humanitatem tuam praestes in iis, quae verecunde a te desideraverit.

Edictum Divi Nervae

Quaedam sine dubio, Quirites, ipsa felicitas temporum edicit, nec spectandus est in iis bonus princeps, quibus illum intellegi satis est, cum hoc sibi quisque civium meorum spondere possit, me securitatem omnium quieti meae praetulisse, ut et libenter nova beneficia conferrem, et ante me concessa servarem. Ne tamen aliquam gaudiiis publicis afferat haesitationem vel eorum, qui impetraverunt, diffidentia,

1 ut agrum ei ad c Hardy, ex marg. B, ut agr. ei DC a, ut agr. ei adderem A v.
2 suam emi iuberem a, B, suam tamuberem A v.
3 moribus Ritterhusius, maioribus, a, A v.

a Apparently manager of the Imperial domain in Bithynia.
b Proconsul of Bithynia under Domitian.
DOmITIAN’S Letter to Terentius MAXIMUS

Flavius Archippus the philosopher has prevailed with me to give an order that 100,000 sesterces be laid out in purchasing him an estate near Prusa, his native place, sufficient to support his family. Let this be accordingly done; and place the sum expended to the article of my benefactions.

From the same, to L. Appius Maximus

I recommend, my dear Maximus, to your protection, that worthy philosopher Archippus, a person whose morals are agreeable to his profession; and I would have you accede with your utmost courtesy to his modest requests.

The Edict of the Emperor Nerva

There are some points, no doubt, Quirites, concerning which the happy tenor of my government itself issues an edict; and a good prince need not be narrowly scrutinized in matters wherein his intention cannot but be clearly understood. Every citizen may rest assured, even without a reminder, that I gave up my private repose to the security of the public in order to dispense new benefits, and confirm those of my predecessor. But lest the memory of him who made these grants, or the diffidence of those who received them, should cast

---

*c The edicts of each Emperor became ipso facto invalid at his death; and after Titus, a new Emperor usually confirmed by edict the benefactions of his predecessor. See Hardy’s note.

*d Domitian.
vel eius memoria, qui praestitit; necessarium pariter credidi ac laetum, obviam dubitantibus indulgentiam meam mittere. Nolo existimet quisquam, quae alio Principe vel privatim vel publice consecutus sit, ideo saltem a me rescindi, ut potius mihi debeat. Sint rata et certa, nec gratulatio ullius instauratis eget precibus, [et qui non habent, me,] quem fortuna imperii vultu meliore respexit. Me novis beneficiis vacare patiantur: et ea demum sciant roganda esse, quae non habent.

Epistula Eiusdem ad Tullium Iustum

Cum rerum omnium ordinatio, quae prioribus temporibus inchoatae consummatae sunt, observanda sit, tum epistulis etiam Domitianus standum est.

LIX

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Flavius Archippus per salutem tuam aeternitatemque petit a me, ut libellum, quem mihi dedit, mitterem tibi. Quod ego sic roganti praestandum putavi, ita tamen, ut missurum me notum accusatrici eius facerem, a qua et ipsa acceptum libellum his epistulis iunxi, quo facilius velut audita utraque parte dispiceres, quid statuendum putares.

1 sint rata et certa Beroaldus, Hard., si ingrata et c. Av., si enim grata et c. a, sint si rata, et c. B, Kukula.

354
any misgiving over public joy, I thought it as necessary as agreeable to obviate these doubts, by a special mark of my indulgence. I would have no one think that I shall rescind either the public or private benefactions of a former prince, in order to gain credit by restoring them. They shall be fully ratified; and let no one, on whom the Fortune of the Empire has smiled, think his happiness in need of fresh petitions. Rather let them leave me leisure to bestow new benefits; under the assurance, that I need only be solicited for those which have not already been obtained.

FROM THE SAME, TO TULLIUS JUSTUS

As in all matters, whether begun or accomplished, the rules laid down in the last reign are to be observed, so even the letters of Domitian must be held binding upon us.

LIX

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

Flavius Archippus has conjured me by your prosperity and immortal glory, that I would transmit to you the memorial which he presented to me. I thought I might grant a request conceived in such terms, provided I acquainted his prosecutrix a with this my intention, from whom I have also received a memorial on her part. I have annexed it to my letter; that by hearing each side, you may more easily perceive what to determine in this affair.

a Furia Prima, see next Letter.
Potuit quidem ignorasse Domitianus, in quo statu esset Archippeus, cum tam multa ad honorem eius pertinentia scriberet; sed meae naturae accommodatius est credere etiam statui eius subventum interventu principis, praesertim cum etiam statuarum ei honor toties decretus sit ab iis, qui non ignorabant, quid de illo Paulus proconsul pronuntiasset. Quae tamen, mi Secunde carissime, non eo pertinent, ut, si quid illi novi criminis obicitur, minus de eo audendum putes. Libellos Furiae Primae accusatricis, item ipsius Archippe, quos alteri epistulae tuae iunxeras, legi.

LXI

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Tu quidem, domine, providentissime vereris, ne commissus flumini atque ita mari lacus effluat; sed ego in re praesenti invenisse videor, quem ad modum huic periculo occurrerem. Potest enim lacus fossa usque ad flumen adduci nec tamen in flumen emitti, sed relictus quasi margine contineri pariter et dirimi.

1 non add. Ernestius.

a sc. the Prusensians. See note on Letter LVIII.
It is possible Domitian might be ignorant of the position of Archippus when he wrote letters so much to that philosopher’s honour. However, it is more agreeable to my disposition to suppose that Prince’s intervention actually restored him to his former situation; especially since he so often had even the honour of a statue decreed to him by those who could not be ignorant of the sentence which the Proconsul Paulus pronounced upon him. But I do not mean to intimate by this, my dear Pliny, that if any new charge should be brought against him, you should be less disposed to hear his accusers. I have examined the memorial of his prosecutrix, Furia Prima, as also that of Archippus himself, which you sent with your former letter.

To the Emperor Trajan

It is with great foresight, Sir, you are appre- hensive that the lake may be exhausted by being connected with the river and consequently with the sea; but, being on the spot, I think I have found a method to obviate that risk. For the lake may be brought close to the river by a canal without opening directly into it; a sort of border being left between them to form at once a bulwark and a division.

See x. 41, 42.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Sic consequemur, ut nec vacuetur flumini mixtus et sit perinde ac si misceatur. Erit enim facile per illam brevissimam terram, quae interiacebit, advecta fossa onera transponere in flumen.

Quod ita fiet, si necessitas coget, et spero, non coget. Est enim et lacus ipse satis altus et nunc in contrariam partem flumen emittit, quod interclusum inde et, quo volumus, aversum, sine ullo detrimento lacus tantum aquae, quantum nunc portat, effundet. Praeterea per id spatium, per quod fossa facienda est, incidunt rivi; qui si diligenter colligantur, augebunt illud, quod lacus dederit. Enimvero, si placeat fossam longius ducere et artius pressam mari aequare nec in flumen, sed in ipsum mare emittere, repercussus maris servabit et reprimet, quidquid e lacu veniet.

Quorum si nihil nobis loci natura praestaret, expeditum tamen erat cataractis aquae cursum temperare. Verum et haec et alia multo sagacius conquiret explorabitque librator, quem plane, domine, debes mittere, ut polliceris. Est enim res digna et magnitudine tua et cura. Ego interim Calpurnio

1 vacuetur Madv. adv. iii. 216, vacuo videatur a, Av., vicino videatur Catan.
2 artius vulg., altius Gierig, Madv.

a Pliny means, of course, that the outflow of the lake through his canal will be compensated for by blocking up
By this means we shall not only secure the lake from being drained by union with the river, but all the same purposes will be answered as if they were united; for it will be extremely easy to convey over that little intervening ridge whatever burdens shall be brought down by the canal.

This is a scheme which may be pursued, if it should be found necessary; but I hope there will be no occasion to put it into practice. For the lake itself is pretty deep, and as it is, a river runs out of it on the opposite side; by damming this up, and diverting it in whatever direction we please, we can ensure its sending out the same quantity of water as it now conveys, without any diminution of the lake.\(^6\) Besides, there are several little brooks along the proposed course of the canal which, if carefully collected, will augment the supply of water from the lake. But if we should rather approve of the canal's being extended farther, and cut narrower,\(^b\) so as to reach sea-level, and run not into the river but direct into the sea, the reflux of the tide will make good and check the discharge from the lake.

After all, if the nature of the place should not admit of any of these schemes, the course of the water may be easily regulated by sluices. These, however, and other particulars, will be more skilfully examined into by the engineer, whom, agreeably to your promise, I am sure you will send; for indeed, Sir, it is an enterprise well worthy of your attention and magnificence. In the meanwhile I have wrote this river; but he oddly speaks as if the new outflow would be the river itself, diverted into a new channel.

\(^b\) i.e. "to minimise the quantity of water contained by its greater length." (Hardy.)
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Marco, clarissimo viro, auctore te scripsi, ut librartorem quam maxime idoneum mitteret.

LXII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

MANIFESTUM est, mi Secunde carissime, nec pru-dentiam nec diligentiam tibi defuisse circa istum lacum, cum tam multa provisa habeas, per quae nec periclitetur exhauriri et magis in usus nobis futurus sit. Elige igitur id, quod praecepue res ipsa suaserit.
Calpurnium Macrum credo facturum, ut te libratore instruat, neque enim provinciae istae his artificibus carent.

LXIII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Scripsit mihi, domine, Lycormas, libertus tuus, ut, si qua legatio a Bosporo venisset urbem petitura, usque in adventum suum retineretur. Et legatio quidem dumtaxat in eam civitatem, in qua ipse sum, nulla adhuc venit; sed venit tabellarius Sauromatae regis quem ego,¹ usus opportunitate, quam mihi casus obtulerat, cum tabellario, qui Lycormam ex itinere

¹ Sauromatae regis quem ego Schaefer, KII., Müll., Kukula, cuius ego Av., quem ego a, KI., Hard.

---

ᵃ See x. 42.   ᵇ sc. Nicaea; cf. x. 67.
ᶜ Hardy has shown that Sauromatae does not refer to a ³⁶⁰
BOOK X. lxi.–lxiii

to the illustrious Calpurnius Macer, in pursuance of your orders, to send me a proper engineer for this occasion.

LXII

TRAJAN TO PLINE

It is evident, my dear Pliny, that neither your prudence nor your care have been wanting in this affair of the lake, since you have provided so many expedients both against the hazard of its being drained away, and to make it of more general benefit to us. Select, then, whichever scheme is recommended by circumstances. Calpurnius Macer will do his best, no doubt, to supply you with an engineer; and artists of that kind are not wanting in the provinces near you.

LXIII

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

I received, Sir, a despatch from your freedman Lycormas, desiring me, if any embassy from the Bosporus should come hither in the way to Rome, that I would detain it till his arrival. None has yet arrived; at least in the city where I am. But a courier passing through this place from King Sauromates, I lay hold of that opportunity which accidentally offers itself, of sending with him the courier who brought Lycormas' despatch; that you problematical king of the Sauromatae (Sarmatians), but to the Bosporan King Sauromates, who reigned from 92 or 93 A.D. till 124 A.D.

praecessit, mittendum putavi, ut possis ex Lycormae et ex regis epistulis pariter cognoscere, quae fortasse pariter scire debes.

LXIV

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Rex Sauromates scripsit mihi esse quaedam, quae deberes quam maturissime scire. Qua ex causa festinationem tabellarii, quem ad te cum epistulis misit, diplomate adiivi.

LXV

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

MAGNA, domine, et ad totam provinciam pertinens quaestio est de condicione et alimentis eorum, quos vocant θρεπτούσ. In qua ego, auditis constitutionibus principum quia nihil inveniebam aut proprium aut universale, quod ad Bithynos ferretur, consulendum te existimavi, quid observari velles, neque enim putavi, posse me in eo, quod auctoritatem tuam posceret, exemplo esse contentum.

Recitabatur autem apud me edictum, quod dicebat divi Augusti, ad Asiam \(^1\) pertinens; recitatae

\(^1\) Asiam Hard., Anniam vulg., Achaiam Momm.

---
a i.e. whether they were legally slaves, and, if not, whether those who had reared them could claim to recover the cost of their upbringing.
may learn simultaneously from the letter of Lycormas and the letter of the King, matters which perhaps you ought to be informed of at one and the same time.

LXIV

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

King Sauromates has written to me that certain affairs have happened which require your immediate knowledge. I have therefore assisted the courier whom he dispatched with a letter to you, to arrive more speedily, by granting him an order to employ the public post.

LXV

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

A very considerable question, Sir, in which the whole province is interested, has been lately started, concerning the state and maintenance of what are called foundlings. I have examined the rulings of former Princes upon this head, but not finding anything in them either particular or general relating to the Bithynians, I thought it necessary to apply to you for your directions. For in a point which requires the special interposition of your authority, I could not content myself with following precedents.

An edict of the Emperor Augustus (as pretended) was read to me, concerning Asia; also a letter from \[b\] i.e. the Roman province so called.

THE LETTERS OF PLINY

et epistulae divi Vespasiani ad Lacedaemonios et divi Titi ad eosdem, dein ad Achaeos: et Domitiani ad Avidium Nigrinum et Armenium Brocchum proconsules, item ad Lacedaemonios; quae ideo tibi non misi, quia et parum emendata et quaedam non certae fidei videbantur, et quia vera et emendata in scriniis tuis esse credebam.

LXVI

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Quaestio ista, quae pertinet ad eos, qui liberi nati expositi, deinde sublati a quibusdam et in servitute educati sunt, saepe tractata est, nec quicumquam invenitur in commentariis eorum principum, qui ante me fuerunt, quod ad omnes provincias sit constitutum. Epistulae sane sunt Domitiani ad Avidium Nigrinum et Armenium Brocchum, quae fortasse debeant observari; sed inter¹ eas provincias, de quibus rescripsit, non² est Bithynia; et ideo nec adscriptionem denegandam iis, qui ex eius modi causa in libertatem vindicabuntur, puto, neque ipsam libertatem redimendam pretio alimentorum.

¹ inter a, Av., intra K. ² non om. Av., add. a.
Vespasian to the Lacedaemonians, and another from Titus to the same, with one likewise from him to the Achaeans. Also a letter from Domitian to the Proconsuls Avidius Nigrinus and Armenius Brocchus, and another to the Lacedaemonians: but I have not transmitted them to you, as well because they were ill-copied (and some of them, too, of doubtful authority) as because I imagine the true copies are preserved in your Record Office.

LXVI

TRAJAN TO PLINY

The question concerning free-born persons who have been exposed as infants and reared in slavery by those who took them up, has been frequently discussed; but I do not find in the archives of the Princes my predecessors, any general regulation upon this head, extending to all the provinces. There are, indeed, letters of Domitian to Avidius Nigrinus and Armenius Brocchus, which perhaps ought to be observed; but Bithynia is not comprehended in the provinces therein mentioned. I am of opinion therefore, that those who desire emancipation upon this ground should not be debarred from publicly asserting their freedom, nor be obliged to purchase it by repaying the cost of their maintenance.

*Under the empire, the scrinia . . . were the official bureaux where the public archives were kept.* (Hardy.)
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

LXVII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Legato Sauromatae regis, cum sua sponte Niceae, ubi me invenerat, biduo substitisset, longiorum moram faciendam, domine, non putavi; primum quod incertum adhuc erat, quando libertus tuus Lycormas venturus esset, deinde quod ipse proficisceret in diversam provinciae partem ita officii necessitate exigente. Haec in notitiam tuam perferenda existimavi, quia proxime scripsersam petiisse Lycormam, ut legationem, si qua venisset a Bosporo, usque in adventum suum retinerem. Quod diutius faciendi nulla mihi probabilis ratio occurrit; prae-sertim cum epistulae Lycormae, quas detinere, ut ante praedixi, nolui, aliquot diebus hunc legatum antecessurae viderentur.

LXVIII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Petentibus quibusdam, ut sibi reliquias suorum, aut propter iniuriam vetustatis aut propter fluminis incursum aliaque his similia quaecumque secundum exemplum proconsulum transferre permetterem, quia sciebam in urbe nostra ex eius modi causis collegium pontificum adiri solere, te, domine, maximum pontificem consulendum putavi, quid observare me velis.

a The pontifices were the highest of the four great sacerdotal colleges. From the time of Augustus, their president (Pontifex Maximus) was the reigning Emperor.
LXVII

To the Emperor Trajan

The ambassador from King Sauromates having voluntarily stayed two days at Nicaea, where he found me, I thought it best, Sir, not to detain him longer: firstly, because it was quite uncertain when your freedman Lycormas would arrive, and secondly, official duties obliged me to set out for a different part of the province. Of this I thought it necessary that you should be informed, because I lately acquainted you in a letter, that Lycormas had desired if any embassy should come this way from Bosporus, that I would detain it till his arrival. But I see no valid reason for doing so any longer, especially as the despatches from Lycormas which (as I mentioned before) I was not willing to detain, would probably reach you some days sooner than this ambassador.

LXVIII

To the Emperor Trajan

Having been petitioned by some persons to grant them the liberty (agreeably to the practice of Proconsuls) of removing the relics of their deceased relations, upon the suggestion, that either their monuments were decayed by age, or ruined by the inundations of the river, or for other reasons of the same kind; I thought proper, Sir, knowing that it is usual at Rome to consult the pontifical college on such matters, to ask you, as the sovereign of that sacred order, what course you would have me follow.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

LXIX
TRAIANUS PLINIO

Durum est iniungere necessitatem provincialibus pontificum adeundorum, si reliquias suorum propter aliquas iustas causas transferre ex loco in alium locum velint. Sequenda ergo potius tibi exempla sunt eorum, qui isti provinciae praefuerunt, et ex causa cuique ita aut permittendum, aut negandum.

LXX
C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Quaerenti mihi, domine, Prusae ubi posset balineum, quod indulsisti, fieri, placuit locus, in quo fuit aliquando domus, ut audio, pulchra, nunc deformis ruinis. Per hoc enim consequemur, ut foedissima facies civitatis ornetur, atque etiam ut ipsa civitas amplietur, nec ulla aedificia tollantur, sed, quae sunt vetustate sublapsa, relaxentur\(^1\) in melius. Est autem huius domus condicio talis: legaverat eam Claudius Polyaenus Claudio Caesari, iusseratque in peristylio templum ei fieri, reliqua ex domo locari. Ex ea reditum aliquamdiu civitas

\(^1\) relaxentur \textit{K, Hard.}, reparentur \textit{a}.
BOOK X. lxix.–lxx

LXIX

TRAJAN TO P L I N Y

It will be a hardship upon the provincials to oblige them to address themselves to the college of Pontiffs, whenever they have just reasons for removing the ashes of their ancestors. In this case therefore it will be better you should follow the example of the governors your predecessors, and grant or deny them this liberty as you shall see reasonable.

LXX

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

I have inquired, Sir, at Prusa, for a proper site on which to erect the bath you were pleased to allow that city to build; and I have found one to my satisfaction. It was formerly occupied by a dwelling-house—beautiful, I am told, which is now a hideous ruin. By fixing upon that spot, we shall gain the advantage of ornamenting the city in a part which at present is exceedingly deformed, and actually make it more spacious without pulling down any buildings, but merely by advantageously opening out the ruins time has made. There are some circumstances attending this structure, of which it is proper I should inform you. One Claudius Polyaenus bequeathed it to the Emperor Claudius Caesar with direction that a temple should be erected to that Prince in the piazza, and that the remainder of the house should be let. The percepit; deinde paulatim partim spoliata, partim neglecta cum peristyllo domus tota collapsa est, ac iam paene nihil ex ea nisi solum superest; quod tu, domine, sive donaveris civitati sive venire iusseris, propter opportunitatem loci pro summo munere accipiet.

Ego, si permiseris, cogito in area vacua balineum collocare, eum autem locum, in quo aedificia fuerunt, exedra et porticibus amplecti atque tibi consecrare, cuius beneficio elegans opus dignumque nomine tuo fiet. Exemplar testamenti, quamquam mendosum, misi tibi; ex quo cognosces multa Polyaenum in eiusdem domus ornatum reliquisse, quae, ut domus ipsa, perierunt, a me tamen, in quantum potuerit, requirentur.

LXXI

Traianus Plinio

Possumus apud Prusenses area ista cum domo collapsa, quam vacare scribis, ad exstructionem balinei uti. Illud tamen parum expressisti, an aedes in peristyllo Claudio facta esset. Nam si facta est, licet collapsa sit, religio eius occupavit solum.
city received the rents for a considerable time; but partly by its having been plundered, and partly by its being neglected, the whole house together with the piazza is entirely gone to ruin, and there is now scarce anything remaining of it, but the ground upon which it stood. If you shall think proper, Sir, either to give or sell this spot of ground to the city, as it lies so conveniently for their purpose, they will receive it as the highest mark of your favour.

I intend, with your permission, to place the bath in the vacant space; and to extend a range of colonnades, together with alcoves, on that part where the former edifice stood. This new fabric I design to dedicate to you, by whose bounty it will rise with all the elegance and magnificence worthy of your glorious name. I have sent you a copy of the will by which, though it is not very correct, you will see that Polyaenus left large sums for the ornament of this house; but those also are lost with all the rest; I will however make the strictest inquiry after them that I am able.

LXXI

TRAJAN TO PLINY

I have no objection to the Prusenses making use of the vacant space together with the ruined house, which you say is untenanted, for the situation of their bath. But it is not sufficiently clear by your letter, whether the temple in the piazza was actually erected to Claudius or not: for if it were, even if it be now in ruins, the site is preoccupate to his worship.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

LXXII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Postulantibus quibusdam, ut de agnoscedis liberis restituendisque natalibus et secundum epistulam Domitiani scriptam Minicio Rufo et secundum exempla proconsulum ipse cognoscerem, respexi ad senatus consultum pertinens ad eadem genera causarum, quod de his tantum provinciis loquitur, quibus proconsules praesunt; ideoque rem integram distuli, dum tu, domine, praeceperis, quid observare me velis.

LXXIII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Si mihi senatus consultum miseris, quod haesitationem tibi fecit, aestimabo, an debeas cognoscere de agnoscedis liberis et natalibus suis restituendis.

---

a i.e. by the husband of their mother, if she was suspected of unfaithfulness.
b i.e. granting the rights of a freeborn citizen to those of servile birth. “The phrase was based on the theory that the original condition of men was one of freedom.” Hardy.
LXXII

To the Emperor Trajan

I have been pressed by certain persons to take upon myself the cognizance of cases relating to the acknowledgement of children and the restitution of birthright, in accordance with a letter of Domitian's to Minicius Rufus, and the practice of former proconsuls. But upon referring to a decree of the Senate concerning cases of this nature, I find it only mentions the Proconsular provinces. Therefore, Sir, defer intermeddling in this affair, till I shall receive your commands how you would have me act.

LXXIII

Trajan to Pliny

If you will send me the decree of the Senate, which occasions your doubt, I shall be able to judge, whether you ought to take upon yourself the cognizance of causes relating to paternity, and restitution of birth-right.

c i.e. the senatorial provinces, the governor of which enjoyed the title of pro-consul. Though Bithynia was still a senatorial province, Pliny had been sent to govern it as the Emperor's Legate (see Introduction), and hence scrupled to assume Pro-consular rights.
LXXIV

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Apuleius, domine, miles, qui est in statione Nicomediensi, scripsit mihi quendam nomine Callidromum, cum detineretur a Maximo et Dionysio pistoribus, quibus operas suas locaverat, confugisse ad tuam statuam perductumque ad magistratus indicasse, servisse aliquando Laberio Maximo captumque a Susago in Moesia et a Decibalo muneris missum Pacoro, Parthiae regi, pluribusque annis in ministerio eius fuisse, deinde fugisse atque ita in Nicomediam pervenisse.

Quem ego perductum ad me, cum eadem narrasset, mittendum ad te putavi; quod paulo tardius feci, dum requiro gemmam, quam sibi habentem imaginem Pacori, et quibus insignibus quomodo ornatus fuisse, subtraham indicabat. Volui enim hanc quoque, si inveniri potuisset, simul mittere, sicut glebulam misi, quam se ex Parthico metallo attulisse dicebat. Signata est annulo meo, cuius est aposphragisma, quadriga.

1 insignibus add. Catan.

* Statues of the emperors, even during their lifetime, had the same rights of sanctuary attached to them as had certain altars and statues of the gods.
LXXIV

To the Emperor Trajan

I received a letter, Sir, from Apuleius, a soldier now in garrison at Nicomedia, informing me that one Callidromus on being detained by Maximus and Dionysius, bakers to whom he had hired himself, fled for refuge to your statue; that being brought before a magistrate, he declared he was formerly slave to Laberius Maximus; but being taken prisoner by Susagus in Moesia, he was sent as a present to Pacorus king of Parthia, in whose service he continued several years, from whence he made his escape, and came to Nicomedia.

When he was examined before me, he repeated this account; so that I thought it best to send him to you. But I deferred his journey while I had search made for a gem which he said had been stolen from him, upon which was engraven the figure of Pacorus in his royal habit; for I was desirous (if it could have been found) of sending this curiosity to you along with the man himself, as I am now sending a small ingot of gold, which he says he brought with him from the Parthian mines. I have fixed my seal to it, the impression of which is, a chariot drawn by four horses.

b One of Trajan's generals in the Dacian war.

c A general, or ally, of Decebalus the Dacian King.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

LXXV

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Iulius, domine, Largus ex Ponto nondum mihi visus ac ne auditus quidem (scilicet iudicio tuo credidit) dispensationem quandam mihi erga te pietatis suae ministeriumque mandavit. Rogavit enim testamento, ut hereditatem suam adirem cerneremque ac deinde perceptis quinquaginta milibus summum reliquum omne Heracleotarum et Tianorum civitatibus redderem, ita ut esset arbitrii mei, utrum opera facienda, quae honoris tuo consecrarentur, putarem an instituendos quinquennales agonas, qui Traiani appellantur. Quod in notitiam tuam perferendum existimavi ob hoc maxime, ut dispiceres, quid eligere debeat.

LXXVI

Traianus Plinio

Iulius Largus fidem tuam, quasi te bene nosset, elegit. Quid ergo potissimum ad perpetuitatem memoriae eius faciat, secundum cuiusque loci conditionem ipse dispice, et quod optimum existimaveris, sequere.
BOOK X. lxxv.—lxxvi

LXXV

To the Emperor Trajan

Julius Largus, Sir, of Pontus, though I never yet saw, nor indeed, even heard of him (to be sure, he relied on your testimonial a), has intrusted me with the administration, so to speak, of his loyal sentiments towards you. He has desired me in his will to take formal possession of his estate, and, after deducting 50,000 sesterces for my own use, to make over the remainder to the cities of Heraclea and Tium, conditionally upon their either erecting some public edifice in your honour, or instituting Athletic games, to be celebrated every five years, and called Trajan’s games, according as I shall determine. Of this I thought it necessary to acquaint you; and for this reason chiefly, that you may decide which alternative I should choose.

LXXVI

Trajan to Pliny

By the confidence Julius Largus has reposed in you, one would imagine he had known you well. You will consider then what will most tend to the perpetuating of his memory, according to the circumstance of the respective places; and pursue whatever course you shall think most proper.

a i.e. the appointment of Pliny to Bithynia. For indicium in this sense cf. x. 4. ut gloriari... indiciis tuis possim. (Hardy.)
C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Providentissime, domine, fecisti, quod praecepisti Calpurnio Macro, clarissimo viro, ut legionarium centurionem Byzantium mitteret. Dispice, an etiam Iuliopolitanis simili ratione consulendum putes, quorum civitas, cum sit perexigua, onera maxima sustinet tantoque graviros iurias, quanto est infirmior, patitur. Quidquid autem Iuliopolitanis praestiteris, id etiam toti provinciae proderit. Sunt enim in capite Bithyniae plurimisque per eam commeantibus transitum praebent.

Traianus Plinio

Ea condicio est civitatis Byzantiorum confluenta undique in eam commeantium turba, ut secundum consuetudinem praecedentium temporum honoribus eius praesidio centurionis legionarii consulendum habuerimus. Si 1 Iuliopolitanis succurrendum eodem modo putaverimus, onerabimus nos exemplo. Plures enim tanto magis eadem requirent, quanto infirmiores erunt. Tibi eam fiduciam diligentiae habeo, ut credam te omni ratione id acturum, ne sint obnoxii

1 si om. a, Av.
BOOK X. lxxvii.–lxxviii

LXXVII

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

You acted agreeably, Sir, to your consummate prudence, when you commanded the illustrious Calpurnius Macer to send a legionary centurion to Byzantium. Pray, consider whether the city of Juliopolis does not deserve the same regard, which though it is extremely small, sustains very great burthens, and is so much the more exposed to injuries, as it is less capable of resisting them. Whatever benefits you shall confer upon that city, will in effect be advantageous to the whole province: for it is situated at the entrance of Bithynia, and is the town through which all who travel into that province generally pass.

LXXVIII

TRAJAN TO PLINY

The circumstances of the city of Byzantium are such, by the great confluence of travellers to it, that I have thought proper to aid the magistrates with a legionary centurion's guard as has been customary in former reigns. But if we should assist the city of Juliopolis in the same manner, we should burden ourselves with a precedent; for other towns will request the same aid, and the more readily, the weaker they are. I have so much confidence in your activity, as to believe you will omit no method a See x. 42.

b i.e. a detachment of legionaries under a centurion. (Hardy.)
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

iniuriis. Si qui autem se contra disciplinam meam gesserint, statim coerceantur; aut, si plus admiserint, quam ut in re praesenti satis puniantur, si milites erunt, legatis eorum, quod 1 deprehenderis, notum facies aut, si in urbem versus venturi erunt, mihi scribes.

LXXIX

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Cautum est, domine, Pompeia lege, quae Bithynis data est, ne quis capiat magistratum neve sit in senatu minor annorum triginta. Eadem lege comprehensum est, ut, qui ceperint magistratum, sint in senatu. Secutum est dein edictum divi Augusti, quo permisit minores magistratus ab annis duobus et viginti capere. Quaeritur ergo, an, qui minor triginta annorum gessit magistratus, possit a censoribus in senatum legi et, si potest, an ii quoque, qui non gesserint, possint per eandem interpretationem ab ea aetate senatores legi, a qua illis magistratum gerere permissum est; quod aloqui factitatum adhuc et esse necessarium dicitur, quia sit aliquanto melius honestorum hominum liberos quam e plebe in curiam admitti.

1 quod Rittershusius, quae a, Av.

a After subjugating Mithridates of Pontus (65 A.D.), when Bithynia was made a Roman province. A kind of constitution (lex provinciae) for each province thus acquired by 380 of protecting the town from injuries. Any breaches of public order as by me established, are to be instantly suppressed; or, should the offence be too serious for summary chastisement, if the culprits are soldiers, you will report the misdemeanour to their officers; but if they are persons who are returning to Rome, inform me by letter.

LXXIX

To the Emperor Trajan

It is enacted, Sir, by the provincial code which Pompey drew up for Bithynia,6 that no person shall exercise any magistracy, or be admitted into the senate, under the age of thirty. By the same law it is provided, that those who have held a magistracy shall be senators of course. Subsequently, however, an edict of the Emperor Augustus permitted minor offices to be held at the age of twenty-two. The question therefore is, whether those who have held office before the age of thirty, may be legally admitted into the senate by the Censors, and if so, whether by the same kind of construction they may be admitted senators, at the age when they are allowed to be magistrates, though they have not actually borne any office. A custom, it seems, which has hitherto been observed, and is said to be necessary, as it is a good deal better that persons of noble birth should be admitted into the senate, than those of plebeian rank.

conquest was framed by the victorious general in conjunction with ten commissioners of senatorial rank sent from Rome for the purpose, and was known by his name.
Ego a destinatis censoribus, quid sentirem, interro gatus eos quidem, qui minores triginta annis gessissent magistratum, putabam posse in senatum et secundum edictum Augusti et secundum legem Pompeiam legi, quoniam Augustus gerere magistratus minoribus annis triginta permisisset, lex senatorem esse voluisset, qui gessisset magistratum. De iis autem, qui non gessissent, quamvis essent aetatis eiusdem cuius illi, quibus gerere permissum est, haesitabam; per quod effectum est, ut te, domine, consulerem, quid observari velles. Capita legis, tum edictum Augusti, litteris subieci.

LXXX

TRAIANUS PLINIO

INTERPRETATIONI tuae, mi Secunde carissime, idem existimo hactenus, edicto divi Augusti novatam esse legem Pompeiam ut magistratum quidem capere possint ii, qui non minores duorum et viginti anno-rum essent, et, qui cepissent, in senatum cuiusque civitatis pervenirent Ceterum non capto magistratu eos, qui minores triginta annorum sint, quia magistratum capere possint, in curiam etiam loci cuiusque non existimo legi posse.
BOOK X. lxxix.–lxxx

The Censors elect having desired my sentiments upon this point, I was of opinion that, taking the law of Pompey and the edict of Augustus together, those who had held a magistracy before the age of thirty, might be admitted into the senate; because the edict allows the office of magistrate to be undertaken before thirty; and the law declares, that whoever has been a magistrate, has a right to be a senator. But with respect to those who never held a magistracy, though they were of the age required for that purpose, I had some doubt; and therefore, Sir, I apply to you for your directions. I have annexed to this letter sections of the law, together with the edict of Augustus.

LXXX

Trajan to Pliny

I agree with you, my dear Pliny, in your construction; and am of opinion that the law of Pompey is so far repealed by the edict of the Emperor Augustus, that those persons who are not less than twenty-two years of age may hold the office of magistrate, and when they have, may be received into the senate of their respective cities. But I think those who are under thirty years of age, and have not held the office of magistrate, cannot, upon pretence that in point of years they might have done so, claim a place in the senate of their several communities.
C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Cum Prusae ad Olympum, domine, publicis negotiis intra hospitium eodem die exiturus vacarem, Asclepiades magistratus indicavit appellatum me a Claudio Eumolpo. Cum Cocceianus Dion in bule adsignari civitati opus, cuius curam egerat, vellet, tum Eumolpus adsistens Flavio Archippo dixit exigendam esse à Dione rationem operis ante quam rei publicae traderetur, quod aliter fecisset, ac debuisset. Adiecit etiam esse in eodem opere positam tuam statuam et corpora sepultorum, uxoris Dionis, et filii; postulavitque, ut cognoscerem pro tribunali.

Quod cum ego me protinus facturum dilaturumque profectionem dixissem, ut longiorem diem ad instruendum causam darem, utque in alia civitate cognoscerem, petiit. Ego me auditurum Niceae respondi. Ubi cum consedissem¹ cognitus, idem Eumolpus, tamquam adhuc parum instructus, dilationem petere coepit, contra Dion, ut audiretur, exigere. Dicta sunt utrimque multa etiam de causa. Ego cum dandam dilationem et te² consulendum existimarem

¹ Ubi cum consedissem Orelli, ubi consedissem Av., ubi cum sedissem a.
² te om. a, Av.

a Dio, surnamed Chrysostom, rhetorician and philosopher, WHilst I was dispatching some public affairs, Sir, in the official lodgings at Prusa near Olympus, with an intention of leaving that city the same day, I learned from the magistrate Asclepiades that Claudius Eumolpus had appealed to me. Cocceianus Dio, it seems, at a meeting of the senate desired that a public edifice, which had been erected under his charge, might be handed over to the city in form. But Eumolpus, acting for Flavius Archippus, insisted that Dio should render an account of the expenses of this work, before it was assigned to the corporation; suggesting that he had not properly executed his commission. He added that your statue had been placed in the said building, although the bodies of Dio's wife and son are interred there, and petitioned that I would hold a judicial inquiry on the matter.

Upon my complying, and offering to defer my journey, he desired a later day in order to prepare the cause, and that I would try it in some other city. I appointed the city of Nicaea; but when I took my seat, Eumolpus, on the plea of not being yet sufficiently instructed, requested a further adjournment; Dio, on the contrary, insisted that the cause should be heard then and there. When this point and also the merits of the cause had been argued at length on both sides, I decided to grant the adjournment and meanwhile to advise with you in was a native of Prusa. Sojourning at Rome, he became an intimate friend of the Emperor Nerva.
in re ad exemplum pertinenti, dixi utrique parti, ut postulationum suarum libellos darent. Volebam enim te ipsorum potissimum verbis ea, quae erant proposita, cognoscere. Et Dion quidem se daturum dixit et Eumolpus respondit complexurum se libello, quae reipublicae peteret, ceterum, quod ad sepultos pertineret, non accusatorem se, sed advocatum Flavi Archippi, cuius mandata pertulisset. Archippus, cui Eumolpus sicut Prusiade adsistebat, dixit se libellum daturum. At nec Eumolpus nec Archippus quam plurimis diebus exspectati, adhuc mihi libellos de-derunt; Dion dedit, quem huic epistulæ iunxi.

Ipse in re praesenti fui et vidi tuam quoque statuam in bibliotheca positam, id autem, in quo dicuntur sepulti filius et uxor Dionis, in area collocatum, quae porticibus includitur. Te, domine, rogo, ut me in hoc præcipue genere cognitionis regere digneris, cum alioqui magna sit exspectatio, ut necesse est in ea re, quae et in confessum venit et exemplis defenditur, deliberare.

LXXXII

TRAIA NUS P LINIO

Potuisti non haerere, mi Secunde carissime, circa id de quo me consulendum existimasti, cum propositum meum optime nosses non ex metu

1 at Schaefer, ita a, Av.

\(^a\) i.e. of the emperor's statue being in the same building with dead bodies.
an affair which would set up a precedent. Accordingly, I directed both parties to give in a memorial of their respective demands; for I wished you to judge the statements of both from their own words. This Dio promised to do; and Eumolpus engaged to draw up a memorial on the claims of the town. But he added, that he made no personal accusation with respect to the sculptures, being merely the advocate of Archippus, whose instructions he had laid before me. Archippus, however, for whom Eumolpus was counsel here, as at Prusa, undertook to present a memorial. But neither Eumolpus nor Archippus, though I have waited many days, have yet sent me their memorials; Dio has sent me his, and I have annexed it to this letter.

I have visited the spot myself where I saw your statue placed in a library; the alleged burial-place of Dio's wife and son is in a courtyard which is enclosed with a colonnade. I intreat, Sir, you would deign to direct me in such an inquiry above all others, as it is one to which the world is greatly attentive. And, indeed, it highly deserves a very mature deliberation, since the fact is not only acknowledged, but defended by many examples.

LXXXII

TRAJAN TO PLINY

As you well know, my dear Pliny, it is the fixed maxim of my government not to create an awe of my person by severe and rigorous measures and by construing every slight offence into an act of treason, nec terrore hominum aut criminibus maiestatis reverentiam nomini meo acquiri. Omissa ergo ea quaestione, quam non admitterem, etiamsi exemplis adiuvaretur, ratio totius operis effecti sub cura Cocceiani Dionis excutiatur, cum et utilitas civitatis exigat, nec aut recuset Dion aut debeat recusare.

LXXXIII

C. Plinius Traiano Imperator

Rogatus, domine, a Nicaeensibus publice per ea, quae mihi et sunt et debent esse sanctissima, id est per aeternitatem tuam salutemque, ut preces suas ad te perferrem, fas non putavi negare acceptumque ab his libellum huic epistulae iunxi.

LXXXIV

Traianus Plinio

Nicaeensibus, qui intestatorum civium suorum concessam vindicationem bonorum a divo Augusto adfirmant, debebis vacare contractis omnibus personis ad idem negotium pertinentibus adhibitis Virdio Gemellino et Epimacho, liberto meo, procuratoribus, ut, aestimatis etiam iis, quae contra dicuntur, quod optimum credideritis, statuatis.
there was no occasion for you to hesitate a moment upon the point, concerning which you thought proper to consult me. Without entering therefore into that question, (to which I would by no means give any attention, though there were ever so many instances of the same kind,) I recommend to your care the examination of Dio's accounts relating to the public works which he has finished; as it is a case in which the interest of the city is concerned, and as Dio neither ought, nor indeed does refuse, to submit to the inquiry.

LXXXIII

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

The Nicaeans having conjured me, Sir, by (what is, and ought to be, most sacred to me) your prosperity and immortal glory, to present to you their petition; I did not think myself at liberty to refuse them: I have therefore enclosed it in this letter.

LXXXIV

TRAJAN TO PLINY

The Nicaeans, I find, claim a right by an edict of Augustus to the estate of every citizen who dies intestate. You will therefore summon the several parties interested in this question, and with the assistance of Epimachus and Virdius Gemellinus, my Procurators (having duly weighed every argument that shall be alleged against the claim), determine as shall appear most reasonable.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

LXXXV
C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Maximum, libertum et procuratorem tuum, domine, per omne tempus, quo fuimus una, probum et industrium et diligentem ac sicut rei tuae amantissimum ita disciplinae tenacissimum expertus libenter apud te testimonio prosequor ea fide, quam tibi debo.

LXXXVI a
C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Gabium Bassum, domine, praefectum orae Ponticae, integrum, probum, industrium, atque inter ista reverentissimum mei expertus voto pariter et suffragio prosequor ea fide, quam tibi debo.

LXXXVI b
C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Fabium Valentem instructum commilitio tuo valde probo, cuius disciplinae debet quod indulgentia tua dignus est. Apud me et milites et pagani, a quibus iustitia eius et humanitas inspecta est, certatim ei qua privatim qua publice testimonia pertribuerunt. Quod in notitiam tuam perfero ea fide quam tibi debo.

390
LXXXV

To the Emperor Trajan

Your freedman and procurator, Maximus, behaved, Sir, during all the time we were together, with great probity, care and diligence: as one strongly attached to your interest, and strictly observant of discipline. This testimony I willingly give him: and I do it with all the fidelity I owe you.

LXXXVI a

To the Emperor Trajan

After having experienced, Sir, in Gabius Bassus, Prefect of the Pontic shore, the greatest integrity, honour and vigilance, as well as the most particular respect to myself, I cannot refuse him my best wishes and suffrage; and I give them to him with all that fidelity which is due to you.

LXXXVI b

To the Emperor Trajan

I warmly recommend Fabius Valens, who learned a soldier's duty under you; to which training it is owing that he merits the honour of your favour. The soldiery and the people here, who have had full experience of his justice and humanity, endeavour to rival each other in that glorious testimony they give of him, as well in public as in private; and I notify this with all the sincerity you have a right to expect from me.
LXXXVII

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Nymphidium Lupum, domine, primipilarem commilitonem habui, cum ipse tribunus essem, ille praefectus. Inde familiariter diligere coepi. Crevit postea caritas ipsa mutuae vetustate amicitiae. Itaque et quieti eius inieci manum et exegi, ut me in Bithynia consilio instrueret. Quod ille amicissime et otii et senectutis ratione postposita et iam fecit et facturus est. Quibus ex causis necessitudines eius inter meas numero, filium in primis, Nymphidium Lupum, iuvenem probum, industrium et egregio patre dignissimum, suffectorum indulgentiae tuae, sicut primis eius experimentis cognoscere potes, cum praefectus cohortis plenissimum testimonium meruerit Iuli Ferocis et Fusci Salinatoris, clarissimorum virorum. Meum gaudium, domine, meam gratulationem filii honores continebis.¹

¹ continebis Catan., continerent Av., a.

"i.e. (probably) of the camp, not of a cohort, like his son (see below). "Since the time of Domitian each legion had a separate camp, and accordingly a separate praefectus"
LXXXVII

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

Nymphidius Lupus, Sir, formerly a chief centurion, was my comrade in arms; he was prefect at the same time that I was military tribune: and it was from thence my affection for him began. A long acquaintance hath since mutually endeared and strengthened our friendship. For this reason I did violence to his repose, and insisted upon his attending me in Bithynia, as my assessor in council. He most readily granted me this proof of his friendship; and without any regard to the plea of age, or the ease of retirement, he has shared with me the fatigue of business; and upon all occasions is still ready to give me his assistance. I look upon his relations therefore as my own; in which number Nymphidius Lupus, his son, claims my particular notice. He is a youth of great merit and indefatigable application; and in every view of his character, well worthy of so excellent a father. That he is equal to any honour you shall think proper to confer upon him, the early proof he gave of his qualifications will easily convince you; as his conduct as prefect of a cohort gained him the full applause of those most illustrious personages, Julius Ferox, and Fuscus Salinator. And I will add, Sir, that any increase of dignity which he shall receive, will be an occasion of particular congratulation to myself.

castrorum ... usually appointed from the primipilares.”

(Hardy.)
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

LXXXVIII

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Opto, domine, et hunc natalem et plurimos alios quan felicissimos agas aeternaque laude florentem virtutis tuae gloriam et incolumis et fortis aliis super alia operibus augeas.

LXXXIX

Traianus Plinio

Agnosco vota tua, mi Secunde carissime, quibus precaris, ut plurimos et felicissimos natales florente statu rei publicae nostrae agam.

XC

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Sinopenses, domine, aqua deficiuntur; quae videtur et bona et copiosa ab sextodecimo miliario posse perduci. Est tamen statim ab capite paulo amplius mille passibus locus suspectus et mollis, quem ego interim explorari modico impedio iussi, an recipere et sustinere opus possit. Pecunia curantibus nobis contracta non deerit, si tu, domine, hoc genus operis et salubritati et amoenitati valde sitientis coloniae indulseris.
LXXXVIII
To the Emperor Trajan

May this and many succeeding birthdays be attended, Sir, with the highest felicity to you; and may you, in the midst of an uninterrupted course of health and prosperity, be still adding to the increase of that immortal glory which your virtues justly merit.

LXXXIX
Trajan to Pliny

Your wishes, my dear Pliny, for my enjoyment of many happy birthdays amidst the glory and prosperity of the republic, were extremely agreeable to me.

XC
To the Emperor Trajan

The city of Sinope is ill supplied, Sir, with water, which, however, may be brought thither from about sixteen miles' distance in great plenty and perfection. The ground indeed, near the source of this spring, is for something more than a mile of a very suspicious and marshy nature; but I have directed an examination to be made (which will be done at a small expense) whether it is capable of bearing any superstructure. I have taken care to provide a sufficient fund for this purpose, if you shall approve, Sir, of a work so conducite to the health and amenity of this colony, greatly distressed by a scarcity of water.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XCI

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Ut coepisti, Secunde carissime, explora diligenter, an locus ille, quem suspectum habes, sustinere opus aquae ductus possit. Neque enim dubitandum puto, quin aqua perducenda sit in coloniam Sinopensem, si modo et viribus suis ipsa id adsequi potest, cum plurimum ea res et salubritati et voluptati eius collatura sit.

XCII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Amisenorum civitas et libera et foederata beneficio indulgentiae tuae legibus suis utitur. In hac datum mihi publice libellum ad eranos pertinentem his litteris subieci, ut tu, domine, dispiceres, quid et quatenus aut permittendum aut prohibendum putares.

XCIII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Amisenos, quorum libellum epistulae tuae iunxeras, si legibus istorum, quibus de officio foederis utuntur, concessum est eranum habere, possimus, quo minus habeant, non impedire, eo facilius, si tali collatione, non ad turbas et illicitos coetus, sed ad sustinendam tenuiorum inopiam utuntur. In ceteris civitatibus, quae nostro iure obstrictae sunt, res huius modi prohibenda est.

396
BOOK X. xci.–xciii

XCI

TRAJAN TO PLINY

I would have you proceed, my dear Pliny, in carefully examining, whether the ground you suspect is firm enough to support an aqueduct. For I have no manner of doubt that it is proper the city of Sinope should be supplied with water; provided their finances will bear the expense of a work so conducive to their health and pleasure.

XCII

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

The free and confederate a city of Amisus enjoys, by your indulgence, the privilege of its own laws. A memorial being presented to me there concerning mutual benefit societies, I have enclosed it in this letter that you may consider, Sir, whether, and how far, these meetings are to be permitted or prohibited.

XCIII

TRAJAN TO PLINY

If a benefit society be agreeable to the laws of the Amisenians, which they enjoy under the terms of the treaty, we cannot oppose it; especially if these contributions are employed, not for the purposes of riot and faction, but for the support of the indigent. In other cities, however, which are subject to our laws, I would have all societies of this nature prohibited.

a civitas foederata was one whose autonomy was secured to it by formal treaty.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XCIV

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Suetonium Tranquillum, probissimum, honestissimum, eruditissimum virum, et mores eius secutus et studia iampridem, domine, in contubernium assumpsi, tantoque magis diligere coepi, quanto hunc propius inspexi. Huic ius trium liberorum necessarum faciunt duae causae; nam et iudicia amicorum promeretur et parum felix matrimonium expertus est impetrandumque a bonitate tua per nos habet, quod illi fortunae malignitas denegavit. Scio, domine, quantum beneficium petam, sed peto a te, cujus in omnibus desideriis meis plenissimam indulgentiam experior. Potes autem colligere, quanto opere cupiam, quod non rogarem absens, si mediocriter cuperem.

XCV

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Quam parce haec beneficia tribuam, utique, mi Secunde carissime, haeret tibi, cum etiam in senatu

a ii. 13, note.
BOOK X. xciv.–xcv

XCIV

To the Emperor Trajan

Suetonius Tranquillus, Sir, is a person of great merit and learning, as well as of noble birth. I was so much pleased with his turn and manners, that I long since made him one of my intimates; and my affection for him still increased the more I discovered of his character. Two reasons concur to make the privilege which the law grants to those who have three children, extremely necessary to him; he is legatee to several of his friends, and has had ill success in his marriage. Those advantages therefore which nature has denied to him, he hopes to obtain from your goodness, by means of my intercession. I am thoroughly sensible, Sir, of the value of the favour I am asking; but I know I am making this request to one whose gracious compliance with all my desires I have amply experienced. How passionately I wish to obtain this favour, you will judge by my thus requesting it in my absence, which I should not have done, had it been a point wherein I am only commonly solicitous.

XCV

Trajan to Pliny

You cannot but know, my dear Pliny, how reserved I am in granting favours of this kind, having frequently declared in the senate, that I had not ex-

b By the Lex Papia Poppaea (vii. 16, note) childless persons forfeited one half of every legacy they received.
adfirmare soleam non excessisse me numerum, quem apud amplissimum ordinem suffecturum mihi professus sum. Tuo tamen desiderio subscripsi et dedisse me ius trium liberorum Suetonio Tranquillo ea condicione, qua adsuevi, referri in commentarios meos iussi.

---

XCVI

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Solemne est mihi, domine, omnia, de quibus dubito, ad te referre. Quis enim potest melius vel cunctationem meam regere, vel ignorantiam instruere? Cognitionibus de Christianis interfui numquam. Ideo nescio, quid et quatenus aut puniri soleat, aut quaeri. Nec mediocriter haesitavi, sitne aliquod discriminem aetatum, an quamlibet teneri nihil a robustioribus differant, detur paenitentiae venia, an ei, qui omnino Christianus fuit, desisse non prosit, nomen ipsum, etiamsi flagitiis careat, an flagitia cohaerentia nomini puniantur.

Interim in iis, qui ad me tamquam Christiani deferebantur, hunc sum secutus modum. Interrogavi ipsos, an essent Christiani. Confitentes iterum ac tertio interrogavi supplicium minatus. Perseverantes duci iussi. Neque enim dubitabam, qualecunque, esset, quod faterentur, pertinaciam certe et 400 ceeded the number which I assured that illustrious order I would be contented with. I have yielded, however, to your request; and have directed an article to be inserted in my register, that I have conferred upon Tranquillus, on my usual conditions, the privilege which the law grants to those who have three children.

XCVI

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

It is a rule, Sir, which I inviolably observe, to refer myself to you in all my doubts; for who is more capable of guiding my uncertainty or informing my ignorance? Having never been present at any trials of the Christians, I am unacquainted with the method and limits to be observed either in examining or punishing them. Whether any difference is to be made on account of age, or no distinction allowed between the youngest and the adult; whether repentance admits to a pardon, or if a man has been once a Christian it avails him nothing to recant; whether the mere profession of Christianity, albeit without crimes, or only the crimes associated therewith are punishable—in all these points I am greatly doubtful.

In the meanwhile, the method I have observed towards those who have been denounced to me as Christians is this: I interrogated them whether they were Christians; if they confessed it I repeated the question twice again, adding the threat of capital punishment; if they still persevered, I ordered them to be executed. For whatever the nature of their creed might be, I could at least feel no doubt that inflexibilem obstinationem debere puniri. Fuerunt alii similis amentiae; quos, quia cives Romani erant, adnotavi in urbem remittendos.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

Mox ipso tractatu, ut fieri solet, diffundente se crimine plures species inciderunt. Propositus est libellus sine auctore multorum nomina continens. Qui negabant se esse Christianos aut fuisset, cum praeeunte me deos appellarent, et imagini tuae, quam propter hoc iusseram cum simulacris numinum adferri, ture ac vino supplicarent, praeterea maledicerent Christo, quorum nihil posse cogi dicuntur, qui sunt re vera Christiani, dimittendos esse putavi. Alii ab indice nominati esse se Christianos dixerunt et mox negaverunt; fuisset quidem, sed desiisse, quidam ante triennium, quidam ante plures annos, non nemo etiam ante viginti quinque.\(^1\) Omnes et imaginem tuam deorumque simulacra venerati sunt: et Christo maledixerunt.

Adfirmabant autem hanc fuisset summam vel culpae suae vel erroris, quod essent soliti stato die ante lucem convenire carmenque Christo quasi deo dicere secum invicem seque sacramento non in scelus aliquod obstringere, sed ne furta, ne latrocinia, ne adulteria committerent, ne fidem fallerent, ne

\(^1\) viginti quinque Rittershusius, quoque a, Av.

---

\(^a\) Except by special delegation of the Emperor's own jurisdiction, no provincial governor had power to inflict the death
contumacy and inflexible obstinacy deserved chastisement. There were others also possessed with the same infatuation, but being citizens of Rome, I directed them to be carried thither.

These accusations spread (as is usually the case) from the mere fact of the matter being investigated and several forms of the mischief came to light. A placard was put up, without any signature, accusing a large number of persons by name. Those who denied they were, or had ever been, Christians, who repeated after me an invocation to the Gods, and offered adoration, with wine and frankincense, to your image, which I had ordered to be brought for that purpose, together with those of the Gods, and who finally cursed Christ—none of which acts, it is said, those who are really Christians can be forced into performing—these I thought it proper to discharge. Others who were named by that informer at first confessed themselves Christians, and then denied it; true, they had been of that persuasion but they had quitted it, some three years, others many years, and a few as much as twenty-five years ago. They all worshipped your statue and the images of the Gods, and cursed Christ.

They affirmed, however, the whole of their guilt, or their error, was, that they were in the habit of meeting on a certain fixed day before it was light, when they sang in alternate verses a hymn to Christ, as to a god, and bound themselves by a solemn oath, not to any wicked deeds, but never to commit any fraud, theft or adultery, never to falsify their word, nor deny a trust when they should be called upon to deliver it up; after which it was their custom to separate, and then reassemble to partake of food—but food of an ordinary and innocent kind. Even this practice, however, they had abandoned after the publication of my edict, by which, according to your orders, I had forbidden political associations. I judged it so much the more necessary to extract the real truth, with the assistance of torture, from two female slaves, who were styled deaconesses: but I could discover nothing more than depraved and excessive superstition.

penalty on a Roman citizen, but must allow him to take his trial at Rome. cf. St. Paul’s “appeal to Caesar,” Acts xxv. 11.

403
depositum appellati abnegarent. Quibus peractis morem sibi discedendi fuisse rursusque coeundi ad capiendum cibum, promiscuum tamen et innoxiu; quod ipsum facere desiisse post edictum meum, quo secundum mandata tua hetaerias esse vetueram. Quo magis necessarium credidi ex duabus ancillis, quae ministrae dicebantur, quid esset veri et per tormenta quae rere. Sed nihil aliud inveni, quam superstitionem pravam, immodicam.

I therefore adjourned the proceedings, and betook myself at once to your counsel. For the matter seemed to me well worth referring to you,—especially considering the numbers endangered. Persons of all ranks and ages, and of both sexes are, and will be, involved in the prosecution. For this contagious superstition is not confined to the cities only, but has spread through the villages and rural districts; it seems possible, however, to check and cure it. ’Tis certain at least that the temples, which had been almost deserted, begin now to be frequented; and the sacred festivals, after a long intermission, are again revived; while there is a general demand for sacrificial animals, which for some time past have met with but few purchasers. From hence it is easy to imagine what multitudes may be reclaimed from this error, if a door be left open to repentance.

Like the medieval Jews, the early Christians were suspected of ritually murdering children, and even of drinking their blood at these “love feasts.”

On hētaeriae see x. 33 note.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

XCVII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Actum quem debuisti, mi Secunde, in excutiendis causis eorum, qui Christiani ad te delati fuerant, secutus es. Neque enim in universum aliquid, quod quasi certam formam habeat, constitui potest. Conquirendi non sunt; si deferantur et arguantur, puniendi sunt, ita tamen, ut, qui negaverit se Christianum esse idque re ipsa manifestum fecerit, id est supplicando diis nostris, quamvis suspicatus in praeteritum fuerit, veniam ex paenitentia impetret. Sine auctore vero propositi libelli nullo crimine locum habere debent. Nam et pessimi exempli, nec nostri saeculi est.

XCVIII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Amastriannorum civitas, domine, et elegans et ornata habet inter praecipua opera pulcherrimam eandemque longissimam plateam; cuius a latere per spatium omne porrigitur nomine quidem flumen, re vera cloaca foedissima; quae sicut turpis et immun-dissima aspectu, ita pestilens est odore taeterrimo. Quibus ex causis non minus salubritatis quam decoris 406
BOOK X. xcvii.–xcviii

XCVII

Trajan to Pliny

The method you have pursued, my dear Pliny, in sifting the cases of those denounced to you as Christians is extremely proper. It is not possible to lay down any general rule which can be applied as the fixed standard in all cases of this nature. No search should be made for these people; when they are denounced and found guilty they must be punished; with the restriction, however, that when the party denies himself to be a Christian, and shall give proof that he is not (that is, by adoring our Gods) he shall be pardoned on the ground of repentance, even though he may have formerly incurred suspicion. Informations without the accuser's name subscribed must not be admitted in evidence against anyone, as it is introducing a very dangerous precedent, and by no means agreeable to the spirit of the age.

XCVIII

To the Emperor Trajan

The elegant and beautiful city of Amastris, Sir, has among other capital buildings a most noble and extensive piazza. On one entire side of this structure runs what is called indeed a river, but in fact is no other than a vile common sewer, extremely offensive to the eye, and at the same time very unwholesome by its noxious smell. It will be advantageous therefore in point of health, as well as interest eam contegi; quod fiet, si permiseris, curantibus nobis, ne desit quoque pecunia operi tam magno, quam necessario.

XCIX

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Rationis est, mi Secunde carissime, contegi aquam istam, quae per civitatem Amastrianorum fluit, si intecta salubritati obest. Pecunia ne huic operi desit, curaturum te secundum diligentiam tuam certum habeo.

C

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Vota, domine, priorum annorum nuncupata alacres laetique persolvimus novaque rursus certante 1 commilitonum et provincialium pietate, suscepimus precati deos, ut te remque publicam florentem et incoluimem ea benignitate servarent, quam super magnas plurimasque virtutes praecipua sanctitate, obsequio, 2 deorum honore meruisti.

1 certante Cellarius, curante a, Av.
2 obsequio Beroaldus, obsequi a, Av.
BOOK X. xcvi.-c

ornament, to have it covered; which shall be done, with your permission: as I will take care, on my part, that money be not wanting for executing so noble and necessary a work.

XCIX

TRAJAN TO PLINY

It is highly reasonable, my dear Pliny, if the water which runs through the city of Amastris is prejudicial to the health of the inhabitants while open, that it should be covered. I am well assured you will, with your usual application, take care that the money necessary for this work shall not be wanting.

C

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

We have paid, Sir, with great joy and alacrity, the vows which we offered up for you the last year; and have again publicly renewed them, the army and provincials vying with each other in demonstrations of loyalty. We implored the Gods to preserve you and the commonwealth in safety and prosperity, with that peculiar favour, which not only your other many and great virtues, but particularly your distinguished piety and reverence of them, deserve.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

CI

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Solvisse vota dis immortalibus te praeeunte pro mea incolumitate commilitones cum provincialibus laetissimo consensu et in futurum nuncupasse libenter, mi Secunde carissime, cognovi litteris tuis.

CII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Diem, quo in te\(^1\) tutela generis humani felicissima successione translata est, debita religione celebravimus commendantes dis imperii tui auctoribus et vota publica et gaudia.

CIII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Diem imperii mei debita laetitia et religione a commilitonibus et provincialibus praeeunte te celebratum libenter, mi Secunde carissime, cognovi litteris tuis.

\(^1\) quo in te B, in quem a.
It was very agreeable to me, my dear Pliny, to learn by your letter, that the army and the provincials seconded you with great joy and unanimity in those vows which you paid and renewed to the immortal Gods for my welfare.

We have celebrated, with all the devotion we ought, the day in which, by a very happy succession, the protection of mankind was transferred to you; commending to the Gods, from whom you received the empire, our public vows and congratulations.

I was extremely well pleased to be informed by your letter, my dear Pliny, that you had, at the head of the soldiers and the provincials, solemnized my accession to the empire, with all due joy and devotion.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

CIV

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Valerius, domine, Paulinus, excepto uno\(^1\) ius Latinorum suorum mihi reliquit; ex quibus rogo tribus interim ius Quiritium des. Vereor enim, ne sit immodicum pro omnibus pariter invocare indulgentiam tuam, qua debeo tanto modestius uti, quanto pleniorem experior. Sunt autem, pro quibus peto, C. Valerius Astraeus, C. Valerius Dionysius, C. Valerius Aper.

CV

Traianus Plinio

Cum honestissime iis, qui apud fidem tuam a Valerio Paulino depositi sunt, consultum velis, matura per me. Iis interim, quibus nunc petisti, dedisse me ius Quiritium referri in commentarios meos iussi idem facturus in ceteris, pro quibus petieris.

\(^1\) excepto uno Bipons; excepto [Paulino] uno a; excepto Paul. Av., Müller.

\(^a\) Lit. “his Latini.” By a law passed 19 A.D., freedmen over thirty years old who were formally manumitted by
CIV

To the Emperor Trajan

Valerius Paulinus, Sir, having left me his right of patronage over all his freedmen, except one, I intreat you to grant full Roman citizenship to three of them. To desire you to extend this favour to them all, would, I fear, be too unreasonable a trespass upon your indulgence; which, as I have amply experienced, I ought to be so much the more cautious in troubling. The persons for whom I make this request are, C. Valerius Astraeus, C. Valerius Dionysius, and C. Valerius Aper.

CV

Trajan to Pliny

As it is very generous of you to consult the interest of those whom Valerius Paulinus has confided to your trust, I cannot but encourage your good intentions. I have meanwhile given full Roman citizenship to those persons for whom you requested it, and have directed the grant to be registered: I am ready to do the same for the rest, whenever you shall desire me.

Roman citizens, became full citizens themselves; failing any one of these three conditions they gained only the partial citizenship known as the “Latin” franchise, and were called Latini Juniani from the title of the law in question (lex Junia Norbana).
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

CVI

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Rogatus, domine, a P. Accio Aquila, centurione cohortis sextae equestris, ut mitterem tibi libellum, per quem indulgentiam pro statu filiae suae implorat, durum putavi negare, cum scirem, quantam soleres militum precibus patientiam humanitatemque praestare.

CVII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Libellum P. Accii Aquilae, centurionis cohortis sextae equestris, quem misisti, legi; cuius precibus motus dedi filiae eius civitatem Romanam. Libellum rescripti, quem illi redderes, misi tibi.

CVIII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Quid habere iuris velis et Bithynas et Ponticas civitates in exigendis pecuniis, quae illis vel ex locationibus vel ex venditionibus aliisve causis debeantur, rogo, domine, rescribas. Ego inveni
CVI

To the Emperor Trajan

P. Accius Aquila, centurion of the sixth equestrian cohort, requested me, Sir, to transmit his petition to you concerning the status of his daughter. I thought it would be unkind to refuse him this good office, knowing, as I do, with what patience and humanity you receive the petitions of the soldiers.

CVII

Trajan to Pliny

I have read the petition of P. Accius Aquila, centurion of the sixth equestrian cohort, which you sent to me; and in compliance with his request, I have given his daughter the freedom of the city of Rome. I send you at the same time the patent, which you will deliver to him.

CVIII

To the Emperor Trajan

I beg, Sir, you would inform me what rights you wish assigned to the cities of Bithynia and Pontus with regard to recovering their debts, either for rent, or goods sold, or upon any other consideration. I a Accius was an alien who had received Roman citizenship, but under conditions which left his daughter an alien. See Hardy’s note.

a plerisque proconsulibus concessam eis protopraxian, eamque pro lege valuisse. Existimo tamen tua providentia constituendum aliquid et sanciendum, per quod utilitatis eorum in perpetuum consulatur. Nam, quae sunt ab aliis instituta, sint licet sapienter indulta, brevia tamen et insirma sunt, nisi illis tua contingat auctoritas.

CIX

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Quo iure uti debeant Bithynae vel Ponticae civitates in iis pecuniis, quae ex quaque causa rei publicae debebuntur, ex lege ciusque animadverterendum est. Nam, sive habent privilegium, quo ceteris creditoribus anteponantur, custodiendum est, sive non habent, in iniuriam privatorum id dari a me non oportebit.

CX

C. PLINIUS TRAJANO IMPERATORI

Ecdicus, domine, Amisenorum civitatis petebat apud me a Iulio Pisoni denariorum circiter xl milia donata ei publice ante xx annos bule et ecclesia find they have a privilege granted to them by several Proconsuls, of being preferred to other creditors; and this custom has prevailed, as if it had been established by law. Your prudence, I imagine, will think it necessary to enact some settled rule, by which their advantage may always be secured. For the ordinances of others, however wisely conceded, are but feeble and temporary expedients, unless confirmed by your authority.

CIX

Trajan to Pliny

The rule by which the cities either of Pontus or Bithynia are to be governed, in the recovery of debts of whatever kind, due to their several communities, must be determined agreeably to their respective laws. Where any of them enjoy the privilege of being preferred to other creditors, it must be observed; but, where no such privilege prevails, it is not just I should establish one, in prejudice of private property.

CX

To the Emperor Trajan

The solicitor to the treasury\(^a\) of the city of Amisus laid a claim, Sir, before me against Julius Piso of about 40,000 denarii, which were given him by the public above twenty years ago, with the consentiente utebaturque mandatis tuis, quibus eius modi donationes vetantur. Piso contra plurima se in rempublicam contulisse ac prope totas facultates erogasse dicebat. Addebat etiam temporis spatium postulabatque, ne id, quod pro multis et olim accepisset, cum eversione reliquae dignitatis reddere cogeretur. Quibus ex causis integrum cognitionem differendam existimavi, ut te, domine, consulerem, quid sequendum putares.

\(^a\) "The ecdicus was a public prosecutor in financial matters. We only know of the title in connection with Asia Minor." (Hardy.)

CXI

Traianus Plinio

Sicut largitiones ex publico fieri mandata prohibent, ita, ne multorum securitas subruatur, factas ante aliquantum temporis retractari atque in irritum vindicari non oportet. Quidquid ergo ex hac causa actum ante viginti annos erit, omittamus. Non minus enim hominibus ciusque loci, quam pecuniae publicae consultum volo.
consent of the general council and assembly of the city; and he founded his demand upon certain of your edicts by which donations of this kind are prohibited. Piso, on the other hand, asserted that he had conferred large sums of money upon the community, and, indeed, had expended that way almost his whole estate. He insisted upon the length of time which had intervened since this donation, and hoped that he should not be compelled, to the ruin of the remainder of his fortunes, to re-fund a sum, which had been granted him long since, in return for many good offices he had done to the city. For this reason, Sir, I thought it necessary to suspend giving any judgement in this cause, till I shall receive your directions.

CXL

Trajan to Pliny

Though by my edicts I have ordained, that no largesses shall be given out of the public money; yet, that numberless private persons may not be disturbed in the secure possession of their fortunes, those donations which have been made long since, ought not to be called in question or revoked. We will not, therefore, inquire into any thing that has been transacted in this affair so long ago as twenty years; for I would be no less attentive to secure the repose of every private man, than the treasure of every public community.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

CXII

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Lex Pompeia, domine, qua Bithyni et Pontici utuntur, eos, qui in bulen a censoribus leguntur, dare pecuniam non iubet; sed ii, quos indulgentia tua quibusdam civitatibus super legitimum numerum adicere permisit, et singula milia denariorum et bina intulerunt. Anicius deinde Maximus proconsul eos etiam, qui a censoribus legerentur, dumtaxat in paucissimis civitatibus aliud aliis iussit inferre. Superest ergo, ut ipse dispicias, an in omnibus civitatibus certum aliquid omnes, qui deinde buleutae leguntur, debeant pro introitu dare. Nam quod in perpetuum mansurum est, a te constitui decet, cuius factis dictisque debetur aeternitas.

CXIII

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Honorarium decurionatus omnes, qui in quaque civitate Bithyniae decuriones sunt, inferre debeant necne, in universum a me non potest statui. Id ergo quod semper tutissimum est, sequendam cuiusque 420
BOOK X. cxii.—cxiii

CXII

To the Emperor Trajan

The Pompeian law, Sir, which is observed in Pontus and Bithynia, does not direct that any money should be given by those who are elected into the public council by the Censors. It has however been usual for such members as have been admitted into those assemblies, in pursuance of the privilege which you were pleased to grant to some particular cities, of receiving above their legal number, to pay one or two thousand denarii. Subsequent to this, the Proconsul Anicius Maximus ordained (though indeed his edict extended to some few cities only) that those who were elected by the Censors should also pay into the treasury a certain sum, which varied in different places. It remains, therefore, for your consideration whether it would not be proper for all the cities to settle a certain sum for each member, who is elected into the council, to pay upon his entrance; for it well becomes you, whose every word and action deserves immortality, to give laws that shall for ever be permanent.

CXIII

Trajan to Pliny

I can give no general directions applicable to all the cities of Bithynia, whether those who are made members of their respective councils shall pay an honorary fee upon their admittance, or not. It seems best therefore, in this case (what indeed upon civitatis legem puto; scilicet adversus eos, qui inviti fiunt decuriones, id existimo acturos, ut erogatio ceteris praefatur.

CXIV

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Lege, domine, Pompeia, permissum Bithynicis civitatibus adscribere sibi, quos vellent, cives, dum ne quem earum civitatum¹ quae sunt in Bithynia. Eadem lege sancitur, quibus de causis e senatu censoribus eiciantur. Inde me quidam ex censoribus consulendum putaverunt, an eicere deberent eum, qui esset alterius civitatis. Ego, quia lex sicut adscribi civem alienum vetabat, ita eici e senatu ob hanc causam non iubebat, praeterea quia ab alienius adfirmabatur mihi, in omni civitate plurimos esse buleutas ex aliis civitatibus, futurumque ut multi homines multaeque civitates concuterentur ea parte legis, quae iampridem consensus quodam exolevisset, necessarium existimavi consulere te, quid servandum putares. Capita legis his litteris subieci.

¹ dum ne quem earum civ., B, dum neque merum civ., Ar.

⁴²²

ᵃ lxxix. note.
all occasions is the safest way), to leave each city to its respective laws. But I think, however, that the Censors ought to set the sum lower to those who are chosen into the senate contrary to their inclinations, than to the rest.

CXIV

To the Emperor Trajan

The Pompeian law, Sir, allows the Bithynians to give the freedom of their respective cities to whatever persons they think proper, provided they do not already belong to any of the cities of this province. The same law specifies the particular causes for which the Censors may expel any member of the senate. Certain of the Censors accordingly have desired my sentiments, whether they ought to expel a member if he should happen to be a citizen of another Bithynian state. But I thought it necessary to receive your instructions in this case; not only because the law, though it forbids such persons to be admitted citizens, does not direct a senator to be expelled for the same reason, but because I am informed that there are in every city several members of their senate who are in these circumstances. If therefore this clause of the law, which seems to be antiquated by a long custom to the contrary, should be enforced, many cities, as well as private persons, will be thrown into great confusion. I have subjoined the heads of this law to my letter.

The rule that a man could not be citizen of more than one city was often contravened in practice, and difficulties and confusion necessarily resulted.
THE LETTERS OF PLINY

CXV

TRAIANUS PLINIO

Merito haesisti, Secunde carissime, quid a te responderi oportet censoribus consulentibus, an legerent in senatum alienum civitatem, eiusdem tamen provinciae cives. Nam et legis auctoritas et longa consuetudo usurpata contra legem in diversum movere te potuit. Mihi hoc temperamentum eius placuit, ut ex praeterito nihil novaremus, sed manerent quamvis contra legem adsciti quorundamque civitatem cives, in futurum autem lex Pompeia observaretur; cuius vim si retro quoque velimus custodire, multa necesse est perturbari.

CXVI

C. PLINIUS TRAIANO IMPERATORI

Qui virilem togam sumunt vel nuptias faciunt vel ineunt magistratum vel opus publicum dedicant, solent totam bulen atque etiam e plebe non exiguum numerum vocare binosque denarios vel singulos dare. Quod an celebrandum et quatenus putes, rogo scribas. Ipse enim sicut arbitror, praeberim ex
BOOK X. cxv.—cxvi

CXV

TRAJAN TO PLINY

You might very reasonably, my dear Pliny, be doubtful what decision to give to the inquiry of the Censors; whether they might elect into the senate citizens of other cities though of the same province? The authority of law on one side, and long custom prevailing against it on the other, might well throw you into a state of suspense. The proper mean to observe in this case, will be, to make no change in what is past, but to suffer those senators who are already elected, though contrary to law, to keep their seats, to whatever city they may belong; in all future elections, however, to pursue the directions of the Pompeian law: for to extend its influence backwards, must necessarily introduce great confusion.

CXVI

TO THE EMPEROR TRAJAN

It is customary here upon any person's taking the manly robe, a solemnizing his marriage, entering upon the office of a magistrate, or dedicating any public work, to invite the whole senate, together with a considerable part of the commonalty, and distribute to each of the company one or two denarii. I beg you would inform me, whether you think proper this ceremony should be observed, and if so, within what limits. For myself, though I am of opinion that a i. 9, note.

solemnibus causis, concedendas iussisti invitationes,\(^1\) ita vereor, ne ii, qui mille homines, interdum etiam plures vocant, modum excedere et in speciem dianomes incidere videantur.

CXVII

Traianus Plinio

Merito vereris, ne in speciem dianomes incidat invitatio, quae et in numero modum excedit et quasi per corpora, non viritim singulos ex notitia ad solemnes sportulas contrahit. Sed ego ideo prudentiam tuam elegi, ut formandis istius provinciae moribus ipse moderareris et ea constituas, quae ad perpetuam eius provinciae quietem essent profutura.

CXVIII

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Athletae, domine, ea, quae pro iselasticis certaminibus constituisti, deberi sibi putant statim ex

\(^1\) concedendas iussisti invitationem Hardy, concedendum iussisti B, Budaeus, concedendum iussi invit. a, concedendas esse invit. Orelli.

\(^a\) dianome (Gr. διανομή, "distribution") here means "distribution of bribes," such as was made by candidates through their agents.

\(^b\) Iselastic (Gr. εἰσελαστικός, "of entry") games were those which entitled the victors to make a triumphal entry into 426 upon some occasions, especially those of public festivals, this kind of invitations may be permitted; yet when they are carried so far as to draw together a thousand persons and sometimes more, it is going, I fear, beyond a reasonable number, and has something the appearance of ambitious largesses.a

CXVII

Trajan to Pliny

It is with justice you apprehend, that these public invitations, which extend to an unreasonable number of people, and where the dole is distributed, not singly to a few acquaintances, but as it were to whole collective bodies, may be turned to turbulent purposes of ambition. But I made choice of your prudence, expressly that you might take your own measures for regulating the manner and settling the peace of this province.

CXVIII

To the Emperor Trajan

The Athletic victors, Sir, in the iselastic games,b think they ought to receive the pension you have established for the conquerors at those combats from their native city, in a chariot of state, which was driven through a breach in the walls made for the occasion. These honours were originally confined to victors at the four great Hellenic games (the Olympia, Pythia, Isthmia, Nemea); but in Imperial times it appears that any games could become, or cease to be, iselastic at the Emperor's pleasure. Iselastic victors had always received a pension, or free maintenance, for life from their cities; Trajan had increased these (probably daily) allowances. (Hardy.) eo die, quo sunt coronati; nihil enim referre, quando sint patriam invecti, sed quando certamine vicerint, ex quo invehii possint. Ego contrascribo 1 'iselastici nomine' ita ut 2 vehemeni ter addubitem, an sit potius id tempus, quo εἰσήλασαν, intuendum. Iidem obsonia petunt pro eo agone, qui a te iselasticus factus est, quamvis vicerint, ante quam fieret. Aiunt enim congruens esse, sicut non detur sibi pro iis certaminibus, quae esse iselastica, postquam vicerunt, desierunt, ita pro iis dari, quae esse coeperunt. Hic quoque non mediocrer haereo, ne cuiusquam retro habeatur ratio, dandumque, quod tunc, cum vincernet, non debebatur. Rogo ergo, ut dubitationem meam regere, id est beneficia tua interpretari, ipse digneris.

CXIX

TRAIANUS PLINIO

ISELASTICUM tunc primum mihi videtur incipere deberi, cum quis in civitatem suam ipse εἰσήλασαν. Obsonia eorum certaminum, quae iselastica esse placuit mihi, si ante iselastica non fuerunt, retro non

1 Ego contrascribo 'iselastici nomine' Orelli, ex a, Av., Ego contra scribo is. nom.
2 ita ut Beroaldus, itaque eorum a, Av.

428
the day they are crowned: for it is not at all material, they say, when they may be triumphantly conducted into their city, but when they merit that honour by their conquest. I habitually countersign the drafts for payment with the words "under the head of iselastic money," so that I am strongly inclined to believe that the time of their public entry is to be alone considered. They likewise petition to be allowed the pension you give at those combats which you have made iselastic, though they were conquerors before that establishment took place: for it is but reasonable, they assert, that they should receive their rewards in this case, as they are deprived of them at those games which have been divested of the honour of being iselastic, since their victories. But I am extremely doubtful, whether a retrospect should be admitted in this case, and a reward given to which they had no right at the time they gained the victory. I beg therefore you would be pleased to direct my judgement in these points, by explaining the intention of your own benefactions.

CXIX

TRAJAN TO PLINY

The reward proposed to the conqueror in the iselastic games, is not, I think due till he makes his public entry into his city. Nor at those combats which I have thought proper to make iselastic, ought pensions to be extended backwards to those debentur. Nec proficere pro desiderio athletarum potest quod eorum quae postea iselastica non esse constitui, quam vicerant\(^1\) accipere desierunt. Mutata enim condicione certaminum nihilo minus, quae ante perceiverant, non revocantur.

CXX

C. Plinius Traiano Imperatori

Usque in hoc tempus, domine, neque cuiquam diplomata commodavi neque in rem ullam nisi tuam misi. Quam perpetuam servationem meam quaedam necessitas rupit. Uxorí enim meae audita morte avi volenti ad amitam suam excurrere usum eorum negare durum putavi, cum talis officii gratia in celeritate consisteret, sciremque te rationem itineris probaturum, cuius causa erat pietas. Haec scripsi, quia mihi parum gratus tibi fore videbar, si dissimulassem inter alia beneficia hoc unum me debere indulgentiae tuae, quod fiducia eius quasi consulta te non dubitavi facere, quem si consuluissem, sero fecissem.

\(^1\) quod eorum quae postea iselastica non esse constitui, quam vicerant Schaefer, quid eorum q. p. is. non lege const., quam qui ierant a.

43°
who conquered there before that alteration took place. Nor is it a point in their favour that they have ceased to receive the emolument for those games which subsequent to their victories I have ordained are not to be iselastic; since, notwithstanding any change which has been made relating to these games, they are not called upon to return the recompense which they received prior to such alteration.

CXX

To the Emperor Trajan

I have never, Sir, accommodated any person with an order for post chaises, or dispatched a courier provided with one, except upon your affairs. I find myself however at present under a sort of necessity of breaking through this fixed rule. My wife having received an account of her grandfather’s death, and being desirous to wait upon her aunt with all possible expedition, I thought it would be unkind to deny her the use of this privilege; as the grace of so tender an office consists in the early discharge of it, and as I well knew a journey which was founded in filial piety, could not fail of your approbation. I have informed you of this, as I should think myself highly ungrateful, were I to dissemble, that among other great obligations which I owe to your indulgence, I have this in particular, that in confidence of your favour I have ventured to do without consulting you, what would have been too late had I waited for your consent.

a x. 45.      b Fabatus.      c Hispulla.
Merito habuisti, Secunde carissime, fiduciam animi mei. Nec dubitandum fuisset, si exspectasses, donec me consuleres, an iter uxoris tuae diplomatis, quae officio tuo dedi, adiuvandum esset, usum eorum intentioni non profuisse, cum apud amitam suam uxor tua deberet etiam celeritate gratiam adventus sui augere.
You did me justice, my dear Pliny, by confiding in my affection towards you. Without doubt, if you had waited for my consent to forward your wife in her journey by means of those warrants which I have intrusted to your care, the use of them would not have answered your purpose; since it was proper this visit to her aunt should have the additional recommendation, of being paid with all possible expedition.
BIографical Index

of Notable Persons Addressed or Mentioned
By Pliny

Arria the Elder (III. 16; VI. 24), wife to Caecina Paetus, crowned an heroic life by showing her condemned husband how to die, A.D. 42 (see III. 16, note). Her daughter, Arria the Younger (III. 11, 16; VII. 19; IX. 13), was already married to Thrasea Paetus at the time of her mother’s death, which she wished to emulate twenty-four years later, when Thrasea was condemned for treason to Nero (66 A.D.). But he persuaded her to live for the sake of their daughter Fannia (q.v.). Banished by Domitian, Arria returned with the other political exiles on Nerva’s accession (96 A.D.). Her death occurred some time before that of Fannia (VII. 19), but the date is unknown.

Arulenus Rusticus, L. Junius (I. 5, 14; III. 11; V. 1; IX. 29), first showed his fiery spirit when as a young man flagrans iuvenis cupidine laudis, Tacitus, Ann. XVI. 26), being tribune of the plebs, he would have vetoed the Senate’s condemnation of Thrasea Paetus, but for Thrasea’s earnest representation that he would only throw away his own life by ineffectually interposing (66 A.D.). Praetor under Vitellius in 69 A.D., he was among the envoys sent by the Senate to meet Vespasian’s troops; and was wounded by them while un成功fully making overtures for peace (I. 5; Tac. Hist. III. 80). Quiescent under Vespasian and Titus, he could not brook in silence the tyranny of Domitian; he published a panegyric upon Thrasea Paetus and Helvidius Priscus which led to his execution for treason, 93 A.D. His book was publicly burned by order of the Senate (scilicet illo igne vocem populi Romani et libertatem senatus et conscientiam generis humani aboleri arbitrabantur, Tac. Agric. 2). Rusticus was doubly suspect as a disciple of Stoicism, which was supposed to foster revolutionary principles; and Suetonius (Dom. 10) connects his condemnation with Domitian’s expulsion of all philosophers from Rome.

Cornutus Tertullus, C. Julius (II. 11, 12; IV. 17; V. 14; VII. 21, 31; IX. 13), Pliny’s colleague in the prefecture of the treasury and in the consulship, was his senior by about twenty years. Pliny loved and revered him, and their official relations were the happiest possible (V. 14). Cornutus was given the curatorship of the Aemilian Way while Pliny was holding that of the Tiber (V. 14); later he successively governed four provinces, the second being Bithynia, where he apparently succeeded Pliny on the latter’s death.

Pliny II.

FF2
DOMITIUS AFER (II. 14; VIII. 18), the teacher of Quintilian, who pronounces him the foremost orator of his time, was a native of Nemausus (Nîmes). Under Tiberius, he misused his great gifts by prosecuting persons obnoxious to the Emperor (Tacitus, Ann. IV. 52, 56; XIV. 19; Dial. de Orat. 13, 15). He died at a great age in 59 a.d.

EUPHRATES (I. 10), a Stoic philosopher, native of Alexandria, taught first at Tyre, afterwards for many years at Rome, whither he came in Vespasian’s retinue. Conformably to Stoic principles, he committed suicide when oppressed by age and infirmity (118 a.d.).

FANNIA (III. 11, 16; VII. 19; IX. 13), granddaughter of Caecina Paetus and Arria the Elder, daughter of Thrasea Paetus and Arria the Younger, was married 52 a.d. to Helvidius Priscus (q.v.). She twice followed her husband into exile; and was herself banished (93 a.d.) by Domitian, along with her mother, whom she vainly sought to exculpate, for being accessory to Senecio in producing a laudatory memoir of Helvidius. Returning to Rome on Domitian's death, Fannia was called on by Pliny to join in his attempt to avenge her stepson, the younger Helvidius (q.v.). The letter (VII. 19) in which Pliny laments her death as imminent was probably written in 107 a.d., when she must have been at least seventy.

FESTUS, VALERIUS (III. 7), commanded the troops in Africa under the proconsul Piso. After vainly endeavouring to make Piso take up arms for Vitellius against Vespasian, Festus went over to the latter’s side when he saw it was the winning one, and carried out the order of Vespasian’s lieutenant by sending a party of soldiers to kill Piso. The treachery of Festus was rewarded with a series of honours (including the consulship in 71 a.d.) bestowed on him by Vespasian and by Titus.

HELVIDIUS PRISCUS (VII. 19), son-in-law to Thrasea Paetus, was banished by Nero in the year of Thrasea’s execution (66 a.d.), and again by Vespasian, who finally put him to death in exile. It was for publishing encomiums upon him as a champion of Liberty that Arulenus Rusticus and Herennius Senecio were condemned to death. Fannia (q.v.), the daughter of Thrasea, was his second wife; by a former marriage he left a son—

HERENNII SENECIO (I. 5; III. 11; IV. 7, 11; VII. 19, 33), an eminent advocate, was counsel for Licinius (IV. 11) in 90 a.d., and, conjointly with Pliny, for his native province of Baetica in the trial of Baebius Massa (VII. 19), 93 a.d. In the same year he was put to death on a charge of treason brought by Mettius Carus; his crime consisted in having, like Rusticus, published a laudatory memoir of Helvidius Priscus (see FANNIA).

JULIUS FRONTIVUS, SEX. (IV. 8; V. 1; IX. 19), one of the most eminent men of his time, was born not later than 40 a.d. and died circ. 103 a.d., when Pliny succeeded him in the College of Augurs. Among other high offices, he held the Proconsulship of Britain in 76-78 A.D.; his conduct in this arduous post is praised by Tacitus (Agric. 17). His treatise on Strategy, another on the aqueducts of Rome, and fragments of a third on field surveying, are still extant.

LICINIUS SURA (iv. 30; vii. 27), a native of Spain, became the trusted friend and counsellor of Trajan, whom Nerva is said to have adopted partly on Sura's advice. The success of Trajan's Dacian campaigns was largely owing to his services as chief of the staff, which the Emperor repaid with many high honours. Hadrian, who was Sura's quaestor during those campaigns, gained Trajan's favour through his influence; so that Sura may be said to have made two emperors. Trajan erected a statue to him after his death.

MAURICUS, JUNIUS (i. 5, 14; ii. 18; iii. 11; iv. 22; vi. 14), was brother to Arulenus Rusticus, and exiled in the year of his execution (93 A.D.). Recalled by Nerva, he was persona grata with that Emperor and with Trajan; but no more is known of his later life. He showed the bold, uncompromising character, which Pliny illustrates by two anecdotes (iv. 22), at an early age; first by reproving public lawlessness under Galba (Plutarch, Galba 8), and again, on Vespasian's accession, by seeking to prosecute the informers of Nero's time. Pliny addresses three letters (i. 14; ii. 18; vi. 14) to Mauricus, who evidently treated him as a valued friend of the family.

METTIUS CARUS (i. 5; vii. 19, 27), pilloried for ever as the typical informer by Tacitus, Martial and Juvenal, is said by the scholiast on the last-named to have been a dwarf, and a favourite freedman of Nero. Herennius Senece was one of his victims under Domitian; Pliny might have been another, but for the tyrant's death (vii. 27). His end is unknown; the statement of the scholiast on Juvenal that he was himself informed against, and put to death, being invalidated by a manifest anachronism. One hopes it is so far true, that Carus did finally pay the just penalty of his crimes.

PISO, L. CALPURNIUS (iii. 7), consul with Nero 57 A.D., was proconsul of Africa when killed there by his subordinate, Vellius Festus, 70 A.D. (see Festus). His father ("L. Piso," iii. 7), consul 27 A.D., had likewise been proconsul of Africa; his grandfather was Cn. Calp. Piso, the enemy and alleged murderer of Germanicus.

PISO (L. Calp. Piso Liciniianus) (ii. 20), was adopted as heir by Galba on his accession, and murdered with him five days afterwards (Jan. 15, 69 A.D.). His wife, Verania, the lady pestered by Regulus (ii. 29) bought her husband's head from the assassins.

PLINIUS SECUNDUS, C., THE ELDER (i. 19; iii. 5; v. 8; vi. 16), our Pliny's uncle and adoptive father (see Introd.), was born in the middle of the reign of Tiberius and perished, a martyr to scientific curiosity, in the great eruption of Vesuvius, August 79 A.D. (vi. 16). Though his life was passed in active civil and military service in almost every province of the empire, he was the most learned man and prolific writer of his day. His voluminous works (iii. 5) are lost, with the exception of his Natural History in thirty-seven books—"a priceless storehouse of information on every branch of natural science as known to the ancient world” (Mackail).

POMPBIUS FALCO, Q. (I. 23; IV. 27; VII. 22; IX. 15), son-in-law to Q. Sosius Senecio, had a distinguished official career under Trajan, Hadrian, and Antoninus. Plus, holding several of the most important provincial governorships besides other high positions.

QUINTILIANUS (M. FABIUS) (II. 14; VI. 6, 32), was born at Calagurris, a small town of Hispa tania Tarraconensis, where he taught rhetoric after studying it at Rome under Domitius Afer, and became known to Galba, then proconsul of that province. On Galba being declared Emperor (68 A.D.), Quintilian accompanied him to Rome, and was made a public teacher of rhetoric, an appointment which he held for about twenty years of fame and prosperity. He died, apparently, either shortly before, or not long after, Domitius, who made him tutor to his two grand-nephews, and gave him consular rank. His great work, the Instituto Oratoria, appeared about 93 A.D. and “at once became the final and standard treatise on the theory and practice of Latin oratory” (Mackail).

REGULUS, M. AQUILIUS (I. 5, 20; II. 11, 20; IV. 2, 7; VI. 2), became notorious as an informer in the two last years of Nero, when the consulars M. Licinius Crassus Frugi and Q. Sulpicius Camerinus Peticus were executed on charges brought by him. According to Pliny (I. 5) he played an equally infamous part, though more covertly, under Domitian; but his having virulently attacked the memory of Rusticus and Senecio seems to have been the head and front of his offending. Pliny’s contemplated prosecution of him after Domitian’s death was not carried out, whether owing to Nerva’s policy of letting bygones be bygones, or because Pliny’s adviser (I. 5) saw that the case against Regulus would not really hold water. Notwithstanding Pliny’s ridicule, he makes it clear that Regulus was an able and eloquent advocate. Martial praises his oratory as highly as he does Pliny’s, ranking both with Cicero’s (Epp. IV. 16; v. 28, 63; VI. 64). Regulus died early in Trajan’s reign (VI. 2), not unregretted by his old adversary.

RUSTICUS, see ABULENUS.

SENECIO, HERENNIUS, see HEREN-NIUS.

SENECIO, Q. SOSIUS (I. 13; IV. 4), was twice consul under Trajan, who honoured him with a statue; but his more enduring monument is the dedication to him by Plutarch of the Lives. He was son-in-law to Julius Frontinus and father-in-law to Pomp elius Falco.

SEPTICIUS CLARUS, C. (I. 1, 15; II. 9; VII. 28; VIII. 1), is only memorable as having received the dedication of two famous works. Pliny addressed to him the introductory letter (I. 1) prefixed to the first Book; and while he was Praetorian Prefect under Hadrian, Suetonius dedicated to him his Lives of the Twelve Caesars (120 A.D.). Like Suetonius, who was then Ha-drian’s secretary, Septicius lost his office the following year, and for the same reason (see Suetonius).

Suetonius Tranquillus, C. (I. 18. 24; III. 8; v. 10; IX. 34; x. 94, 95), son of an officer of the Thirteenth Legion, was born not long before 75 A.D. As a young man he practised at the bar and became an intimate friend of Pliny, his senior by some twelve years, whose influence secured him a military tribuneship (III. 8) and the tius trium liberorum (X. 94, 95). Suetonius was later one of Hadrian’s private secretaries, but lost office and Imperial favour in 121 A.D. by falling in respect towards the Empress Sabina, and devoted the last forty years of his life to writing voluminously on grammar, rhetoric, antiquities, and the natural sciences. His works are almost entirely lost with the fortunate exception of his Lives of the Twelve Caesars—a chronique scandaleuse, but also an inestimable mine of personal detail about the early Emperors. The Lives can hardly have been the work referred to by Pliny in v. 10 as long overdue, since they were not published until 120 A.D.

Tacitus, Cornelius (I. 6; II. 1, 11; IV. 13, 15; VI. 9, 16, 20; VII. 20, 33; VIII. 7; IX. 10, 14, 23), of whose family nothing is known, was born early in Nero’s reign, and began his official career, as quæstor, not later than 79 A.D., being then at least twenty-five, and already married to the daughter of Agricola. He was thus some seven years older than Pliny, whose friend and associate he became while both practised at the bar. Praetor under Domitian, 88 A.D., Tacitus rose to the consulship as Nerva’s colleague, 97 A.D. In the following year he published that pearl of biographies, the memoir of Agricola, and the treatise De Origine Situ Moribus ac Populis Germaniae, the first fruits of his genius, with the exception of an early essay on oratory (Dialogus de Oratoribus). Then followed the works that have made him immortal—the Histories and the Annals, presenting the history of the Roman Empire from the death of its founder, Augustus, down to that of Domitian. Allusions to current events in the Annals show that this, his latest work, was published after 115 A.D., and it seems likely that Tacitus did not long survive that date. At least, he did not live to fulfill his expressed intention of recording the happier times of Nerva and Trajan.

Thrasea Paetus, P. Fannius (III. 16; VI. 29; VII. 19; VIII. 22), a native of Padua, husband of the younger Arria, and father of Fannia, took a leading part in public affairs under Claudius, and under Nero until 63 A.D., when he marked his opposition to Nero by withdrawing altogether from the Senate. Three years later he was condemned for treason, and allowed to forestall execution by suicide (see ARRIA and BUSTIUS). Martial (Epp. i. 8) couples Thrasea with Cato as a type of Roman Stoicism.

Verginius Rufus (II. 1; V. 3; VI. 10; IX. 19), Pliny’s guardian and second father, was the Nestor of his time. Born in the first year of Tiberius (14 A.D.) and dying in the second of Nerva (97 A.D.), he saw eleven wearers of the purple, which he prudently refused for himself in the terrible “Year of Four Emperors” (68–69 A.D.). In that year, as Legate of Upper Germany, he crushed the formidable revolt of Julius Vindex, governor of Gallia Lugdunensis, by the decisive battle of Besançon; his victorious army, casting off allegiance to Nero, then vainly urged him to proclaim himself Emperor and lead them into Italy. A few months later, when Galba’s “transient and embarrassed phantom” had followed Nero to the shades, Verginius joined forces with Otho against Vitellius; and when the Vitellians won the day at Betriacum, his beaten and desperate soldiers, after once more importuning him to claim the Empire, actually demanded his death from its new master. But Vitellius, to his credit, took pains to save him (Tacitus, Hist. II. 68). Having weathered these storms, Verginius lived honoured and prosperous under the three Flavian Emperors; if, as Pliny seems to imply (II. 1), he was suspected and disliked by Vespasian and Domitian, neither attempted to molest him. He was thrice consul; firstly in 63 A.D. under Nero; secondly in 69 A.D. under Otho; thirdly in 97 A.D., the year of his death, when Nerva made him his colleague in that office. Pliny is better inspired than usual when he declares (II. 1) that to have his funeral eulogy pronounced by Tacitus set the coping-stone upon the good luck of Verginius.

INDEX SIGLORUM

R (Ricc.) codex Ashburnhamensis R. 98 olim Riccardianus.
F codex S. Marcii 284.
M ,, XLVII. 36 bibliothecae Mediceo-Laurentianae.
D ,, Dresdensis D. 166.
V ,, Vaticanus lat. 3864.
B ,, Bodleianus.
p editio princeps, 1471.
r ,, Romana 1474.
Av. ,, Avantil 1502.
Catan. ,, Catanaei 1506.
a ,, Aldina 1508.
Blp. ,, Bipontina, 1789.
K1 ,, Keili 1853.
K2 ,, ,, 1873.
K = K1 et K2.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>DATE DUE</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>JUN 19 1993</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

FEB - 3 1990

STANFORD UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES
STANFORD, CALIFORNIA 94305